Herbert Thalmann Killed

A telegram came Sunday morning announcing the fatal shooting of Herbert Thalmann at Blue Ridge, Texas. Particulars were not learned, but Fred Thalmann, a brother to the deceased, left immediately for that point to attend to the funeral arrangements. The burial was made at Houston. Herbert Thalmann was born and raised here, and was the son of Mrs. Louise Thalmann. He was an industrious young man and well liked by the people of this county, to whom the news of his death came as a shock. The Houston Chronicle, in mentioning the tragedy, says:

C. H. Thalmann, 30 years old is dead and J. J. Yarborough is at liberty under $1000 bond, following a shooting at Blue Ridge about 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

Thalmann, who was an oil field worker, was brought to Houston in an ambulance of the Weatherford Company and died at St. Joseph's Infirmary at noon. About half an hour before his death he made a statement to a representative of the district attorney.

Yarbrough went to Richmond and gave himself up to Sheriff immediately after the shooting Hazen of Fort Bend County.

Thalmann was shot twice with a shotgun. One of the loads struck him in the left breast and the other in the right arm. His people live near Medina, Texas.

L. D. Bownds, J. W. Wentworth and J. R. Patton good citizens of the Utopia section were in Bandera the latter part of last week.

Ganderbone's Forecast.

Ganderbone, the local prognosticator, paid us a visit one day this week, and when questioned in regard to the weather he was frank to confess that it had him guessing. All his weather predictions for December and January have gone wrong. But he has consolation in the fact that all the other forecasters includin Billie Hart and the Weather Bureau have missed it too. He still holds to the belief that February will be an extremely cold month, and an early spring will come with plenty of moisture. March will be stormy and tornadoes will do lots of damage in Oklahoma and in northwest Texas. He forsees the death of one or two of our pioneer citizens during the next few weeks, but says he does not like to make predictiions of such nature that will bring sadness into homes. He calls attention to one of his predictions he did not miss, wherein a widower of this community married a lady from another town, and says that another wedding is soon to take place that will occasion comment from the fact that the contract ng parties are well known and it is not suspected that either contemplates matrimony at the present time. The event is scheduled for a date in March.

Herbert Thalmann Killed

A telegram came Sunday morning announcing the fatal shooting of Herbert Thalmann at Blue Ridge, Texas. Particulars were not learned, but Fred Thalmann, a brother to the deceased, left immediately for that point to attend to the funeral arrangements. The burial was made at Houston. Herbert Thalmann was born and raised here, and was the son of Mrs. Louise Thalmann. He was an industrious young man and well liked by the people of this county, to whom the news of his death came as a shock. The Houston Chronicle, in mentioning the tragedy, says:

C. H. Thalmann, 30 years old is dead and J. J. Yarborough is at liberty under $1000 bond, following a shooting, at Blue Ridge about 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

Thalmann, who was an oil field worker, was brught to Houston in an ambulance of the Westheimer Company and died at St. Joseph's Infirmary at noon. About half an hour before his death he made a statement to a representative of the district attorney.

Yarbrough went to Richmond and gave himself up to Sheriff immediately after the shooting Hagan of Fort Bend County.

Thalmann was shot twice with a shotgun. One of the loads struck him in the left breast and the other in the right arm. Both people live near Medina, Texas.

L. D. Bownds, J. W. Wentworth and J. R. Patton good citizens of the Utopia section, were in Bandera the latter part of last week.

Ganderbone's Forecast.

Ganderbone, the local prognosticator, paid us a visit one day this week, and when questioned in regard to the weather he was frank to confess that it had him guessing. All his weather predictions for December and January have gone wrong. But he has consolation in the fact that all the other forecasters includin Billie Hart and the Weather Bureau have missed it too. He still holds to the belief that February will be an extremely cold month, and an early spring will come with plenty of moisture. March will be stormy and tornadoes will do lots of damage in Oklahoma and in northwest Texas. He forsees the death of one or two of our pioneer citizens during the next few weeks, but says he does not like to make predictions of such nature that will bring sadness into homes. He calls attention to one of his predictions he did not miss, wherein a widower of this community married a lady from another town, and says that another wedding is soon to take place that will occasion comment from the fact that the contracting parties are well known and it is not suspected that either contemplates matrimony at the present time. The event is scheduled for a date in March.

PIPE CREEK

The box and pie supper given by the mothers and young ladies of Pipe Creek Saturday night was enjoyed by all present and netted $33.32. We wish to thank everyone who assisted and helped to make it a success. The proceeds will be used for the school.

Our school is doing nicely with Miss Edith Rambie as principal and Miss Ruth Walker as assistant. Miss Walker is from Batson. We only regret that the term is too short. We hope to have the co-operation of everyone in the community in the future, to help us have a good school.

The drouth continues, and oats are beginning to look bad. A rain would be very much appreciated.

Matthew Williams and family of Laredo, visited Wesley Crist and family Saturday and attended the pie supper.

Adolph Boehme, of Medina Lake community, attended the pie supper.

The Texas legislature is noted for its freaks. And the present session has 'em too. And now one member of that august body has introduced a bill providing that a man must be a lawyer to be qualified to hold the office of county judge! Oh tempore! Oh mora! Oh hallelujah! The next in order is to pass a law providing that only a newspaper man may hold the office of governor.

In this issue we publish an article from the Kerrville Mountain Sun, anent the Schreiner Institute which is nearing completion in Kerrville. This institution will be a great thing for Kerrville and all of this region. Being located only twenty-five miles from Bandera it will be of untold benefit to Bandera and Bandera county youth. We feel that the Schreiner Institute will be really and truly a home institution.

Bandera has a cemetery association and it is still functioning, notwithstanding most of the members are inactive. A faithful little band of women keep struggling along to do what they can to keep our cemetery in first class shape, but they are handicapped for lack of funds. Why don't you join the association and contribute a few cents yearly for the upkeep of the silent city of the dead? Some day you may be "planted" over there in that city and you will want to be laid away amidst decent surroundings. Help the Cemetery Association when ever you are called upon.

In going from Bandera to Center Point just before you reach the little town on the Guadalupe you pass the Center Point cemetery—a well kept "silent city" for the departed. You see the neat appearance of the walks and drives therein and the ornamental trees and shrubbery about the graves and you mentally note that those Center Point people neglect not their departed loved ones. The stranger or visitor coming from Center Point to Bandera must of necessity pass Bandera's "silent city of the dead" before reaching this town, and sees the apparently neglected condition of the cemetery. What does he think? What would you think? Resolve right now that you will join the cemetery association and help beautify the plot where rests your loved ones in their long, long sleep.

SCHREINER INSTITUTE NEARING COMPLETION

With the interior work on the big dormitory being rushed to completion, the steel and stone work of the handsome administration building rapidly being placed and all of the frame work of the president's cottage finished, the Schreiner Institute is rapidly assuming tangible form, and a visit to the beautifully laid out grounds, with their avenues of graveled streets bordered with shade trees, would bring one to the realization that in the City of Kerrville is being builded a wonderful institution, which will be a lasting monument to its founder, Capt. Chas. Schreiner, and a constant inspiration to the hundreds and thousands of boys who will enroll as students throughout the coming years.

The citizens of Kerrville are showing their appreciation by the fact that numerous parents have decided that their boy or boys would be in attendance at the opening session in September. Mrs. A. C. Schreifer's nephew, Smith Ark. has enrolled as the first student in the school, and has reserved one of the rooms in the well equipped dormitory.

President J. J. Delainey is keeping constant watch on the construction and is also devoting his time to the securing of an unusually high grade faculty to initiate the first year of the Institute's work. Grades from the sixth grammar school work and through the high school course will be offered and in addition a Department of Agronomy, or Agriculture and Animal Husbandry, will be featured, specializing on crops and stock products in Southwest Texas.

Herbert L. Crate of Kerrville has been elected to the position of Registrar and will assume the duties the first of the year. An office has been opened at the Presbyterian Encampment, in Cottage No. 8, and Mr. Crate will be glad to talk to any parent or boy relative to the work of the school, and invites all to welcome at any time to witness the construction of the buildings, and to inspect the plant of the Institute.—Kerrville Mountain Sun.

When the calcium light of publicity began to play upon the motives behind the plans of certain interests to call a constitutional convention to adopt a new state constitution there was a scurrying for cover and the proposition will likely be abandoned. The abolishment of the homestead law was aimed at, and patriotic Texans will not stand for it.

H. G. Johnson complains that the dumping of old tin cans, trash and refuse from back yards continues to be made in the vicinity of his home. This should not be done. Those who haul off trash should take it out of town.

When you have visitors don't forget to ring the New Era and tel us about them. Or better still, write their names on a slip of paper and send in to this office and in this way assist us in keeping the little old home paper up to its present standard.

Notice to Subscribers.

The beautiful granite slabs in St. Joseph's new school building were put in the corner stone Friday. They were designed, manufactured by Mr. Fred Imbel of San Antonio, and donated to the new school building. One of the slabs appears the name "St. Joseph's School, Bandera, Texas, 1922," and on the other the appropriate words "For God and Country." Mr. Gimbel was here to supervise the work of placing the slabs on Friday and his generous donation is gratefully appreciated by the Catholic citizens of the community.

HEEL-FLY TIME IN TEXAS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

It was my intention to follow the Columbus road via Hallettsville in Lavaca county, but a few miles out from Goliad I met a Mexican mule train loaded with cotton and from the "amo" or "boss" I learned that a company of Home guards was stationed at Hallettsville and they allowed no one to pass without a most rigid scrutiny and not wishing to run the risk of another Goliad espsode I changed my route, crossed the Guadalupe below Clinton, the Lavaca at Wallace's Mill, and reached Columbus without further mishap.

When the Civil War had advanced to a certain stage and the Confederate armies had weakened by losses from sickness and desertions in order to recruit the depleted ranks, resort was had to the conscript system which required every able bodied male between the age of 16 and 45—and later the age limit was extended so as to include all under 60 years—to go into the service. There were certain exemptions such as ministers of the gospel actively engaged in their calling, physicians, millers and many others. Also the man who owned or controled twenty negroes capable of doing field labor, were exempt. As a result of these legal exemptions, it has been said that never in all our history had Texas had so many preachers and doctors as during the las two years of the War.

In order to enforce this conscript law effectively, an enrolling officer was stationed in every county and, to assist this officer, a Home Guard was organized in each county. This Home Guard was usually made up of boys under or about 16 years of age, and old men whose age and decrepitude rendered them unfit for the regular service in the army. These guards were expected to assist in the collection of tithes levied by the government on corn, wool, cotton, and other products and above all aid the conscript officer to hunt down and arrest every man subject to military service. They were expected to seek out and catch deserters to do guard duty, police duty and other tasks too numerous to mention. It may be stated that the old men belonging to these companies were nearly always laid up with rheumatism, or other ailments, real or feigned, and were seldom on duty, thus leaving the burden of service to our at these embryo heroes of rustic chivalry. These lads were commanded generally by older men who were from some cause or another, exempt from the regular service, but the subordinate officers from captain down were usually beardless stripplings. In order that home and neighborly ties might not intrude to obstruct their line line of duty, these companies were changed from county to county, the county organized in one county being transfered to another county and visa versa, so that no favors might be shown to those subject to conscription.

These raw-hide soldiers soon became a terror to the people among whom they were thrown. They respected no age nor sex, nor condition. If they purchased an article and the vendor refused the worthless Confederate money, he was denounced as a traitor, an Unionist, the article appropriated and the owner threatened with arrest. Returning soldiers on furlough because of disabling wounds, received in battle, were held up by these arrogant stripplings on the highway, their papers demanded and examined, and if they chanced to be well mounted and carrieed valuable arms, a flaw was found in their papers, these had to be sent Houston or Austin for further scrutiny while the unfortunate soldier who had passed through the carnage of battle at the front had to remain in the guard house until their papers came back—unless willing to part with horses, arms, or a moiety in cash, in the event of which he was allowed to "escape."

These Home Guards were armed with such weapons of destruction as the country could afford. Hunting or squirrel rifles of ancient pattern, single barrel shotguns, pepper box pistols, an occasional Enfield, and six shooters composed the armament. When a returning soldier on a furlough or discharge was found with a six-shooter, it was taken as a forced loan. The owner was informed that he could off duty he had no use for a six-shooter; that they needed it, since they were in active and very dangerous service for their country, and that when he got ready to start back to the army he could have his pistol. Of course he heard no more of his gun.

Such was the high-handed, outrageous conduct of the Home Guards, not only in a few sections but through the state generally that they obtained the sobriquet of "Heel Flies" on account of the similarity of their course to the tortuous proclivities of a pestiferous insect so well known to cattlemen all over Texas. No class of men, or rather strippings in our great state has ever been the recipient of more righteous contempt heaped upon them by patrotic men and women of Texas than these Home Guards, many of whom may be seen today wearing the badge reserved for battle-scarred heroes at ex-Confederate Veterans' Reunions, and it is stated on good autorhity that some are drawing a Confederate Veteran's pension from the state and wear loudest because the stipend is not larger.

At the time of which I write, all the Confederate ports were blockaded by the Federals and down along the Rio Grande afforded the only outlet for cotton. Brownsville, the most important of these, had been held by the Federals during the winter of '63, but these were being withdrawn to engage in the Red River campaign, and Brownsville once more became the great cottonn shipping point, and the highways leading from all points of the state became busy with ox and mule trains laden with cotton for the Rio Grande. Freight rates were high and a vast number of Mexicans, who lived in Mexico engaged in the transportation of the staple from interior points in Texas. Alleyton, three miles east of Columbus, Colorado county was the terminus of the railroad then leading from Harrisburg on Buffalo Bayou below Houston, and thousands of bales were shipped by rail to this point, loaded on wagons, and hauled through Brownsville, a distance of over 300 miles.

As near as I can remember, Columbus at that time was a town of some 400 or 600 inhabitants. It was, as now, situated on the high land of the Colorado in a beautiful plain which extended back to a low range of hills running parallel with the river valley.

The Hallettsville road, by which I approached, having come into that highway a few miles out, descended into this plain about a mile southwest of town and pursued a northeast course. Here and there in this open plain were scattered mott of timber trees, the grass was getting green and several large trains were encamped waiting to be loaded with cotton, as this was a favorite camping place to be found anywhere near Alleyton.

I had no trouble in locating a train encampment whereat to make my headquarters. Hospitality is a leading trait of the Mexican's religion; the stranger is never turned from his gate, and he will divide his last scrap of tortilla and spend his last centavo away for the hungry guest. It was near sundown when I unsaddled at the camp of Senor Ignacio Garcia, the owner of a large mule train waiting for a shipment of cotton from Houston. I received the customary welcome at this train and after supper I took Senor Garcia aside and under strict confidence explained my situation to him all—and then asked permission to stay in his camp a few days and that in case of trouble I hoped he would help me out as an utter stranger he would not become culpably involved. Altho, a citizen of Mexico—his home being near Matamoras—Senor Garcia was also in sympathy with Unionist cause. He cherished a bitter feeling against the Confederates on account of the murder of a nephew the summer before. He said this nephew lived on the Texas side and was conscripted into the army, and while stationed at Brownsville, became violently insane and was placed in the guard house where, during one of his paroxysms, he was bayoneted to death by the guards.

Senor Garcia told me that I was welcome to stay in his camp could stay as long as I desired and that in so far as my in his power he would protect me and render any needed assistance; that while I was an American by birth, yet, I was a Mexican by adoption and this being the case if questioned he could say that I was "un puro Mejicano" a pure Mexican. He also warned me against the Home Guards. He said a company of some forty or fifty men had their headquarters in Columbus and that more or less arrests were being made every day, and that owing to my fair complexion it would be a miracle if I escaped the attention of these Heel Flies. That night I slept well, realizing that I was in the tent of my friends. I learned that Senor Garcia's train had been in camp three days and would probably be there a week longer waiting for the cargo of cotton.

The next morning I joined a troupe of Mexican teamsters and strolled around town. In dress and manner I would have passed anywhere as a Mexican and although considerably bronzed from exposure to sun and wind, I was in a state of uneasiness lest my nationality be discovered by my sharped-eyed countrymen. We passed the quarters, a low frame building, where the Heel Flies were stationed and I took care to count all in sight—twenty-two only, and only five or six of these men appeared to be over twenty-five or thirty years old. The rest were mere boys, swaggering young bullies. We had occasion to pass these quarters several times during the day and I noticed they were closely watched by the gallant soldiers. Late that evening four of them, well mounted, rode into our camp and after riding around the train with eyes alert, halted before a group and asked for the wagon master. The camp cook, who spoke English indifferently and acted as interpreter for the train men was called forward and informed the visitors that Senor Garcia had gone over to Alleyton that afternoon and had not returned. They next asked if all who were in the train were Mexicans, and the cook promptly replied: "Yes, all Mexican; no gotta nobody but Mexican in dees train." Looking straight at me one of them said: "You are not a Mexican!" Assuming an air of the utmost indifference (which required a great effort) I turned to the interpreter with the inquiry "Que dice?" The cook blandly assured them that I was a Mexican and couldn't understand a word of English, after which they turned and rode away greatly to my relief.

The day following we made our usual rounds about town, and visited the only grogshop in the place. They called these dispensaries of liquor "groceries", in those days, and in this particular shop a one-legged man sold for over the bar the most villainous decoction of liquid damnation I ever tasted. A number of the "Heel Flies" were lounging about the place, some of whom were drinking and these were noisy and boastful, and I heard one of him mention the vile stuff the one-legged man was dealing out as "Pine-top Whiskey." It was two-bits a drink, specie, and if ever there was a concoction that would make a rabbit spit in a bull dog's eye, slap his ears, and dare him to mortal combat, that "Pine-top Whiskey" I was certainly the real article.

Near the "grocery" on another street was what I took to be the office of the conscript, or enrolling officer. I have no means of knowing what rank he held, but he was a small man with a red face, pockmarked and sported a big mustache. Every time I passed his office he seemed to be busy. He kept couple of orderlies and there was a small crowd about his office most of the time. To my sorrow I learned more about that office later on.

My horse having become thoroughly rested from the fatigue of my journey on the third day after my arrival, I decided to visit Mrs. Cox and find out something about the roads, and the prospects of getting them out of Mexico, Mr. Cox had given me clear and explicit directions as to how I should proceed from Columbus in order to reach his farm, hence I need make no inquiry even had I been at liberty to do so. During my day's stay in Columbus I had not been idle. I had carefully noted every thing of a military nature worthy of notice. The arms, accoutrements, dress, horses—everything pertaining to these unwarlike young bragadocios—had been studied and I divided that I had not much to fear at their hands, yet I was resolved to maintain the utmost caution and vigilance.

To Give Radio Concerts.

Warren Hunter has perfected plans for installing a powerful radio receiving set in this city, and will shortly begin giving radio concerts. Warren specializes in assembling radio sets, and his success with high frequency and tuning has been very satisfactory and interesting, so much so that a number of our people contemplate installing radio sets in their homes.

L. B. Miller, the veteran drummer, was here a few days last week. Mr. Miller has been "on the road" for more than forty years, and is probably the oldest salesman in point of service with one firm in the state. We remember when he used to come to Mason thirty years ago with his four-horse hack load of sample cases and trunks. Joe Johnson, an old slave-time darkey was his driver, and there was a general jubilee in that town when the pair reached there. Miller with his new stock of fresh yarns and Joe Johnson with his "coon" songs. Lee Miller still gets a hearty welcome wherever he goes, and we are glad to see him still able to get about lively. His faithful driver, Joe Johnson, has long since "hung up the fiddle and the bow" and gone to the "where all good niggers go."

W. L. Fries came in from Winan's Creek yesterday and while in the city he called at our sanctum, accompanied by his little daughter, Arbinita, and renewed his subscription to the little old home paper.

Mrs. Dirk Lane entertained Monica and Clotilda Valles visited Boerne.

Mrs. W. M. Pingleton and children were in from their Indian Creek farm Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Harwood, who live below Pipe Creek, were in the city Saturday and paid the News Era office an appreciated. Mr. Harwood advanced his subscription figures to the little old home paper, and while in this office they were shown how the linotype does its work.

W. W. Coughran has been seriously ill this week, and his condition has reached the alarming stage. Every attention that loving hands can give is being given to relieve him, and we hope he will soon be restored.

William Hatfield, the progressive Medina merchant, was here yesterday and dropped in to see the New Era folks and make a year's advertising contract with the little old home paper. Mr. Hatfield informs us that he has just received a big line of dry goods and Star brand shoes, and has them on sale at his big store. He makes prices within reach of everybody and is content with small profits.

When you have visitors don't forget to ring the New Era and tel us about them. Or better still, write their names on a slip of paper and send in to this office and in this way assist us in keeping the little old home pper up to its present standard.

HEEL-FLY TIME IN TEXAS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

As before stated, the Cox farm was about four miles below Columbus on the Colorado. Shortly after dark I left the Mexican camp and soon found myself at the goal of my hopes. When within a short distance of the residence, I concealed my horse in a grove and stealthily made my way to a point near the house. There was no moon and it being cloudy, the darkness was intense. I heard voices at the house and soon discovered that a party of merry makers had possession of the home and were boisterously celebrating—probably the return of some soldier boy from the east of the Mississippi. I found concealment in the shrubbery, sufficiently near the house to enable me to hear the conversation and the songs rendered by the merry voices. They sang "The Contraband," Girl with the Home-Spun Dress," and other popular songs of the war period. I remember yet a couple of stanzas of a song, sung with spirit that night by three or four male voices. They ran something like this:

"Old Honest Abe, you are obeyed
For military glory;
An arrant fool, a party tool,
A traitor and a tory.

"You are a boss, a mighty 'boss'
A-snorting in the stable;
A racer on a kangaroo
But whip us if you're able."

To me the hours seemed long and weary, and I suppose it was past the hour of midnight when the crowd broke away and left. I waited until all became still and quiet. A light appeared from a window and I knew that someone, probably the lady whom I wished to see, was yet astir. I realized that the crucial moment had arrived, although I was burdened with many fears and misgivings. I knew not how many of the revelers remained; there might be several of the Home Guards in the house to spend the night, and in the act of approaching the mistress of the home I might run up against a "Heel-Fly." But at length I decided to hazard everything in an effort, and stepping lightly on the porch, I rapped softly at the front door. A voice from with said: "Who s it?" "Is that you Mrs. Cox?" I asked. "Yes," came the reply in her own tones, "Who are you and what do you want?" "I am a stranger, Madam, from Mexico, and have letters from your husband for you." In an instant the door was opened and the lady asked me to come in and be seated. I declined, preferring to remain outside under the cover of the darkness, and in a low voice, inaudible to any who might chance to be within, I told her of my mission my disguise, and who sent me, and then gave her my quirt and told her to rip open the handle and she would find a letter from her husband concealed therein. She insisted on my remaining until morning, assuring me that she thought I would be safe under her roof. When I mentioned the Heel-Flies she laughed and said there would be little danger from that source, and gave me the startling information that there was a Heel-Fly in the company of Home Guard stationed in that town she had accompanied a young lady home from the party that night, and she was expecting him home at any moment. She assured me that he would not give me away, but would befriend and protect me as far as he could. I told her that her husband had advised me not to sleep under any roof after having crossed the San Antonio river and that, with the exception of one night spent in the guard house at Goliad, I had observed his admonition and that under no circumstances would I consent to sleep in a house where there were "Heel-Flies" under the same roof and that I would go back to camp but would call at the outside until she had read her husband's letter. I then withdrew to my hiding place where I had been but a few minutes when I heard the clatter of horse's feet and I drew the conclusion that it was her son returning, and if he should prove obstreperous I might be in the hands of the "Heel-Flies."

The horseman came to the gate dismounted, threw his saddle on the fence, led his horse around to a lot and entered the house from the rear. I then went to his stable and examined it, but found no arms. From the fence I went near the house and for one time in my life I did some "eavesdropping." "I could hear the lady's voice as if reasoning or pleading, and could now and then hear a male voice but could not understand what either were saying. After some little time the lady came out into the yard and said: "Come on in you are safe." I made no reply. Her son came out and she said as if speaking to him: "I wonder if he is gone!" After a pause she called again, "Young man, come on in you are safe; don't be afraid." Moved by the assurance I emerged from the darkness and went in, they, mother and son leading the way into a room where a flickering lamp, an old saucer filled with grease into which a twisted rag was submerged forming a wick—cast a sickly light over the surroundings. A black gun lay within easy reach. This riled me and I thought the best policy then and there would be to put on a bold front and be plain at the outset, and I said to the lady: "Madam, I suppose you have read Mr. Cox's letter by now and you surely know that you are among friends. You have assured me of your protection, and on that assurance I have placed myself in your power to come and go as I will. I like the looks of things here and you, young man, don't you dare reach for that gun. I learn that you belong to the Home Guards up in town but your mother has told me that you are all right and I hope it is that way. Your father employed me to come here and I can serve for his interests, and there must be no misunderstanding. As you see I am prepared to take care of myself. I know that a word from me will have all your Heel-Fly company after me, but I want to tell you that it will be a bad day for some of you before I get out of your guard house." Of course this was in the nature of a "bluff" and I learned later that I had been too severe and formed a wrong opinion of the young man.

The mother explained by saying that the feeling had been so strong against her husband on account of his being a Yankee, that her son had been compelled to join the Home Guards to save their property from confiscation, and that while his sentiments were like those of his parent, to all appearances he had to be a "good Confederate." The boy then assured all she said and that I must not mistake him, nor be uneasy; that he would shield me from all danger, and that I could sleep peacefully on the floor. When this point was settled the conversation turned to the subject of my errand. The lady informed me that the two mules, in charge of a younger son, and a neighbor had started the day before to Fort Bend county on the Brazos for corn for the horses belonging to the Home Guards and they would not be back under four or five days. All the difficulties of the situation, pro and con, were discussed and it was agreed that I should remain incampments near town, until the fifth day, which fell on Friday, at which time during the night I was to return to the Cox home and if the mules had arrived, final arrangements were made for my departure. When this was settled upon, the mother withdrew to an adjacent room to prepare a luncheon and this gave the young man a chance to talk. He told me a great deal about the 'Heel-Flies' and their devilment; the tyranny of the of the conscript officers and the hardships of the people. He showed that those who refused to volunteer and were arrested, were sent to Galveston and were compelled to drill several hours each day with heavy artillery, and that owing to exposure, bad water and poor ration the mortality was fearful. He further stated that his company, then at Columbus, had been stationed at Halletsville and that a company from Victoria, in which there were a number of Mexicans, was expected to reach Columbus soon and that his company would be sent to Victoria. During the day he said, he had to be with his company, but very often he had to leave it and spend the night with his mother at home. He had seen me in town and his suspicions had been aroused as to my being a real Mexican, others had become suspicious and he advised me to stay out of town. He informed me that these Home Guards were serving almost without pay, since Confederate money, was worthless and on this account, the temptation to steal, rob, and take bribes, was almost irresistable. No one wanted to go into the army and those who could get away were going into Mexico.

I enjoyed a well served post-midnight supper with the hospitable mother and son, and altho' urgently solicited to remain until morning and given every assurance of safety, I resolutely declined; bade them good bye and a short while before dawn I reached Senor Garcia's camp on the outskirts of Columbus.

The morning after my visit to the Cox home Senor Garcia called me aside and informed me that he was sorely afraid that I was going to get into trouble and that my presence in his camp might involve him. He said those "soldados," as he was pleased to call them, were watching me and he believed his camp was under confidential espionage. The evening before and while returning from Alleyton and passing through the town, he had been held up by a squad of these "Heel-Flies" who put him under some sort of an oath and quizzed him closely to know if any American, soldier or civilian, had been stopping at his camp at any time since his coming to Columbus. The examination he said, was conducted through an interpreter who didn't know enough Spanish to ask for bread. He told them no Americans had been about his camp but a few of the citizens who had brought eggs and butter to sell, a few teamsters inquiring for their stock, and a few of the Home Guards. He told me he did not regard the oath they administered as binding as he could not understand the interpreter's blundering rendition. Besides, he wasn't worrying up the cross nor on the grounds, and furthermore, the man who administered the oath was "un hereje" a heretic. The senor was a devout Catholic. I assured him that I had no desire whatever to cause him trouble; that I had no fears for my own safety, but if it was his wish I would go elsewhere and seek shelter, a course which I very much disliked as a change to another encampment would tend to confirm the suspicions of the authorities and force me to leave sooner than I expected. He said that he wanted me to remain with him; that he was my friend and that I could stay in his camp as long as I wished to remain, but insisted that I use more caution and stay away from town, which I promised to do.

Later in the day the senor came to me and expressed some doubt as to my ability to get away with those mules, which I came after. What, if mule like, they should become stubborn and refuse to haul! I would have to neck them together, and what if they should refuse to be driven!" He told me of a young man who, owing to some misunderstanding, had been discharged from another mule train and was anxious to return to Mexico but did not care to go alone. I told him to send for the Mexican, and when he came it did not take us long to close the deal. I found him to be a comely young man of ready address prepossessing appearance, and far above the average in intelligence, and he impressed me, as Senor Garcia stated, as a man who could be trusted with entire confidence. His father at one time had been a merchant in Corpus Christi, where he had had learned to speak English; later he removed to Mexico, where, on the breaking out of the War of the Intervention, 1861 the young man enlisted in the Liberal army in his return to Mexico. The next morning about 10 o'clock, I noticed an American boy about the camp carrying a bridle on his arm as if stock hunting. He looked to be about 11 years old. After loitering around for some time and seeing me alone for a moment he timidly drew near and in a tone scarcely audible said: "Aren't you the gentleman that saw my papa, Mr. Cox, in Matamoras?" "Yes Bud," said, "What is it now?" "Well," said the lad brightening up, "I am Jim Cox. My mother says for you to come tonight at 12," and without another word, or waiting for any reply, the boy was off. I guessed as he went away but he only pointed in the direction of town, which gesture I understood to mean "heel-fly" and he soon disappeared in the direction of the river.

Here was another perplexity. Those mules could not have returned from the Brazos so soon, and why should the lady summon me to her home at such an unreasonable hour? Could it be that her gallant lieutenant, establishment son, the gallant lieutenant in a "Heel-Fly" company, C. S. A. had turned traitor to his former associates? Evidently there was villainy abroad somewhere. I recalled the adage that a secret was safe only in one bosom. Here my secret was known to three myself, Mrs. Cox, her two sons, and the Lord only knows how many others. I consulted Senor Garcia but he was equally puzzled and could only forecast troublesome times ahead. He was of the opinion that there was treachery somewhere, and advised me to take Ciriaco with me that night. I decided to follow his counsel, and Cox home. I instructed Senor Garcia before midnight we were in concealment in a grove near the not to tie our horses but to hold the reins in his hands and be on the alert for certain signals agreed upon in case of distress, and we also decided upon the place of rendezvous in the event of separation. We had no means by which to determine the hour but having decided that it must be near 12 when I left the house, I crept up to the house, rapped lightly upon the door, and Mrs. Cox appeared. Her lieteuant son was absent "Mondo" "mondo" was the word, and for that reason she had sent her younger son that morning that I might come and be warned of my danger and hers. In the night of the party a young lady, who lived in town, had attended, and remained overnight. She thought she heard a noise in another room but now she believed she was awake and listning. At any rate the "Heel-Flies" were on my trail and they were going to arrest me as a deserter from Benevides' regiment then stationed along the Rio Grande. Her son had posted her and instructed her to advise me to "make tracks." A squad of those "Heel-Flies" had taken supper at her house that night.

"The Old Fashioned Mother."

That highly interesting Thanksgiving parable of a mother's love, entitled "The Old Fashioned Mother," will soon be presented by the B. Y. P. U. Juniors of Bandera at the Wright Hall, exact date of which will be announced later. The proceeds from the sale of the tickets will go toward local expenses of the society and also a donation will be made to Buckner's Orphan Home at Dallas. We expect to publish the cast of characters in our next issue and give a synopsis of the play.

Rev. E. A. Potts, pastor of the Methodist church spent several days in San Antonio last week in attendance at the Standard Sunday School Training School of Instruction. He took two units of credit while there.

Another one of our pioneer citizens has passed over the divide. Mrs. Frances Ann Hinds, Sr., died last Thursday morning, after an illness covering several weeks. Funeral services were held Friday and burial made in the family lot in the Bandera cemetery. Deceased was 77 years, 11 months and 18 days old. She came to Texas in 1845, and to Bandera in 1870. Her maiden name was Miss Nancy Caveness, whom she married at Fort Mason in 1855. She died several years ago. To them were born thirteen children, twelve of whom are still living: R. W. Hinds of Hobbs, Okla.; O. G. Hinds and Hinds Jr.; J. P. Hinds of Lima; Mrs. Lorena Copeland of Smiley; Ben Hinds of White Signal, N. M.; J. F. Hinds of Willow City; Mrs. Della Stocking of O'Brien; Mrs. Florence Buckner of Selma Cal.; Miss Helen Stacy of Ardmore, Oklahoma; Levi Hinds of Comstock and Dee Hinds of Calexico, California. He leaves 12 living children, 69 grandchildren, 63 great grandchildren and one great great grand child.

During his long residence in this county Grandpa Hinds proved himself a useful citizen and was actively identified with every move for the betterment of his community for almost half a century. He had the distinction of being the oldest man in the county being just a few months older

The Bandera Cemetery Association met last Saturday afternoon at the Methodist church with thirteen present. The proposition to set trees along the drive way was the interesting topic and was discussed generally and with enthusiasm. After duly considération of terms, from several dealers, it was decided to order from Ramsey Nursery, through their local agent, Mr. A. A. Hood. This firm offers four foot, Legustrum trees at $5.00 per dozen with a re-

H. J. Graham, of Boerne, proposes to erect a suitable monument to the memory of the Kendall county men and women who died in the service of the United States in the World War. The monument is to be dedicated on March 6th, 1923, with appropriate ceremonies. Mr. Graham will bear all the expenses of the monument, and present it to the people of Kendall county as a memorial to the Graham family, and he wants to inscribe on the monument the name of every man and woman of that county who died in the military, naval, hospital or Red Cross service from the beginning of the war until the armistice was declared, and request is made that the relatives of those who died send him by registered mail immediately the full name, rank, date of death and name of regiment, company or branch of service of deceased. The proposition of Mr. Graham is certainly worthy of emulation, and we hope Bandera county's heroic dead will be likewise remembered by the citizens of this county. If one patriotic citizen of a county can erect a monument surely the entire citizenship of a county can do the same thing.

Bandera High School will turn out fourteen graduates this term. They are. Miss Johanna Noonan, Miss Myra Jennette Hunter, Miss Lora Thallman, Miss Edna Stevens, Miss Mabel Thallman, Miss Maizie Jarreczki, Miss Agatha Pyka, Miss Annie Habenicht, Miss Pauline Ethridge, Messrs. Warren Hunter, Ellis Krause, Claude Krause, Roscoe Hayes, and Howard Eckhart.

Work of constructing the concrete bridge at Banger Crossing started last Friday. Otto Meyers, the well known bridge builder, is superintending the work.

Fritz Eckhart was in from his ranch Saturday and called to extend his subscription figures of the New Era. He also ordered the great family weekly to continue its visits to the home of his son-in-law, Sid Joiner, at Medina.

The minstrel given by the pupils of the High School last Friday night was real good, and the box supper that followed was also greatly enjoyed. More than $40 was realized, to be used for graduation purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Scheele sent the editor's folks a generous supply of fresh pork last Friday, from a big hog butchered that day. We greatly appreciate the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Scheele.

Our Linotype.

When a fellow buys a new automobile he wants to talk about it all the time while it is new, and the New Era editor is no exception. But we haven't a new automobile just a linotype we are talking about. A couple of months ago we installed a Model Five Linotype in this office, and since that time everything has moved serenely along. Previous to the purchasing of this machine we had to set all of our type by hand. Our book of "The Pioneer History of Bandera County," containing 384 pages was set up by hand and all the type for our paper. The type had been used for a number of years and was getting worn so much that it could hardly be read when printed. Then we bought the Model Five and now we have plenty of type for all purposes—a clean, clear new face of type every week. The machine has not given us the least bit of trouble, notwithstanding the fact that the editor and his assistant, Miss Eunice Price, were both novices in operating. The editor had had a little experience in manipulating the key board, but not enough to brag about. Miss Eunice is now the operator and has attained remarkable proficiency in operating and looking after the upkeep of the machine. Usually country publishers who install a linotype have a world of trouble at first, but not so with us. Possibly it is our lucky turn, but we are of the opinion that the excellent machine that they shipped us is more than responsible for the entire absence of the "jinx."

Federal Income Taxes.

All tax returns for 1922 must be made between January 1st and March 15th, 1923. Any single person including widows must make a return if their net income amounts to $1,000.00 for the year 1922.

All married persons must make a return if their net income amounts to $2,000.00 for the year 1922. The status of a person on December 31st 1922 [illegible] If your wife or husband dies on December 29th, 1922 you are single on December 31st 1922, and only entitled to an exemption of $1,000.00. If you marry on the 29th of December, 1922, you are entitled to an exemption of $2,500 on December 31st and must make a return if your income for 1922 was $2,600. You note that the exemption is higher than the minimum amount of income at which you are compelled to make return.

Make your return early so as to avoid congestion in the federal tax office. Bring your last year's return for reference; also statement of your income and expense for the year 1922. All partnerships must make income tax returns.

The editor and wife enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tobey, above Medina, last Sunday, partaking of an excellent dinner in that home prepared by their charming daughter, Miss Lois. Mr. Tobey has a good ranch in those hills, beautifully situated, and the visitor there is made to feel perfectly at home.

Uncle Gabe Anderwald dropped in Monday to see the New Era's linotype in operation, and was greatly interested in its performance. On February 2, 1855, or just sixty eight years ago, Uncle Gabe landed in Bandera, coming with the original colonists from Poland, and he has been right here ever since. He says Bandera is good enough for him.

Eighteen members of the Bandera B. Y. P. U. went to Kerrville last Sunday to attend the associational meeting of that society. A great time was had by these young folks and they are loud in their praise of the royal welcome given by the Kerrville folks. The next meeting is to be held in Bandera the first Sunday in April. Those who went to Kerrville last Sunday were: Rev. and Mrs. M. J. Scott, Mrs. Andy Mansfield, Evelyn Mansfield, Mada Hamilton, Irma Hicks, Emily Ruth Rambie, Evelyn Price, Zella Mae Price, Ferne Hay, Merle Price, Eunice Price, Hubert Bruce, Andy Edmonson and Robert Blunt.

The editor and wife accompanied by Miss Lois Tobey of Medina, attended services at the Church of Christ on Rocky Creek last Sunday afternoon. The brethren there are active in the Lord's work, more than fifty communicants being present at Sunday's service. Brothers Val Click, J. T. Walker, Robert Swinney and J. M. Hunter made talks. Brother Lonnie Hayhurst, now attending school at Gunter has consented to hold the meeting for this congregation during the coming summer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hinds, Jr., of Lima, were here Saturday and paid the New Era office an appreciated visit. Mr. Hinds requested us to extend the thanks of himself and family to all who so kindly rendered assistance during the long time that his aged father was so helpless before he passed away, and to assure them that all these kindnesses are greatly appreciated. He also requests us to say if there are any outstanding accounts against his father's estate the persons holding them are urged to present same so settlement can be made.

We have a few copies of the "Pioneer History of Bandera County" on hand yet, and if you have not secured a copy we urge you to get one before it is too late. Price, postpaid, $1.00.

J. H. BURNS, Tarpley, Texas

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

They had two men whom they arrested in the river bottom that evening and were taking them to the guard house in Columbus where there were twenty-two prisoners being held, most of whom would be taken to Harrisburg on the next train. She was greatly worried. She wanted her husband in the worst way, but they were liable to be seized at any hour; even now they were hauling corn for the Heel-Flies, but she saw no chance of escape with them. I must not wait another day; if I tarried longer I would be arrested. She had friends in Lavaca county, about twelve miles from Hallettsville, on the Lavaca river. If I could go there and wait she might be able to send the mules to me. But she had no one to send them by except the little boy, Jimmie, and she could not think of sending him so far alone. With part of the money I had delivered to her, sent by her husband, she could bribe one of the "Heel-Fly" officers to take the mules as far as Lavaca, but she needed every cent of the money and besides, the plan was fraught with too much danger. Exposure meant death. I would start the next morning and go to her friends along the Lavaca, while my Mexican could wait around Columbus until the mules came in from the Brazos. She could notify him and when all was in readiness, he, accompanied by her little boy Jimmie, could drive with the mules and by hard riding could cover the distance in one night, or nearly so, and after delivering the mules to the boy he could easily make his way back home. She suggested that the Mexican could get through without her aid. I interrupted at this point owing to the prejudice against the Mexicans he would likely be arrested and if found out would be shot. I was in a country with a fine span of mules, and I was sure my man would not assume the risk. I told her I had the utmost confidence in him and was willing to trust him, and that I saw no other means of escape with those mules. She consented to this arrangement but only on condition that a full and comprehensive understanding of the program as agreed upon might be had. I went to the guard house with Miss Cox to accompany me to the house and she had conversation with him, I could see that she was favorably impressed and, like myself, was willing to trust him. Every detail of our plans were gone over and arranged in Crisaco's presence in order that he might clearly understand, but was kept standing, and to the execution of which he pledged his faithful service. This being settled upon, Mrs. Cox next gave me directions how to go to find her friends on Lavaca river. I was to go to A. B. McDonald and tell him my business and who sent me. Mr. McDonald she said was an old pioneer Texan and an old time friend of the family. At heart he was a Unionist, although he had a son in Garland's regiment, then east of the Mississippi, and a younger son in the Lavaca Home Guards, but he was a true man and my self known Texan to betray a friend. Should I fail to find Mr. McDonald, then I was to go to Judge Riley Tate, Tom Hogan, or Bill Dr. Bond, all of whom were friends to Mr. Cox, and from either of these men I would receive my aid. I might need. Crisaco also described the follow the old Atascosito (corrupted into "Tuscasset") trail leading in a southwest course from Columbus, until within ten miles from Lavaca, then due west until he came to the crossing at Mayo's Mill, which was only four miles from A. B. McDonald's. After crossing the Lavaca they would come out into a settlement where they could obtain information. Having reached an understanding we arose to leave when Mrs. Cox took from beneath a mattress the identical quirt I had previously given her, and charged me to deliver it back to her husband. I readily promised, and without further ceremony, bade this noble lady goodbye, not knowing that I would ever see her again.

Next morning Crisaco assisted in my preparations for departure. When mounted I usually carried my pistol in my morrall where it was quite convenient in case of need. On this particular morning I placed my pistol in this morrall, and over it I placed a package containing my lunch, and one or two other small articles, leaving the weapon from view. My reason for doing this was to make it appear that I was an unarmed traveler. While making this preparation Ciriaco asked me to accompany him to the wagon train in which he had served and assertain when he could get some away yet due him. If he could get the wagon master to agree to pay him on a certain day, then I would know where to expect him on the Lavaca with the mules. I consented and, after taking leave of the kind Senor Garcia we rode away in company about three hundred yards distant. I noticed an unusual number of horses and mules about that train and called Ciriaco's attention to the same, but he suggested that perhaps his former boss was getting ready to load up. There were 25 or 30 wagons in this train and as we looked suspicious, but Ciriaco scouted the idea of danger. We rode through the "puerto" or gateway of this wagon train and find ourselves covered with more than a dozen guns and six-shooters in the hands of as many Mexicans, that is, they looked like such looking set of boys I ever faced. "Throw up yer hands, Mister Mexican-White-Man! Hits, you Greaser!" Ben Bowles cried in right smart while. Get ye now!" I asked Ciriaco to speak to those men and find out what they want-ed. He saw at once by looking at my Mexican's face and was a little surprised at his coolness when he said: "These Mexican don'ts no Mexicans; he don't know what for you wants heem." "The hell you say!" snorted a lean, cadaverous long-hungry, fiendish looking old peg-box pistol. He cah't talk 'Merican, wo'll larn him. But he can spout it all right when he wants to an' 'fore we git through with him he'll bleat for outlast. Cap'n Baker can swar the Mex'can lingo some hisself, and he'll soon find out if he is a greaser or no greaser." By this time they had seized my horse by the bridle and with their villainous guns held almost against me, they mounted and marched me off to the house. They took me also to search me for arms, and as we started, I turned and called back to Ciriaco: "Haste luego, cabalero!" but was kept standing, said no son peligroso!" and with a wave of the hand my man shouted back: "Ojala, Compadre! Ojala!" As before stated my pistol concealed in a morel which hung at my saddle bow. I wore a close fitting ornamented Mexican vester of my own design, and this garb it could be plainly seen that I was unarmed. At no time had I worn my pistol while in Columbus, as I knew the reputation of the "Heel-Flies" and not having seen me armed at any time, I suppose accounts for the fact that when arrested they made no attempt to search me.

As we went out from the train, one of these tall-gaiters of the party mounted and commenced a row about my horse's neck and bound me to the other end to the horn of his saddle and when one of his brave "fellers" mentioned the fact that such procedure was useless, as they had their guns on me and a man on each side, one holding my bridle rein, others "fear and that I could not possibly escape he answered by saying: Can't be keerful. They kain no tellin' how these prisoners, an this man-ly lookin' feller might rattle his hocks if he gits half a chance." And then came a wrangle as to who should have my horse, one or two claiming that this fellow had placed his rope on the animal in order that he might have a better chance.

A thousand thoughts oppressed me as to rode [illegible] Chagrin possessed me, in that I had deliberately rode into a trap and been caught like a rat, and that, too, by a gang of ragamuffins too contemptible for a polone dog to bark at. Then came a more oppressive sense of dread. They had boasted that Captain Baker would visit the greaser lago too." Evidently, Captain Baker was a gentleman whom I sized up as being the provost marshal, and wher if he should prove to be a harder master than I? With these thoughts and forebodings, Mexicans never seemed so far and half-civilized land so near as on that cloudy morning at Columbus, and the prospect of involuntary servitude as a soldier in the Confederate army became oppressive by glowing.

When we reached Baker's office which was about a block and a half from the building used as barracks and in a northwest course from the public square, the office fronting north, my captors removed the guns from my horse and dismounted and as they did so Captain Baker came out, congratulated them on my capture and ordered them, leaving me in charge of a gander-eyed chap who seemed to be on duty at the office door. From the conversation I overheard, it seems these fellows had been out on the scout since the evening before, and hence their dismissal to quarters when I reached the office. I had dismounted with the rest and as they rode off my new custodian, by words and signs, directed me to hitch my horse to a post which stood about 25 feet from the office door and in the direction of the court house square. I made note of this and, in fact, all the surroundings with an eye to escape.

Several loiterers had collected by this time and it was interesting to hear their rude comments. "He don't look like a Mexican!" "He's a deserter and trying to get through to Mexico!" "Capt. Baker must have got my Mexican talking Spanish and he'll find out mighty quick what he is!" These and other remarks went the round and, in effect were anything but encouraging.

The sentinel directed me into the august presence of Captain Baker. His office was a little bare concern, about 14x18 feet, with a door opening north on the street and an open window, without a sash, on the right of the door. On a bunk, at which his Highness sat, were a lot of papers, an old sword and a villainous looking Colt's pistol. I was offered no seat and stood during the interview, while the Captain seemed to be busy looking over some papers. Finally he pushed them aside and with a fierce stare upon me said: "Are you trying to read my thoughts, he said gruffly: "So you claim to be a Mexican eh!" With cool assurance I replied: "No entendio Senor; no hable lo idioma Ingles." (I do not understand sir; I do not speak English.) "You no understand what I say, you vile lie!" Comy sammy!" (What is your name!) These three questions, fired almost simultaneously, revealed the man I had to deal with and I could have shouted with laughter. Here was the dreaded official who could "spit Spanish," and could pass as a Mexican to shame talking the "greaser lingo!" "Comy sammy!" for "como se llama," was the key to my ignorance of the Spanish language, and I felt secure on that score. However, in his broken, blundering way he proceeded with the examination. He took down my name, or rather the name I gave—Juan Montero Garcia—and questioned me as to my nationality. With a picture of bad Kickapoo and a wretched Spanish he said my blue eyes, fair skin and light hair betrayed me, and that he did not believe I was a Mexican. I told him there were many Mexicans who had complexions as fair as any American; that I had come to Columbus on honorable business that I had made no attempt to conceal it, but as he knew I had appeared on the streets with my companions, and seeing to dawn upon his befuddled mind, and throwing down his pen, he said: "All right, go bring your witnesses. You say your father is here; bring him along too. If had not told him my father was there I would say he a Mexican but I don't believe it. And see that your witnesses tell the truth. You bring a lot of greasers in here to lie for you and I'll have everyone of you shot. Do you understand me?" During this preliminary a man was brought into the room wearing a ball and chain and guarded by two of the "Heel Fly lads." He was a villainous looking individual and I wondered how they had managed to catch him. He appeared to be a prisoner of notoriety and the little room was soon filled with a motely crowd of "Heel-Flies" and others, among whom I noticed Lieutenant Cox. As I turned to push my way through the crowd at the door, the captain said: "Lieutenant, this Mexican has one hour to bring in his witnesses. See that he has them here in that time." Cox passed just outside the door, while I proceeded to where my horse was hitched and gave him the act of unhitching that the man on guard at the door threw a rusty old shot gun down on me and said: "Let that ar hoss alone I leave 'im right whar he's a-standin'!" Lieut. Cox repeated the order and advanced to where I was standing, exaggerating the swearing, but when close to me he said in an undertone: "Leave your horse; go round the block and watch your chance, but if you attempt to escape or call the attention of the crowd outside the outside and with a "[illegible] tementa ya me coy." I walked briskly away.

I kept up this brisk walk, not daring to look back, until I reached the corner of the block, where, instead of going on in the direction of Senor Garcia's camp, I turned south and slackened my gait to a slow walk. When I reached the next corner I turned west continuing as directed by Lieutenant Cox, around the block. When I reached the street leading past the captain's office I saw that every man on the outside had crowded into the door and window, craning their necks to see what was going on in there. They seemed oblivious to everything outside that office, even the sentinel was not in sight and I supposed he had crowded in at the door-way. The man with the ball and chain evidently was on trial and the importance of his case had overshadowed that of the man who claimed to be a Mexican. My horse stood as I had left him at the hitching post, only a few paces from the door. I had been instructed by one having authority to watch my chance, mounted my horse and rode slowly away until I had turned the corner, out of view of those at little office, and was off.

While sauntering around that block before securing my horse, I surveyed the surroundings and decided upon my course. To the southwest and west for quite a distance was the open plain, a large portion of which was in full view of the building occupied by the "Heel-Flies" and also the sentinel and guard house where a sentinel stood guard. It would not do to try to escape across that open plain. Just below town was a large field extending along the river to the edge of the village and a road led out from town between the field fence and the bank of the river. In this field there was a depression on the northwest corner of the field, diagonally in the direction of the south boundary of the enclosure, which latter I would guess contained a hundred acres more or less. When the river was swollen to waters backed up and covered this slough. I had noted this field and the road leading out along the river bank, while loitering in town a few days before, but I had not traveled over it.

HEEL-FLY TIME IN TEXAS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to Texas Encountered Many Difficulties.

They had two men whom they arrested in the river bottom that evening and were taking them to the guard house in Columbus where there were twenty-two prisoners being held, most of whom would be taken to Harrisburg on the next train. She was greatly worried. She wanted her husband to have those mules; they were liable to be seized at any hour; even now they were hauling corn for the Heel-Flies, but she saw no chance of escape with them. I must not wait another day; if I tarried longer I would be arrested. She had friends in Lavaca county, about twelve miles from Hallettsville, on the Lavaca river. If I could go there and wait she might be able to send the mules to me. But she had no one to send them by except the little boy, Jimmie, and she could not think of sending him so far alone. With part of the money to be delivered to her, sent by her husband, she could bribe one of the "Heel-Fly" officers to take the mules as far as Lavaca, but she needed every cent of the money and besides, the plan was fraught with too much danger. Exposure meant the confiscation of all she had left. I told her her suggestions were to the point if she could vouch for the honesty of her Lavaca friends. I explained that I had employed a reliable Mexican, who at that moment was nearby, and that he would take any chances to assist me. I would start the next morning and go to her friends along the Lavaca, while my Mexican could wait around Columbus until the mules came in from the Brazos. She could notify him and when all was in readiness, he, accompanied by her little boy, Jimmie, could start with the mules and by hard riding could cover the distance in one night, or nearly so, and after delivering the mules to me the boy could easily make his way back home. She suggested that the Mexican could get through with out her son. I interposed the objection that owing to the prejudice against the Mexicans he would likely be arrested and if found traveling through the country with a fine span of mules, and I was sure my man would not assume the risk. I told her I had the utmost confidence in him and was willing to trust him, and that I saw no other means of escape with those mules. She consented to this arrangement, and in order that a full and comprehensive understanding of the program as agreed upon might be had, I went to the grove and had Ciriaco accompany me to the house and she had conversation with him, I could see that she was favorably impressed and, like myself, was willing to trust him. Every detail of our plans were gone over and arranged in Ciriaco's presence in order that he might clearly understand the program and to the execution of which he pledged his faithful service. This being settled upon, Mrs. Cox next gave me directions as to how to find her friends on Lavaca river. I was to go to A. B. McDonald and tell him my business and who sent me. Mr. McDonald, she said was an old pioneer Texan and an old time friend of the family. At heart he was a Unionist, although he had a son in Garland's regiment, then east of the Mississippi, and a younger son in the Lavaca Home Guards, but he was a true man and was never known to betray a friend. Should I fail to find Mr. McDonald, then I was to go to Judge Riley Tate, Tom Hogan, or old Dr. Ponton, all of whom were friends to Mr. Cox and "every critter of them" I could receive any aid I might need. Ciriaco was directed to follow the old Atascosito (corrupted into "Tuscasset") trail leading in a southwest course from Columbus, until within ten miles from Lavaca, then due west until he came to the crossing at Mayo's Mill, which was only four miles from A. B. McDonald's. After crossing the Lavaca they would come out into a settlement where they could obtain information. Having reached an understanding we arose to leave when Mrs. Cox took from beneath a mattress the identical quirt I had previously given her, and charged me to deliver it back to her husband. I readily promised, and without the further ceremony took this entire lady goodbye, not knowing that I would ever see her again.

Next morning Ciriaco assisted in my preparation for departure. When mounted I usually carried my pistol in my morrall where it was quite convenient in case of need. On this particular morning I placed my pistol in this morral and over it I placed a package containing my lunch, and one or two other small articles, thus hiding the weapon from view. My reason for doing this was to make it appear that I was an unarmed traveler. While making this preparation Ciriaco asked me to accompany him to the wagon train in which he had served and ascertain when he could get some money due him. If he could get the wagon master to agree to pay him on a certain day, then I would know when to expect him on the Lavaca with the mules. I consented, and, after taking leave of the kind Senor Garcia we rode away to the encampment about 500 yards distant. I noticed an unusual number of horses and mules about that train and called Ciriaco's attention to the matter but he suggested that perhaps his former boss was getting ready to load up. There were 25 or 30 large wagons in this train and, according to custom while in camp, these wagons had been corralled for convenience and protection. While approaching, we could not get a view of the interior of this corrall but as we came nearer I noticed several horses saddled near the entrance. This looked suspicious, but Ciriaco scouted the idea of danger. We rode through the "puerto" or gateway of this wagon corrall to find ourselves covered with more than a dozen guns and six-shooters in the hands of as many "Heel-Flies," the most brigand-ish looking set of boys I ever faced. "Throw up yer hands, Mister Mexican White-Man! Hits you we want. Bin a-looking for you right smart while. Got ye now!" I asked Ciriaco to speak to those men and find out what they wanted. I saw an amused look about the Mexican's face and was a little surprised at his coolness when he said: "Thees Mexican don't spick Ingles; he don'ta un'stan what for you wants heem." "The hell you say!" snorted a lean, cadaverous long-hungry, flour-ing an old pepper-box pistol. "If he can't talk 'Mercian, we'll larn him. But he can spout it all right when he wants to an' 'fore we git done with him he'll bleat 'er out fast. Cap'n Baker can talk the Mex'can lingo some hisself, and he'll soon find out if he is a greaser or a Cajen." By this time they had seized my horse by the bridle, and with their villainous guns held almost against me, they mounted and marched me off to-wards town. They made no effort to search me for arms, and as we started, I turned and called back to Ciriaco: "Hasta luego, cabal-lero! No ha riesgo, estoy malditos no son peligrosos!" and with a wave of the hand my man shouted back: "Ojala, Compadre! Ojala!"

As before stated I had my pistol concealed in a moral which hung at my saddle bow. I wore a close fitting ornamented Mexican jacket or round-about, and in this garb it could be plainly seen that I was unarmed. At no time had I worn my pistol while in Columbus, as I knew the cupidity of these "Heel-Flies" and not having seen me armed at any time, I supposed my accounts for the fact that when arrested they made no attempt to search me.

As we went out from the train, one of these tail-enders of the Home Guard manhood tied a rope about my horse's neck and bound the other end to the horn of his saddle and when one of his bravo comrades mentioned the fact that such precaution was useless, as they had their guns on me and a man on each side, one holding my bridle and others in fear and trembling, I could not possibly escape, he answered by saying: "Can't be too keerful. They hain no tellin 'bout these greasers, an this dang-ly lookin' feller might rattle his hocks if he gits half a chance." And then came a wrangle as to who should have my horse, one or two claiming that this fellow had placed his rope on the animal in order that he might have a better chance.

A thousand thoughts oppressed me as we rode [illegible]. A grim Chagrin possessed me, in that I had deliberately rode into a trap that I had plenty of witnesses to prove that I was "umpire Mc[illegible]ango." When I mentioned "testigos" (witnesses) a new light seemed to dawn upon his befuddled mind, and throwing down his pen, he said, "All right, go bring your witnesses. You say your father is here, bring him along too. (I had not said him my father was there.) You may be a Mexican but I don't believe it. And see that your witnesses tell the truth. You bring a lot of greasers in here to lie for you and I'll have everyone of you shot. Do you understand me?" During this "preliminary" a man was brought into the room wearing a belt and chain and guarded by two of the "Heel Fly lads." He was a brigandish looking individual and wondered how they had managed to catch him. He appeared to be a prisoner of notoriety and the little room was soon filled with a motley crowd of "Heel Flies" and others, among whom I noticed Lieutenant Cox. As I turned to push my way through the crowd at the door, Cox said: "Lieutenant, this Mexican has one hour to bring in his witnesses. See that he has them here in that time." Cox passed just outside the door, while I proceeded to where my horse was hitched and mounted him, after which I said to the man on guard at the door threw a rusty old shot gun down on me and said: "Let that ar boss alone; leave 'im right 'whar he's a-standin'!" Lieut. Cox repeated the order and advanced to where I was standing, swearing and swearing, but when close to me he said in an undertone: "Leave your horse; go round the block and watch for chance. Go!" Cox's movement attracted the attention of the crowd on the outside and with a "Se-[illegible]teniente--ya me voy," I walked briskly away.

I kept up this brisk walk, not daring to look back, until I reached the corner of the block, where, instead of going in the direction of Senor Garcia's camp, I turned south and slackened my gait to a slow walk. When I reached the next corner I turned east, continuing as directed by Lieutenant Cox, around the block. Mrs. M. M. Johnson Dead.

Mrs. M. M. Johnson, aged 75 years, died in San Antonio on Wednesday of last week and the remains were brought to Bandera for burial Friday morning, services being conducted by Rev. E. A. Potts, pastor of the Methodist church. Mrs. Johnson was raised here, but moved to San Antonio about twelve years ago. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. M. Secrest of Lytle, and Mrs. E. N. McRae of Somerset, and one son, J. E. Johnson of San Antonio. She was a sister to Mrs. B. F. Langford, Sr., Mrs. Tom Laxson, Mrs. Jack Olliff, Mrs. Jim Lewis and R. A. Chipman of Bandera. The New Era extends sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

The concrete bridge at the Ranger crossing is nearing completion. Owing to the inclement weather of the early part of this week work was suspended but Contractor Meyers is making up for the time lost and will soon have the bridge ready for use.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sullivan and little son who were the guests of the editor's family, went to Medina Monday where they will spend a few days before going to Mason to visit relatives. They are headed for their home at Pampa, Texas, but will visit Mrs. Sullivan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pomp Freemen at Ozona on their way.

Mrs. Paul Baxter was in from Mason Creek yesterday and paid the New Era office a visit. She informs us that her grand daughter Mrs. Chas. Stein, nee Miss Katie Martin, is here from Georgetown on a visit to her.

When you have visitors don't forget to ring the New Era and tell us about them. Or better still, write their names on a slip of paper and send in to this office and in this way assist us in keeping the little old home paper up to its present standard.

Radio Concert Next Thursday Night.

Bandera people will be treated to a radio concert next Thursday night at the school auditorium, to be given by Warren Hunter, who has installed a powerful radio set that will bring in the leading broadcasting stations of this country, Kansas City, Los Angeles St. Louis, Atlanta, Memphis, Fort Worth, Dallas, Denver, San Antonio, and other places that broadcast radio concerts. Warren expects to visit other towns in this section with his set and give the people an opportunity to listen in on this wonderful new thing that is becoming more interesting every day. Don't forget the date of his first public concert in Bandera, next Thursday night, February 15, from 8 to 11:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Luther Kilhorn, of San Antonio, was the guest of her cousin, Mrs. J. E. Chisum, last Friday.

An Old Fashioned Mother.

This three-act play is to be presented by the Bandera B. Y. P. U. at the Wright's Hall Friday evening, February 23. In the cast appears the cast of characters and a story of the play, which you are requested to read, and when the date arrives you are urged to attend and thus encourage local talent. You will be more than pleased with the presentation of this great play, which is full of heart throbs and pathos that characterize the everyday life of even these days, and reveals the mother love that has endured through all ages. Bandera has some excellent dramatic talent which with proper cultivation can be developed to a high plane. The young folks invite you to see their play February 23.

New Building Planned.

New Grocery Store.

S. C. Fitzgerald is negotiating for the Barnes building, formerly known as the Lincoln building, and will put in an up-to-date grocery store within a short time. Mr. Fitzgerald recently began hauling groceries by truck to Bandera and selling them on the streets here. He retailed very low prices and with small profit to himself, and his sales grew to such proportions that he decided to embark in the business on a large scale, so he is dealing for the Barnes building where he will have room to carry a very large stock of general merchandise. The building at present is occupied by Guy Ferguson's Cafe, and the upper story is used as a dwelling by James Cox.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Perner of Bandera made a business call at this office on Monday while passing through Comfort on their way home from Fredericksburg, where they had attended the birthday celebration of Mrs. Emelie Vollmering, the mother of Mrs. Perner.—Comfort News.

Ira Baker and Miss Alta Russell, popular young folks of Wallace Creek, were happily married on Tuesday of last week, Elder Robert Swinney officiating. The New Era extends congratulations and best wishes.

A Healthy Tone.

The demand for good stuff was active yesterday on the local market. This indifferent offerings were not in demand to the extent of bringing more than the average of last week. All A good, fat stuff, was about 75 cents better than last week. One choice lot of calves sold at $6, yet common calves sold down to $3.50. Stock was in the record of sales was an item of one undesirable calf selling at $2. Canner cows sold as low as $1.50, with fine choice stuff going at $4. The grades in between were sold at varying prices. Steers were quoted at $3.50 to $5.50. Yearlings sold at $2 to $4.50. Bulls of the poorest quality were difficult to dispose of at $1.50, with better class at $3. Hogs took a turn upwards, and $9.25 was paid for the best sort.—San Antonio Express.

Talking About Bandera Folks.

The following appeared in Cet ile Chatter column of the San Antonio Express yesterday:

J. A. Miller of Bandera is one of the prominent ranchmen of the territory adjacent to San Antonio whom it is good to fraternize with. Likewise, he is one of the old trail driving gang, but he gets around like one of the youngsters, rather than a man of nigh onto 70, and who has slept out on the wild prairie while blizzards were blowing and not a house in a hundred miles. His place five miles this side of Bandera town is one of the show places. He has a large, modern home, and is electrically lighted and has the latest word in plumbing fixtures. Mr. Miller gets around over the country a great deal, going to a lot of county fairs of this section. Last summer he attended the Bexar county farm bureau fair in San Antonio and chased around to all the attractions with the youngsters all day long. Then again he came down to the reunion of the old trail drivers. But back to his place in Bandera. He has 3,500 acres of fine, nearly level land, which is just about the largest tract of land in the county that is anything like level. Plenty of good stock is on the place too. All this is called to mind by reason of the fact that recently Geo. W. Saunders spent a night with him on the ranch, paying a long promised visit, and was remembering yesterday that he had one of the most enjoyable visits of his life.

J. F. Buckelew and J. T. Walker came down from Bluff yesterday day. Mr. Buckelew went to San Antonio while Mr. Walker remained over night with the Editor, returning home today.

Messrs. Bob and John Nabors, who live above Medina, were visitors at the New Era sanctum last Thursday. They were returning from San Antonio where they had been since the first of the year.

Notice to Subscribers.

Mrs. C. W. Harris is the New Era's agent at Medina and is authorized to collect and receipt for subscriptions to this paper. Subscribers are urged to give her their renewal and same will have attention as if sent direct to this office.

TARPLEY TOPICS.

Tarpley had a big snow Saturday night and Sunday, and it was greatly appreciated by everybody.

Odo Hermes entertained the young folks Saturday night with a delightful dance. Everybody had a good time.

George Jones and niece, Miss Lela Skirlock, visited San Antonio last week.

G. C. Riley and son, Ernest made a business trip to San Antonio, accompanied by Miss Elma Silvers and Mrs. T. P. Grant, and they got home just in time for the big snow.

Our school is progressing nicely.

J. W. Short and I. E. Adamitz made a business trip to San Antonio this week.

The many friends of W. W. Coughran will be pleased to learn that his condition is greatly improved and he is steadily recovering from his recent critical illness.

J. R. Wright, f Tulsa, Okla. is here on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Wright. He arrived last Saturday and will remain several days here.

Henry Adamietz dropped into our sanctum Tuesday to renew his subscription to the little old home paper, and give the editor words of encouragement.

Take your corn and oats to Frank Mansfield for quick and efficient service. For prices see the Want Ad Column.

Last Tuesday Sheriff Henry Stevens arrested a man named Don Perry, wanted in San Antonio on federal charges. The man had in his possession about a gallon of the forbidden oil of gladness, and some of it was inside of him, when he was put inside the jail.

J. A. Lewis, the popular telephone man at Medina, enrolls as a subscriber to the New Era this week, and also orders a copy of the Pioneer History of Bandera County.

Mrs. John Crist and children, who have been visiting her father, Tom Allsup, and also her brother-in-law, J. D. Crist, at Medina left yesterday for her home in Arkansas.

Bandera folks awoke Sunday morning to find old Mother Earth Wrapped in a mantle of snow. The freeze was a boon to farmers, who anticipated damage to crops from insects this summer, if cold weather did not come to destroy them. Sunday night the snow came down again and covered the ground to a depth of over two inches.

We frequently receive articles on Thursday for publication in the current issue of the New Era. Articles coming in late that way cannot be given space in that week's paper, for we close our forms Wednesday afternoon. All matter intended for publication should reach us not later than Wednesday noon, and we would prefer to receive them earlier in the week.

The New Era has a number of subscriptions expiring just at this time. Watch the date opposite your name on the label, for if you are interested in our "Heel Fly" story you will not want to miss a copy.

We failed to find a single Leakey advertisement in the last issue of the Leakey Leader. We just wonder how the editor of that newspaper manages to get out a paper at all without the support of his town. Evidently those Leakey merchants do not want their town to have a paper else they would advertise and help sustain it. If Bandera firms treated the New Era that way it would be "our move" very pronto.

Ganderbone, our staff prognosticator, says the ground hog theory will hold good and we will have an early spring, but there will be lots of cold weather before the martens come again.

To The Teachers of Bandera County.

I hereby call a meeting of the County Executive Committee of the Interscolastic League to be held at the Bandera court house February 10, at 1 p. m. for the purpose of transacting the following business.

(1) To agree definitely upon the date for holding the County Meet, which perhaps should be either the 17th or the 24th of March.

(2) To ascertain definitely how the expenses of the Meet are to be defrayed.

(3) To select a committee to procure medals, etc., to be awarded at the Meet.

(4) To recommend to the State Executive someone to succeed me as Director General of the Interscholastic League of Bandera county, from which position the condition of my health, with other causes, the mention of which is not here necessary, compels me to resign.

(5) To attend to such matters as may present themselves for consideration.

As I might not be able to attend this meeting, I wish to thank the teachers of Bandera County for the confidence you have reposed in me and to wish you great success in this and all other lines of activity.

Respectfully,

INCOME TAX FACTS.

Revenue officers are visiting every county in the United States to aid taxpayers in the preparation of their income tax returns for the year 1922. Information concerning the date of their arrival and the location of their offices may be obtained by writing the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer lives.

Forms for filing returns of individual net income for the year 1922 are being sent to taxpayers who filed returns for the year 1921. Failure to receive a form however, does not relieve the taxpayer of his obligation to file a return and pay tax on time, on or before March 15th, 1923. The forms, 1040A for filing returns of net income $5,000 and less and 1040 for filing returns of net income in excess of $5000 may be obtained from collectors of internal revenue and deputy collectors.

Returns are required of every single person whose net income for 1922 was $1,000 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more and of every married person whose net income was $2,000 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more. Careful study of the instructions on the forms will aid in making a correct return.

THE STORY OF THE PLAY.

The play is the parable of a mother's love triumphant over the neglect and ingratitude of her children, and is arranged as a drama in three acts.

The action of the play takes place in the tiny village of Canton in northern New York; the scene of the entire action being laid in the front "settin' room" of Aunt Deborah Underhill's farmhouse. Aunt Deborah is a blessed old Saint in Israel, nearly seventy years old, the widow of a Deacon and the mother of four boys and two girls. All have married and moved away from the old home with the exception of John and Charlie. John is the youngest and the idol of his mother's heart. He is led astray by evil companions and they find in him a weak and subservient tool for their misdeeds.

The play opens with a rehearsal of the village choir with numerous interruptions from Jermiah Gosling, a comical country boy always trying to swop something, and from Miss Lowiny Loviny Custard, the widow of a Deacon and the mother of four boys and two girls. John breaks up the meeting by bringing home a poor exhausted tramp whom he had found sick and starving by the wayside. Aunt Deb cites the parable of the Good Samaritan and gives aid to the wanderer. The tramp tells the story of his life ruined by drink and Aunt Deb gives him money to return to his home in Buffalo.

John is much impressed by the tramp's story and takes a vow never to drink another drop of liquor while he lives. Charley, the elder brother, brings his fiancee in for tea and the happy family is just about to begin the evening meal when an ominous knock is heard at the door. Gloriana, the faithful hired help, opens the door and admits the Sheriff. John is arrested and despite his protestations of innocence is dragged away to jail.

Three years pass and no word has been heard of John, although his innocence has been proved and he has been released from jail. Charley persuades his mother (Aunt Deb) to put a mortgage on the old home in order to give him a start in the city. She does so against the advice of the faithful Gloriana. It is a snowy winter night and as Aunt Deb sits af the melodeon singing "Where is my Wandering Boy Tonight," John appears in the doorway but does not allow his mother to see him. A merry sleighing party arrives bound for the singing school and the household joins in the party. John totters in, a starving, homeless tramp. He is about to steal his mother's savings when Enoch Rone, the tramp of Act1 but now a prosperous merchant, intercepts him and in a dramatic scene between the two men starts John for Oklahoma and a new life.

In the third act Aunt Deb is bound for the poor-house but is saved from the disgrace by the arrival of John, a prosperous and respected fine miner in Oklahoma. The villagers drop in for a surprise party and all sing the Doxology.

Miss Custard, the old maid who recites, and Jerry Gosling, the funny country boy, are great comedy parts and keep the audience in rapturs of laughter all the time they are on the stage, while Aunt Deb, John and Enoch Rone are the three dramatic parts that offer great opportunity for ambitious amateurs to make a "hit" with their audiences.

H. BURNS, Tarpley, Texas

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

I chose the river route, aiming to reach the wooded river bottoms below the ford. This route necessarily led me across the court house square, just before turning into which, I saw a body of horsemen loafing in the street and going in the direction of the captain's office. These appeared to be men—not boys,—they were well mounted, and five men on a large white horse. I turned aside and waited several minutes for these men to get out of sight, and by this act I lost Bandelin Lane, which came near being my undoing. In fact, it seems they had reached the office before I got across the square, and evidently it had been seen while trying to avoid them. At all events, my sudden flight had doubtless been discovered about the time they rode up to the captain's office. To avoid attracting notice, I rode in a trot across the court house square and when I turned into the old road leading down the river I put my horse at a good speed and gone but a short distance when to my utter chagrin, I found that a recent rise in the Colorado had washed out the bank up to the fence. The road had come to the "jumping place," where a high fence was of rails and "staked and ridered." I rode up and tried to throw off some rails; failing in this effort, I put the animal at and finally succeeded in teaging down the fence so my horse could leap over into the field. I remounted and as my horse cleared the fence, my morral became unfastened and fell to the ground, causing another moment's delay while recovering it. In the meantime, a time, and seconds were most precious then. When I had secured my morral, I heard the sound of horses' feet and glancing back, behold, there came those wicked "Heel-Flies!" There were four of them and they were coming down that road at full speed, not over 250 yards distant, and when they saw I had discovered them they opened fire with their pistols, even at that great distance, and began yelling at me to halt and surrender.

The recent rise in the Colorado had filled the slough or draw, in the field with water which now stood in places, although the waters of the river had subsided. The draw remained a slough of mud and slime and had the appearance of an unfathomable bog, but as I was hemmed and cornered I must cross it or be captured. It was my only means of escape and I was fully determined not to be caught again by these tatterdemaleons. My resolve was formed on the instant and putting spurs to my horse, he was soon flank in mud and slime. My valliant pursuers were still blazing away at me and the bullets were throwing up mud or water in my face, I wondered if they were firing into the air merely to make a noise and to keep up the excitement. The width of this bog could not have exceeded forty feet and it was only after a most desperate struggle that my faithful horse reached the opposite bank where the ground was firm.

When once across the swag, horse and rider covered with mud I turned to see how the pursuit were progressing. They had reached the gap I had made in the fence and one of the rascals had dismounted to throw down another rail or two. When I saw this I felt greatly relieved. My horse had leaped through that gap with all speed when I saw that, in order to get their nags over, they had to throw off more rails, I knew that such an outfit would never catch me. In truth, I became amused at the thought and like wanton boys in the sport of playing "base" I was ready to "give them a dare."

In order to escape any stray bullets which might accidently hit me I galloped off a short distance in the direction of the west string of the field fence which bordered on the open plain below, southwest of town. Here I halted, turned and faced the pursuing quartette to see if they hadn't any more sense than to ride into that mudhole. When they saw this movement they halted near the edge of the bog and with a profusion of great oaths ordered me to recross and surrender, else they would open fire on me. I replied in less than no time I would be in h—l. I turned my horse as if to flight out, seeing which, the four bravos dashed like ducks into that bog. It stood to see the fun, and to witness the struggle of those poor boys and their beasts would have been most pitiful under any other circumstances, yet, I was so amused and elated over their discomfiture that I shouted with merriment. It was a sight long to be remembered. Three of the horses became bogged down, plunged and the antics of those three defenders of their country, while floundering around in that mud hole was a sight to make a sphinx roar with laughter. The ludicrous phase of the situation caused me to forget all caution, which came near proving my ruin. Only one horse and rider made it across to solid ground, and seeing their sad plight, I was seized with the foolish impulse to capture the whole squad. With drawn pistol and a whoop I bore down upon the chap who had reached dry ground and ordered him to surrender, and in so doing I employed about as plain English as he had ever been accustomed to hearing when "cussing" Union men in the country or guarding them in prisons. The poor fellow seemed frightened to death and throwing up his hands in muddy hands, cried out "For the Lawd's sake, Mister, don't shoot! You wouldn't shoot an unarmed man, would ye? You ain't, is you?" "Mister, I'm not going to shoot, but I'm not the least bit afraid of you, and I'll blow out your infernal brains!" "Mister, I ain't got no paint got no pistol, I drapped hit in that thar mud hole. I hain't got a thing to shoot with," said he, "an I'se a'most a notion to kill all you scoundrels; you have tried to kill me," I said addressing the four. One of them, all of whom were beginning back to dry land on the opposite side said: "We warn't tryin' ter hit ye, Mister; we wus just a-shootin' to see ye run!" I replied that I believed one of them had, but I had no desire to injure either of them. In truth I pitied, rather than censured, those poor misguided boys.

All this occurred in much less time than it takes to relate it, and during that brief time a graver danger confronted me. While bandying words with those slime-besmeared boys at the slough, I chanced to look in the direction of town and saw a body of horsemen coming down the west string of the fence on the outside, and under whip as if to cut me off and catch me, and one of these mounted on a large white horse. Instantly the one I had noticed before crossing the public square. I wheeled my horse and sped away without dismounting, threw off a few rails and my horse cleared it with apparent ease. When these approaching horsemen saw me break from the slough, they raised a yell, increased their speed, and began to shoot. I did not take time to count them but I would have guessed there were at least fifteen and probably as many as twenty. They did not open fire with their pistols until I had passed over the fence, by which time they were near enough to make their bullets whiz unpleasantly close.

Before me lay the open plain to the west of the ridge surmounted by town and where Halletsville road let the plain and ascended to the hill or ridge. The east side of the ridge, that next to the place was bare of timber growth, the prairie extending to the crest of the ridge where a dense undergrowth set in, and extended westward for several miles. The race for life and liberty was now on, and the brush over the ridge was the goal. I had a splendid start. Of my horse's mettal and endurance of my horse and, with the exception of that large white horse, who was now approaching the rest, I felt confident that I could outstrip them and escape. I did not believe they would shoot to disable my horse. They would shoot him sure enough to stop for the rider. Looking back, half way across the plain, I saw the white horse still in the lead and gaining on me, while three others were close at his heels. At the same time I saw several horsemen pouring out of town and I wondered if every "Heel-Fly" in the country had joined in the chase. It was a contest of speed and endurance between the white horse and animal I rode, and before two thirds of the distance (about a mile) had been covered, I found the space was lengthening between pursuers and pursued. When I turned the crest of the hill where the chaparral set in, I turned to face the enemy. The man on the white horse and three others had turned like imitation and had started up the ascent. A hasty glance showed a straggling string of horsemen—all enlisted in the chase. I waved my hat gave a cheer and offered those nearest me a very profane remark in good, clear, plain English, turned the crest of the ridge and took to the brush, safe, sound and free!

As before stated, the timber extended from the crown of this ridge which ran parallel with the river valley, several miles. This forest was a thick growth of Black Jack and other species of timber peculiar to South Texas, and after having ridden a few miles at a gait as fast as the undergrowth would permit, I slackened my rein and allowed my horse to recover up to some extent from the effects of the chase. I felt that I was safe, for the reason that nothing but a mounted man could follow my trail in that wilderness. I bore off in a southwesterly course and about ten miles out from Columbus I struck the old Atascosito trail which I followed the remainder of the day. During the preceeding twenty-four hours of the day a cold wind had been blowing out of the east, and about 1 o'clock that evening rain set in and continued in a steady downpour until midnight. This rain, driven by a cold east wind, chilled me through and caused intense suffering. Late in the evening, as I approached the Navidad river, I saw through the sheets of falling rain a cabin in the distance and decided to seek shelter there for the night. It seemed a lonely habitation, with no other settlement near and was directly on the bank overlooking the Navidad, which was considerably swollen and was still rising from the day's flood of rain. The storm was too fierce for me to think of lying out under a tree all night, and I would risk the shelter of that lonely cabin. A lady came to the door when I rode up and in quick, hearty response to my request for a night's shelter, said: "Why yes, get down and come right in out of the rain. We have not much room and our fare is very humble, but you are very welcome." I dismounted and her little son, a manly lad, took my horse, saying: "You are wet and cold, go into the fire, I will take care of your horse." As I stepped on the little cabin porch the lady met me at the door and with the reassure me, said: "I live alone here with my three children and we are very poor, but I want you to feel as welcome as if you were under your father's roof." Cheering words! Words that each stranger and wayfarer heard during he early days in Texas! A glowing fire burned in the little cabin fireplace and while seated before it and answering questions, I began to survey the surrounding. There was no fence about the premises, and through a small window near where I sat I saw the boy lead my horse to a clapboard shed about thirty steps north of the cabin, and remove my saddle, which he hung on a peg. I saw him take my pistol from the morral

VANDERPOOL.

Vanderpool, Texas, Feb. 10.—The citizens of Vanderpool are rejoicing over the great benefit the snow was to the country here.

Mrs. Frank Rogers and two little sons have returned to their home at Laguna after a visit to her father, J. M. Bridges, who is just recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

Harvey Kennard has gon to Fisher county. His wife and little daughter will visit relatives here awhile longer.

Guy Steward, of Leakey, has purchased the A. J.Woodard drug store and residence and Mr. Woodard and family have moved to their place in Sabinal.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam O'Bryant left last week for Selma, California, where they will reside.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes of Grandbury, came in a few days ago to spend the winter with their daughter, Mrs. Al Masters and family.

Several of the Vanderpool citizens met at the school building recently and made eight large seats for school and church purposes.

G. M. Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Robison went to Sabinal Friday. Mrs. Robison will spend a few days there with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair.

We are glad to report that Miss Genie Love and Miss Xina Casparis are fast recovering from the flu. Both young ladies being away from home, their parents were very uneasy about them. Tife former is one of Sutonal's efficient telephone operators and the latter is a successful teacher at Spicewood, Texas.

Miss Gracie Love went over to Tuff today to visit Misses Irene and Sadie Adams.

Report comes that Jim Hester, former pioneer citizen of this county, but now residing at Zephyr, Texas, is very low with pneumonia. Mr Hester is about seventy-five years old, and is well known to many of our people, who hope he will soon recover.

The total number of poll taxes paid in the different precincts of the county given as follows: Bandera 415; Pipe Creek, 135; Medina, 253; Lima 59; Tarpley, 97; Taylor, 85; Vanderpool, 88; Tuff, 47; Blackett, 11; Polly 27; Total, 1,217.

Fred Thalmann shipped a couple of carloads of baby beeves to market last week which he sold at top prices. Mr. Thalmann had these beeves on feed for several weeks and they weighed out very satisfactorily.

Warren Hunter will put on a radio concert at the school auditarium tonight, beginning at 7:15 sharp. He has perfected his powerful receiving set and equipped it with necessary attachments to bring in radio stuff loud enough to hear a block away. Tonight concerts that will be broadcasted from San Antonio, Kansas City, Davenport Iowa, Atlanta, Georgia and other big stations will be received by all who attend the concert at the school auditorium. This will be the first radio concert ever given in Bandera, and should attract a large crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Callaham and son, John, were here from their ranch below Pipe Creek yesterday and favored this office with an appreciated visit. They are boosters for their community and say it is one of the most prosperous sections of the county. Mr. Callaham informed us that during 1922 more than $30,000 worth of butter and eggs were marketed from Pipe Creek, to say nothing of chickens and turkeys, and this year promises to be more productive than last year.

Hear real music at the Radio Concert at the school auditorium tonight. Begins at 7:15 sharp.

FIRST STATE BANK

of Bandera, Texas

District court is in session at Kerrville this week. A number of witnesses in the case of State vs. Chas. Merritt, charged with burglary of the First National Bank of Bandera, went over to be present when the case was called for trial yesterday. This case was transferred from Bandera to Kerr county for trial at the spring term 1922, but when called for he defendant was absent and bond was declared forfeited. He was located in a prison in Kansas and extradited. Another one of he men implicated in the blowing of the First National Bank safe, Johnny Odell, was tried in Bandera and given five years in the penitentiary. His case is now on appeal. The third man, Walter McMillan, died in San Antonio just a few days ago.

F. A. Masters was in to see us yesterday and said the bridge at Ranger Crossing will be finished this week, and after being allowed to "set" awhile will be opened for traffic in about three weeks, at which time the opening would probably be celebrated with a picnic.

The First State Bank of Bandera was this week designated as county depository by the county commissioners, the bid of that institution being 2.75 per cent interest on county funds.

Stone Work Completed.

The stone work on the new two story building for St. Joseph's school was finished yesterday, and the Catholic ladies treated the workmen to a feast of cake, pie, coffee and tamales. T. E. Blunt, the local timer, will begin putting on the roof in a few days. Carpenters are now engaged in doing the woodwork.

Inspection Day.

February 22nd will be inspection day in Bandera. Keep your eyes in the pen so that I can inspect them.—A. G. Jureczki, Inspector.

Wilson Clark was among the visitors in the city yesterday.

Jolly Jim Newcomer, all the way from Pipe Creek, was browsing around town yesterday.

Mrs. Bud Keese spent Sunday with her son, Jeff Keese.

A party was enjoyed by all at Tom Davis' Saturday night.

Mrs. Rugh on a Vacation.

Mrs. C. R. Rugh, matron of the City Hotel, has gone to Louisiana on a few weeks vacation, and since arriving there writes the New Era as follows:

Mr. Hunter:

Duane and I left home on last Tuesday with Mr. Bills, going via Hondo, then taking a bus to the Alamo City. On Wednesday we took the I. & G. N. train for Marshall, Texas, where we had to change cars for Mooringsport. Here we had to wait two hours. I met up with some excellent people from Oil City, and they were so nice and agreeable that we joined them and took a bus to Shreveport, La., and in forty minutes after we had reached Shreveport a bus left there for Mooringsport, a distance of 22 miles, the fare being fifty cents for grown people and twenty-five cents orf children. This is Sunday 2. p. m. and it is pouring down rain. The people here pay no attention to rain. We are just starting to a picture show at Oil City, four miles from here. We go to one every day. This country is magnificent. We are just across the lake from Mooringsport, and it is very beautiful; so much to see and all so new, that I am enjoying every minute. Duane is having the time of his life.

MRS. RUGH.

Take your shoes to C. W. Davis the shoe doctor.

TARPLEY TOPICS.

J. W. Glass and R. E. Willis made a business trip to San Antonio last week and brought back a truck load of supplies.

Mrs. Hattie Billings visited Mrs. Jim Glass last week.

Rev. Canafax came over Sunday, but went back before church. A large crowd was out, and we had a good dinner. I was there, and I know what a good dinner is. We learned later that Bro. Canafax thought it was going to rain last why he went home. But he is a stranger in these parts to think it might rain.

Grandma Singleton is very sick.

Jodie Graham has been quite ill for some time.

Mrs. Burns has returned from San Antonio. We are all glad to see her so well.

Wedding bells will soon be ringing here.

W. D. Glass was seen last Saturday driving some fat stock. Mr. Glass knows a fat cow when he sees one.

Mrs. McCarty visited Mrs. John Tyra last week.

Mrs. Saatthoff and Mrs. Jim Glass were guests of Mrs. Bryan Sparks one day last week.

Rev. Ray has been real sick for the past few days.

Our young folks have quit dancing since the snow. I think they all have the grip.

S. C. Fitzgerahl visited ur little burg with a truck load of groceries.

J. L. Tullis has sold his interest in the Kerrville Mountain Sun to C. E. and W. A. Salter who will continue to publish it as the first oldest weekly newspaper. The Mountain Sun is one of the best papers in this part of the state and is already booming for the interests of the Hill Country. We have never met the new owners of the firm, but we know C. E. Salter of old, and he is a live wire.

The Legislature now in session has passed several bills that will be of benefit to the general public. One, the Suffragette bill, by B. J. Stewart, is making its presence in the asphalt body felt by introducing several measures that apply to this region.

The new board of county commissioners met Monday and got right down to business. All of the members are new at the business except J. L. Bandy, Medina Creek commissioner, but they are going into the work like veterans and Several new business houses are to be erected in Bandera during the next few months we understand.

With the coming of the spring and summer months Bandera will get hundreds of tourists and visiting visitors. The word has gone forth that Bandera is located in the midst of a wonderfully picturesque region, and people who come here always go away with good words for our delightful region.

Radio is making wonderful strides. It is now possible to sit by your own fireside and listen to concerts given by broadcasting stations all over the United States, or to hear sermons delivered by preachers in their pulpits, and lectures and speeches made by the big men of the country. If you want a demonstration of the radio attend the concert to be given by Warren Hunter at the school auditorium tonight, beginning at 7:30.

Many of our readers are greatly interested in the story now appearing in the New Era, "Hoel Fly Time in Texas," and some can hardly wait for the next installment. The story will run for several weeks yet, and when it is concluded we will have another one that will be equally as thrilling. These stories were written by John Warren Hunter, the father of the New Era editor, several years ago.

Times Have Changed.

One of our best known citizens, who has fallen heir to his present name in financial circles but who has gotten his wealth by hard old work and saving, has consented to tell us something of the comparison of those days when he was going to the present day.

When eggs were three dozen for a twenty-five cents, butter was ten cents a pound and milk five cents a quart and the butcher gave away the liver and treated the kids to Bologna, that was life. Way, the hired girls received only $3.00 per a week and did the washing, but the women did not powder and paint—sin publish—smoke, play poker, vote and shake the shimmy. Almost all the men wore whiskers, bob, chewed tobacco on the side walks and cussed. Beer was five cents a quart and the lunch was free, women did not work, men worked ten hours a day and never dreamed of a strike. Tips were never given waiters, and the waiter's draffer was shiny. It is hard to believe it but then a Kerosene Hanging lamp and a Stereoscope in a parlor were features. An operation for appendicitis was unheard of, and Microbes were mysteries, but folks lived to a good old age and every year walked miles to watch their corn grow. Today you know everyone rides in automobiles or flies, plays golf, shoots craps plays the piano with their feet, goes to movies nightly, smokes cigarettes, drinks Bunkie Yum, blames the high cost of living on the Republican Party, never expects to be alive same day they get up, but think they are having a wonderful time and altho we are not for Suffragette, we think Mr. B. J. Stewart, is making his presence in the asphalt body felt by introducing several measures that apply to this region.

A few days ago some miscreant without regard for other people's rights or property, stole down about two hundred yards of Wm. Turner's pasture fence and destroyed about a good substantial gate that led into his pasture. Mr. Turner is justly indignant over the outrage committed upon him with regard and if he succeeds in uncovering certain clues that he is following some steps are going to pay dearly for their devilment.

D. H. D. White of Greenwood, Miss., sends in a donation of five dollars to the Bandera Cemetery Association. Mr. White formerly lived in this county, and in writing to Mrs. Lee Risinger encloses the donation he said: "I am glad the ladies have taken up this cause and if I can be of any assistance please feel at liberty to call on me. I have been for years associated with cemetery work and am now a member of the National Association. I wish I could have seen you when I was in Texas last winter. My earliest recollection of you and Janet was when the stove pipe fell at the school house and cut a deep gash in Janet's head. Yes, and my sister Lorena were scared almost to death. I'll never forget it.

The following story appeared in the Omaha Bee on 1923 and we here reproduce it for the reason that the young man, Lester B. Christy, mentioned in the story is a cousin to Mr. J. A. Head of Bandera:

Lester B. Christy, employe of the Omaha Auto Sales Company, 2020 Farnam street, would not be an employe of the Omaha Auto Sales Company at any other company if he had not carried a Bible with him while he was fighting in he Argonne Forest, France. Mr. Christy, a young "Sergeant" Walter Head, president of the Omaha National Bank, and lives with the Head family at the Blackstone hotel since he returned here three weeks ago from his home in Stonerville, Mo. The Bible, with the German machine gun bullet imbedded in it, young Christy's most prized relic of the great war is an Oxford Bible, 6½ inches thick and 4½ inches wide, leather bound with brass and provided with a clasp. On the front page, the inscription, "Presented to Lester Christy by his Sunday school teacher, Mattie Peterson." When America entered the great war Lester Christy was a member of the National Guard company of his home town and it wasn't long before he and his pals were "over there" in the battlefields. When the company went away to camp Lester's mother, Mrs. Emma Christy, sister of Postmaster Fagan, presented him with other home things and also promised her son to keep it always near him. In the reorganization of the National Guard Lester became a corporal in Company G, 140th Infantry, a part of the 35th Division. The regiment sailed for Liverpool the latter part of March, 1918, on the "Shropshire." From Liverpool they went to Southampton, then across the channel to Le Havre and into a fighting sector held by the British.

In early September the regiment took part in the St. Mihiel drive, and on September 26 began fighting in the Argonne. "I remember the third day of the battle," said Lester, "on Friday, September 29, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. We received our orders for the fourth time and were charging when the machine gun bullet struck me and I went down and out. The Bible, which I carried in a pocket right over my heart, caught the machine gun bullet, deflected it downward, away from my heart and into the abdomen, breaking three ribs before it stopped. For two days I lay in the shell-torn forest before the stretcher-bearers reached me. During that time I had no food. Other wounded men lay around me, moaning, and some of them died. First Lieutenant Scott of my company lost a leg there. A strange thing was that I was finally picked up by Paul Sholes, a litter-bearer from my home town in Missouri. The litter-bearers took me back about a kilometer to a first aid station. From there I was removed to a hospital at Chateau-Thierry, then Paris, and still later to Nantes." Young Christy is very reluctant to talk about his war experiences. He was here two weeks before his uncle could get him to say a word about the fighting in France. Finally the uncle took him to one side and insisted and demanded with all the strength of his forceful personality that he tell him the story of the Bible and the machine gun bullet. The bullet is of about .30-30 calibre, a little over one inch long, pointed in shape and with a hard nose. It entered the book at the back and the first words it pierced were "THE END," on the last page and the last words of Revelation, "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen." Tearing through the book in a slanting direction the bullet came out of the lower edge after penetrating 600 pages. Corporal Christy received his discharge at Camp Funston May 11, 1919, and went home for a long rest. He came to Omaha last month and expects to grow up with the country and "Uncle Walter."

Chas. L. Fagan of Rahway, New Jersey, sends in his renewal to the New Era, and expresses kind wishes for the success of the great family weekly. Mr. Fagan visited Bandera about a year ago and is greatly interested in this section. He made many friends while here who hope he will soon return and spend another enjoyable season with us.

A. O. Andress Married.

The following was published in the Douglas, Arizona, Dispatch January 21. It will be of interest to many of our readers. The groom, A. O. Andress, was raised in Bandera county.

Miss Agness Gillig and O. A. Andress were married at the Christian church last evening at 7 o'clock, Rev. G. E. Osborn officiating. Only a few intimate friends of the contracting parties were present. Miss Gillig has been a resident of Douglas counties for nearly four years, coming here from Glendale, Maricopa county, where her parents later reside. She is well known in Douglas to a large circle of friends and acquaintances having been occupied as Deputy County Clerk for the past four years. She has been a conscientious worker and a faithful and loyal employe and one who will be hard to lose.

Mr. Andress is employed as a Copper Queen Smelter and has resided in Douglas since 1920. He is highly respected and well thought of by his employers and fellow workmen. The Dispatch joins their numerous friends in wishing them many years of wedded happiness. May contentment and prosperity be with them to the end of their days.

HEEL-FLY TIME IN TEXAS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

Groping my way in the dark-ness, I found my saddle where I had seen the boy place it, my pistol was in the morral undisturbed, and my quirt was where I had left it, at the horn of my saddle! What could all this mean? Could it be possible those rascals were in the house asleep waiting for daylight in which to catch me? My first impulse was to saddle my horse, lead him some distance up the river tie him in a thicket, then go other by-day—but this morning—back and look for the enemy's horses and if found to get off with them, but I gave up this idea and made my way to the shed where my stock. I searched carefully about the premises and found no horses, and there were no saddles on the little pens in about the barn-shed. Going to the south end of the house, I discovered a ray of light beaming through a small chink in the log wall. In the wall of the house. Stealthily drawing near I didn't tarry long enough to give peeped through this little aperture and saw the lady seated by the dining table entertaining a gentleman by the dim glow of a grease lamp. The fire burned low in the rude chimney place and the stillness was broken only by Mexican which blew out of the north. By this time I located the doorway of this shed room and at this door I rapped lightly. Without waiting the lady bounded to the door, threw it open and said: "Come fly in the place right in! Arch you nearly Ironzen? Where in the world have you been? I have been nearly frantic. I feared you had got drowned out there in the Quat stream." I felt elated at the sound of her loud tone of voice; if she had flies chanced to be asleep in the adjoining room her clatter would wake them and I might have to take to high water again, and, shivering with cold, I cut her off by stammering out: "Wh—whe— where's the He—heel-flies?" right in her face. At this she dropped the poker and with which she was stirring the embers, straightened shoulder and gave forth a loud laughter. "Heel-Flies!" she fairly shouted. Then another parosym of laughter. Recovering and merriment in her voice: "Heel-Flies! Why there hasn't been a heel-fly on this place for more than a week and I believe there isn't one nearer than Columbus. You don't hear of heel-flies stirring out in this kind of weather. Oh, you silly boy!" and this was followed by another outburst of laughter. But I was relieved and I did not care how much she laughed so I felt real sheepish at having been so easily scared off in that storm and with intervals of merriment over my plight, the lady had me more fuel to the little fire place and soon a roaring fire was blazing on the hearth. Changing her tone to a more serious, she said: "Now sit over here and get warm. I am sorry I have no dry clothes to give you; sit here and while your clothes are drying by the fire I will prepare you something to eat. Poor boy! I know you are hungry."

Forty-eight years have sped by since that memorable night and never at a feast of any kind have I enjoyed a better meal than that served by the noble lady on that stormy night in the wilds of the Navidad. Dried beef and cooked corn pone was the menu. It was all she had to serve and it came with a Texas mother's blessing, and appetite gave relish to the humble fare. While partaking of this repast, the lady, whose name was Mrs. Davis, gave account of the cause that led to my scare and stampede. She stated:

"Those men you saw were not heel flies. In fact they too, were running from the Home Guards. One of them is my brother and lives three miles below here on the river. My brother and one of those who called him out conscripted about a year ago and detailed to drive teams in Johnson & Rhine's cotton trains. They made one trip with the big wagon ox trains to Brownsville and came near going over into Mexico, but finally decided to stay awhile longer with the train. This team wintered at Sweet Home over in Lavaca and about a month ago these two boys, with others, received orders very similar to those in Houston. This they knew meant hard service in the army and they resolved to go to Mexico. They left the cotton train at Sweet Home and instead of going to Houston they came home, and before they could get ready to leave for Mexico they were reported as deserters and were given a week of trouble by their fellows and were finally captured a week ago and taken to the guard house in Columbus. They were to be taken to Harrisburg tomorrow—I mean today, as it is now past midnight and the beginning of another day—but this morning—yesterday morning the men held in guard there made a break for liberty and all got away, and the three men you saw tonight were among the number, who escaped and were making for home and the brush all parts. My brother, Champ Davis, is in this same detachment with the Bexar Rifles, under command of Benavide's regiment at Rancho Davis on the Rio Grande. He had been dodging around town and was living at a boarding house. They camped at Columbus and was badly wanted. At last he was arrested by a bunch of heel flies and brought to town, where he made a break to get away. Every heel fly in the place except two, who were on duty at the guard house, mounted and joined in the chase, and when last seen they were closing in on him and they had surrounded and captured the poor fellow. One of the guards, seeing that all the heel-flies had joined in the chase said, "Now boys is our chance!" and made a break for the river. They are there now, and since I rapped lightly. Without waiting the lady bounded to the door, threw it open and said: "Come fly in the place right in! Arch you nearly Ironzen? Where in the world have you been? I have been nearly frantic. I feared you had got drowned out there in the Quat stream." I felt elated at the sound of her loud tone of voice; if the heel flies chanced to be asleep in the adjoining room her clatter would wake them and I might have to take to high water again, and, shivering with cold, I cut her off by stammering out: "Wh—whe— where's the He—heel-flies?" right in her face. At this she dropped the poker and with which she was stirring the embers, straightened shoulder and gave forth a loud laughter. "Heel-Flies!" she fairly shouted. Then another parosym of laughter. Recovering and merriment in her voice: "Heel-Flies! Why there hasn't been a heel-fly on this place for more than a week and I believe there isn't one nearer than Columbus. You don't hear of heel-flies stirring out in this kind of weather. Oh, you silly boy!" and this was followed by another outburst of laughter. But I was relieved and I did not care how much she laughed so I felt real sheepish at having been so easily scared off in that storm and wholly dependent on her father, I was anxious for an explanation. who was old and poor and infirm to render much assistance. I told her of my going to Mexico in order to keep out of an army, my mission to Columbus, and that I was the supposed deserter they had chased out of Columbus, and that I was on my way to join the Matamoras and if her brother and friends wanted to join me, I knew the road and could take them there all right. With a half determined men, I could clear the road of any gang of heel flies we might encounter. "Make them come off and have a thicket, and horses, swim rivers, hide in the brush and keep company with the owls!" said she, with a laugh that betokened nothing but fear as merriment, and I was abashed by the force of that remark.

It must have been 3 o'clock in the morning when I tumbled down on the rude pallet that good mother spread for me on the floor of the little shed room. The rain had ceased, the clouds had rolled and the north wind roared without and I slept until awakened by the little boy just as the sun began to shine on the plains of the Nueces. "You have no time to lose," said my good hostess. "The heel flies will swarm along the Navidad in search of my brother and the other two men and you had better make tracks." I told her I aimed to reach the McDonald settlement on the Lavaca and remain there a few days, and if she would direct me to where her brother lived I would ride by and see him. She said he broke and the boys with him were well acquainted on the Lavaca and that doubtless they were at that moment on their way to the "Southern Cross" ranch on the Lavaca river. They knew the Hogans, McDonalds, Tates, Heathes and Pontons, and that her brother was courting a Miss Sue Chandler, who lived near Dr. Ponton's, and if I would be on the lookout I could probably see him before he started to Mexico.

Breakfast, the same humble fare—corn pone and dried beef—over, I prepared to take my leave of this interesting family. Before the war this noble woman, accompanied by her husband and parents, left Ohio and came to Texas and had begun to establish a pretty home in the wilderness, when the war came on and the husband had to either take up arms and join in the slaughter of his kindred and countrymen, or seek asylum in a foreign land. He chose the latter and here, by way of parenthesis, I wish to say that up to July, 1912, no word had been heard from him by his family. Not only gratitude but deep compassion, for this poor brave woman and her little children, two bright little girls and the boy, Davy Crockett. These little children told me that they had had no meat during the past two months and their clothes, although tidy and clean, showed age and long usage. "If you see my papa in Mexico, tell him we pray every night for him and all the time. Mama says God will bring him back to us when the war is over," was the message given me by the youngest of the two little girls. The mother gave a long message of but of love, hope and Christian faith and trust to be delivered to the husband in the event that I should meet him. Oh, the short, simple and oftimes pathetic annals of the poor! A battle fought and lost and left them better than I had found them. It was all a perfect mystery, as I had none that I could call my own; at any rate I would have been all the same, and the joy of giving to that distressed mother and her little helpless children has lasted me to this all these years. Truly it is more blessed to give than to receive.

It was a bright spring morning, the sun unclouded, the air sharp and bright and clear and the air was vibrant with bird song. I swam the Navidad and spaded my horse for Mayo's Mill on the Lavaca. The flat prairies in most places were covered with water from the late rains, and my progress necessarily slow. About 11 o'clock I came to a mott of timber where I found a spot comparatively dry and here I dismounted and allowed my horse to rest and graze a couple of hours. While he grazed near the copse, I lay down and slept soundly for about an hour when a shrill voice awakened me. For a moment I was completely addled, but when I recovered my senses and took in the situation, my surprise was beyond expression. My visitor was a woman! Superbly mounted, wearing a black dress and sunbonnet, sitting as erect as a cavalry officer, with a six-shooter hanging at her belt, complexion once fair but now swarthy from exposure to sun and weather, with steel-blue eyes that seemed to penetrate the innermost recesses of the soul—this, in brief, is a hasty outline of my visitor—Sally Skull!

Now no one lived for any length of time in South Texas before the war, knew this remarkable woman, and there are those after all that Texas who yet remember Old Sally Skull, who was perhaps the only female desperado, during her career, that operated between the Sabine and the Rio Grande. Sally was once a Miss Newman, so I have been told, and was of good parentage. By marriage she was related to Creed Taylor and Tumlison's and for a number of years moved in the best society, but she fell and the remainder of her life was spent in camp or on the road.

Commissioners' Court.

The regular session of commissioners court adjourned last Friday after transacting considerable routine business, examining and approving quarterly reports of the various county officers, and acting upon matters of public nature, among which was the passing of an order giving the Bandera County Fair the right to control all streets around the block on which the Bandera & Farmers warehouse is situated in order to keep off all obnoxious shows of every character during the fair. J. R. Holt, commissioner of precinct No. 1, was instructed to fix up the fence around the court house to keep out roaming stock. Agreement was reached with the Cooper dip concern for payment for dipping solution used last year to the amount of over $2,000. Bond of the First State Bank of Bandera as county depository was approved. Joe G. Montague was appointed attorney to look after certain matters pertaining to Bandera school lands.

The play, "An Old Fashioned Mother," to be given by the B. Y. P. U. and advertised to take place next Friday night, has been postponed indefinitely on account of the influenza epidemic. Due announcement will be made when the date is set for its presentation.

There. But the impulse was suppressed, when I reflected that I knew not one of the refugees who had gathered there, and should I succeed in finding them, possibly I might be looked upon as a spy! and fare worse than if in the hands of the hot-blooded Finns. I decided to face the situation boldly, trust to my good fortune and take chances. The morrow would decide. The next morning my bed-fellow became quite congenial and Mr. Harper was all smiles and good humor. He had belonged to Capt. Liddell's company, Gould's regiment. His company was organized in Hopkins county, had become tired of war, nearly all had deserted and were then leading the heedless a merry measure in the Sulphur Bottoms. Although tired of a soldier's life, he was too proud to desert and would stay in the army so long as his command stayed where there was no fighting to do, but if ordered east for desperate service he would hit the breeze for Mexico. Others had gone over there and were making five dollars a day, he had been told, and he could go, where any other man could go. The Confederacy was busted anyway, and it was only a matter of time when every man could go home. San Antonio was reached about 11 o'clock. Harper said and carefully sizing me up, decided that he was a deserter. Bernhard, will hang here Friday morning at 11 o'clock. Governor Neff has declined to commute the sentence of the condemned man, and when attorneys who had interested themselves in securing a reprieve or a commutation of the sentence called at the governor's office in Austin this afternoon, the governor's secretary informed them that Governor Neff was out, but had left word that he saw no reason why the law should not be allowed to take its course.

HEEL-FLY TIME IN TEXAS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

Sally Skull spoke Spanish with the fluency of a native and kept in her employ a number of desperate Mexicans whom she ruled with the iron grasp of a despot. With these she would make long journeys to the Rio Grande where, through questionable methods she secured large droves of horses. These were driven to Louisiana and sold. This occupation was followed until the breaking out of the Civil War, after which Old Sally fitted out a mule train of several wagons, with Mexican teamsters, and engaged in hauling cotton to the Rio Grande.

I met Sally at Rancho Las Animas, near Brownsville, the year before and subsequently had seen her several times in Matamoras, and strange to relate, she knew me when she aroused me from my sleep in that copse and heard my voice. She told me that her mule train was loaded with cotton for the Rio Grande, but owing to the bad weather she had lain in camp on the Lavaca near Zumwalt's corner. Here a number of her mules had strayed off or were stolen and she was then on her way to look for her stock on the Navidad, and seeing a horse near me at mott, she came by to investigate, and that accounted for her presence in that vast solitude. She told me that the heel-flies were numerous and active on the Lavaca and that unless I exercised the utmost caution they would sure catch me. With all of her faults she was never known to betray a friend and I made no hesitancy in telling her all my troubles and my situation. She told me of a family known as Somers. Thicket on the Lavaca, in which a number of men had found refuge from the conscript officers, and the heel-flies were organizing a raid on the thicket. She knew A. B. McDonald, Tom Hogan and the Tates, and told me they were good and true men and that I could rely upon them. Bidding this remarkable woman goodbye, I mounted and hastened forward to the Lavaca having received instructions from Old Sally as to the route leading to Mayo's Crossing.

Late in the evening I crossed the Lavaca by swimming it at Mayo's Mill. A short distance from the river I came into the road and fell in with a lone woman and the "pill bagger" I referred to. She informed me that she was a doctress, and such she proved to be. She told me his name was Bellah, and that he was the only practicing physician in all that region. He knew all the parties for whom I inquired, and gave me directions to reach McDonald's. He asked me to what command I belonged and seemed surprised when I told him I was a citizen of Mexico, did not intend expect to enlist in any army. I had cast aside all my disguise except the dress, and felt emboldened to face the situation now that I had so many sympathizers and friends. The doctor advised me to be on the look out for heel-flies, which he said were very numerous and troublesome, and if I remained long they would be after me. I told him I had heard that it would be difficult for the heel-flies to catch a man if he once got into the Somers Thicket, which I supposed was somewhere in that section. He replied that was even true and that they were riding over a part of the Somers' League and that along the river a mile below the Somers' house I came in. It covered a large scope of country. It was densely timbered and was a wilderness of underbrush, vines and cane, with long moss pendant from the larger timber, with here and there an open glade and that when a man sought concealment there it was almost impossible to get him out. A hiding place for criminals and outlaws it was equal in every respect to the Big Thicket in North Texas, and there were quite a number of men at that moment hiding out from the heel-flies in Somers Thicket. Most of them lived in that section and they had to stay in the brush, go to Mexico or submit to conscription. They preferred the former. It was a long road to Mexico, and powerful risky. And thus the doctor rattled on, conveying the information I most feared until our paths diverged. He kindly insisted that I accompany him to his house which was near at hand but this I declined, as I was invited to, and an hour later I was at Mr. McDonald's gate. As I approached although it was growing dark, I noticed that Mr. McDonald's farm was in the midst of a heavy forest of postoak timber and the house and lots were near a small creek. When I hailed at the front gate an old man advanced and when I asked if Mr. McDonald lived there he said: "Yes sir, this is what he says he stays on," and he turned showed that he was a deaf man and such he proved to be. He told me his name was Bellah, and that he was the only practicing quire on yer saddle, the bowie knife cars' of yer side." But I framed an excuse and held on to the mornal and quirt.

And then was my introduction to Veteran A. B. McDonald and in the beginning of a friendship that grew with the lapse of time and strengthened, as I learned in the fullness of years. From his own lips I subsequently learned that he was an old pioneer, having come to Texas, was by the Colony, and for many years had lived on the border and participated in many battles with Indians and outlaw Mexicans along the frontier. He owned a nice home on Clark's Creek, and all Texans of those days--remembered his broad hospitality which extended to all who should go in that vicinity. At the time of my first visit he had a son in Joe Johnston's army. He had another son, Henry McDonald a boy of my own age, and a member of the Lavaca Home Guards; also a boy, Jesse, a bright lad of 14 years. Four beautiful girls added a charm to Mr. Harper's home, the two eldest, Lucretia and and Lizzie, being about grown. I mention these members of the family on account of the part they played in the serio-comic drama that followed my arrival in Lavaca.

It was about dark when I reached Mr. McDonald's and before entering the house I took him aside and told him my story. I concealed nothing from him, told him my mission, my arrest my escape, and the cause of my coming to him. He seemed to hesitate, but after I had assured me that he would do anything honorable to assist his old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Cox, and that I was worthy of their love, he came to his home and profession so far as it extended, adding that even if I was found under his roof sheltered by the heel-flies, the midest him, he knew too much and they knew he knew. He had opposed the war and if Texas had listened to Sam Houston, or if the people had obtained an honest count of the votes against secession she would have had no part in the unnatural war, nearly all the rest he was in for it, and had to make the best of it. He had advised his son to stay out of the army, but his other girls were gone, he was driven by an insane impulse to be a soldier, and to go out and fight for his country, when he knew it was only a matter of time he had a surfeit of military glory His next son, like all other boys of his age, was forced to enlist in the Home Guards or go to Old Mexico. Being only a boy he could not consent to his going across the Rio Grande so long as he was at home to remain with the Home Guards on duty near home. He despised the name Home Guards they were a shame and a crying shame, and were the contempt dreaded by the people they were supposed to protect ten times more than the Yankees. Held back by his son he could never regard as any of the excesses that had made the Home Guards a curse to the trils of all decent men, he, too, abhorred them, and only the force of circumstances held him to the ranks. I could see that the son, since not one of the McDonalds had ever been known to betray anyone who had broken bread at their table, and he also related that a number of his neighbors, men who had been in the army and had come home on a furlough, had been ordered back in turn to their command on account of the hardships of army life and the hopelessness of the Southern cause, had been listed as deserters and had been chased by the Home Guards into Somers Thicket on the Lavaca; that they were determined men, well armed and equipped to stand siege or to force sent against them. He seemed to be in touch with those men when he said they would try to make their way to Mexico at the proper time. He advised me to stay close about the place, that he would instruct Henry as to what he was in the event he should be questioned by any of his company but for me to keep my eye on that fellow Harper. He was a regular, and was not to be trusted too far. "Get all you can and keep all you get in the way of information and give as little as you can in return," was the closing admonition. The day seemed long, though in some respects pleasantly spent in the society of those worthy young ladies, whom I found to be Miss Lucretia and Lizzie. Mr. Harper left early and came back that evening with a comrade. It was plain that they came to see the girls and cared nothing for my presence. Henry McDonald went to his company in the afternoon. That night after supper and while the two Confederates were being entertained by the girls Mr. McDonald related to me the troubles of Joe Tate and others in the settlement. Tate had enlisted in the Confederate army and while his regiment was stationed on the Brazos he was tried by court-martial and sentenced to be shot. The night preceding the day set for the execution of the sentence, Joe was being guarded on the east bank of the river. The guards Confederate supper and shortly after having finished the meal it was discovered that there was no water in camp and all were thirsty after having eaten heartily of the fish. Not being fitted with canteens, Joe volunteered to bring the water, which was but a few steps down the bank. No one objected, and when he reached the margin of the river he plunged in and by diving and swimming he reached the opposite shore and escaped into the brush. Several volleys were fired towards him by the guards and a great outcry was raised, but Joe did not receive the shots were fired with any serious intent. He traveled several miles that night and concealed himself during the day. When he reached the Colorado several miles below Columbus he secured a mount from friends, and traveling at night, had in no way interfered with Clark's Creek near his home, where he learned that the Heel Flies had preceded him and were gathering there. Suspecting Joe to be so foolhardy as to walk into their trap. He was heavily armed by this time, and had by one of his friends sent word to the officer in command of the company on duty that he was in the country, and would remain, as he could not be taken alive. Crit Gollihar, Mr. McDonald said, was another "bad man" in the brush. He, too, had served in the army, but had been wounded at Shiloh and honorably discharged on account of disability. He had subsequently served in the Home Guards until after the east, and on his refusal to obey this order he was arrested and placed in the guard house at Hillsboville. With the aid of friends he escaped and was now with others in the Somers' Thicket. He mentioned others of his neighborhood who had passed through like experiences, most of whom were in the brush on the Somers League and he thought there were at least twenty or thirty men in the wilderness. They were well armed and mounted, thoroughly organized, and had a code of signals that were so well understood that the enemy could never surprise them. There were plenty of cattle in those extensive glades and thickets, and there was no lack of salt and bread as the latter was carried to them by friends. He repeated his regrets that his son should go to such a disreputable body as the Heel Flies, but the boy would never harm anyone, as he had often heard him say he would not shoot to hit a man who was trying to keep out of the Confederate army. He further stated that were the risks not so great he would be glad if Henry would go with me to Mexico and he believed a little persuasion on my part would induce the young man to go. I told him I could not think of such a proceedure; that I would not attempt to persuade anyone away unless it be those that were to themselves, were being hunted from pillar to post. While thus talking--it must have been nine o'clock or later--six men rode up to the gate and hailed. It was very dark and I moved to the rear in the direction of the horse lot, while Mr. McDonald went to the gate. I was not afraid of Mr. Harper was there and when told that he was, he was called out and two of the men took him off and he engaged for a few minutes in low conversation, after which the six men rode away and Mr. Harper came back and told Mr. McDonald that the men were a part of his command and were looking for Tate; that they had asked him if he had been there that evening. Shortly after Mr. Harper and his comrade took their leave and when well away Lizzie said to me: "Those men were here for no good object. They were on the lookout fr Joe Tate, and they had too many questions to ask about you. They were spies and I would advise you to hit the Somers' Thicket before daylight." "Yes," said I, "but I know no one there and I might be taken for a heel fly and shot." "I hear some one coming now," step out in the darkness," said the girl.

A horseman approached and it proved to be Henry McDonald. They had orders to leave at once and go to Columbus to take the place of the company which had been stationed there, but was now enroute to Hallettsville. A portion of that company had been changing up the Navidad country as far down as General Whitfield's place and had reached the Lavaca that evening with two prisoners and were camped at Zumwalt's. The Victoria Home Guards, and a squad from Clinton would arrive tomorrow or the day following, and when all these had joined them they were going to clean out the Somers Thickets and kill or capture every man found in that wilderness. He was glad his company was ordered away. He did not want to disobey orders, but he'd be the last man to fire on those men who were being hounded off the earth.

All this conversation took place while sitting on the front gallery and I paid closest attention to every word that was said. The Old folks retired, Henry went in to their room and I followed for him and when seated at the tables the young ladies both came out to where I was and Lucretia, the eldest, said: "We have a plan for you. If you stay here the heel-flies will get you sure. You are as welcome as a brother, but we'd hate to see you get caught by the heel-flies. The country is full of them, but with all the stirring and shooting they are not going very far in the Somers' Thicket to-night. You must get with those men in the thicket. Don't know, are if you can get a message to them we have you out before the time it is light. Jesse knows the path he's been there before. You go to the Somers' League and can send Jesse along to get guides of the doctor. When you get that far and find the way clear for you to go on with the men in the League. He'll find the boys and then you are safe."

"What of my Mexican and the mule train?" I asked.

"I've no faith in a Mexican. I hate the whole generation, and I don't think you'll ever see him or Mexican again. Let the mules go, come here we will send you word as soon as possible."

"What will Henry say?"

"Henry will do as I say," said Henry. You can rest assured that he will not betray you under any circumstances. I had ten times rather you would go with the men than to go away from home with that gang of heel-flies is now mixed up with. They are a set of thieves and robbers. Jesse will stay at home, and when taken to Columbus there's no telling what decision they will do where they are not acquainted."

When I retired for the night my mind was ill at ease. Dangers were thickening around me and reflection was painful. I could only induce sleep. The Columbus heel-flies--my old friends, the enemy--had rounded up the Navidad settlement and were now encamped at Zumwalt's, only three miles distant. Could it be those two men were Gollihar and Clampit? The Victoria party were coming up from the south and the Clinton contingent were approaching from the west, while the company from the Brazos, which had come for Joe Tate, was camped on the creek near by. The prospect was indeed gloomy, but where there is a will there is a way. I had the will and I believed the young lady had pointed out the way.

AN HONORED CITIZEN DIED YESTERDAY

Uncle Frank Langford, pioneer citizen of Bandera, passed away at his home yesterday shortly after noon, after an illness of several days. His death was caused by pneumonia. Funeral services will be held this afternoon and burial will take place at the Bandera Cemetery.

B. F. Langford, Sr., was born in Caldwell county in 1847, and came to Bandera with his parents in 1864. He grew up right here in Bandera, went to school here, and was married to Miss Araminta Chipman in 1869. Eight children were born to this union, three girls and five boys, all of whom survive, and are today filling places of usefulness in the communities wherein they reside. They are: Mrs. Ella Cox of Bandera, Mrs. Leah Matthews of Beaumont, Edwin P. Langford of Bandera, George H. Langford of Beaumont, Alvin P. Langford, of Pleasanton, M. H. Langford of Kennedy, Mrs. Ruby Barnett of Del Rio, and John F. Langford, of Bandera, all of whom were present at the bedside of the father, when he passed away.

Until he was stricken with illness about ten days ago Mr. Langford was quite active and looked after his mercantile interests in Bandera every day. He was faithful in his attendance at the Methodist church every Sunday, where for over twenty-five years he was a class teacher.

The passing of this great soul has left an aching void in the heart of every man, woman and child who knew Uncle Frank Langford, and it is entirely fitting that we should pause amid the daily whirl of events and lay upon the closed tomb a wreath of love and honor gathered from the garlands of memory now sacred. Thought, however, is almost bankrupt when we realize that the good friend, kind husband, affectionate father and model citizen is no more, and language is a frail vehicle in which to convey one's sentiments when the cold clods of the grave hides from our view our most valued friend and fellow citizen. It seems we should still feel the kindly touch of his hand, behold the genial smile of his honored face, and hear again the welcome tones of his commanding voice. But, as we are forced to realize that the mantle of mortality and decay now enfolds his dreamless form, which only a few days since moved among us with a life that seemed ever enduring, and that now we will consign him to the silent precincts of the tomb to await the hour when "all that are in their graves shall hear His voice and come forth," nothing remains for this pen to indite, except to recall as a blessing and a benidiction to bleeding hearts, the joyous sunshine and the sweet recollections that will arise from his abiding memory, the richest and most treasured legacy he has left behind him:

"I can not say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair

It needs must be, since he lingers there.
And you—oh you, who had the wildest yearn s
For the old time step and the glad return—
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here!
And loyal still, as he gave the blows
Of his warrior strength to his country's foes—
Mild and gentle, as he was brave,
When the sweetest love of his life he gave
To simple things; where the violets grow
Pure as the eyes they were linked to,
The touches of his hands have strayed
As reverently as his lips have prayed;
When the little brown thrush that harshly chirred
Was dear to him as the mocking bird;
And he spilled as much as a man can pain
A writhing honey-bee wet with rain.
Think of him still as the same, I say:
He's not dead—he is just away!"

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

Broadcasted by WOAI Southern Equipment, Evening News and Express Radio Station, San Antonio, Texas, and picked up by Warren Hunter's New Era Receiving Station in Bandera, 6-10 p. m., Wednesday, February 22.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22—The Ship Subsidy bill now lies dead on the Senate calendar today.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 22—Under an assumed name here for more than 12 years, Mary Rose, known as Juan Leary, is arrested and is being held for the sheriff of Karnes county.

Austin, Texas, Feb. 22—The Court of Criminal Appeals today overruled motion for rehearing in the case of Wayne Todd, Parker county, convicted of murder and given the death penalty.

Dallas, Texas, Feb. 22—Police announce that after a two days search they had failed to find any trace of a 15-year-old girl who came here with her mother from Comanche, and who was lured to a local hotel by men representing themselves to be theatrical agents, and who disappeared after an alleged "wild night" in the men's rooms. Police Captain Bimat in charge the investigation revealed that twenty girls from small towns in Texas have disappeared recently, and that it may be that they have been the victims of white slavers operating in Dallas.

We have a few copies of the "Pioneer History of Bandera County" on hand yet, and if you have not secured a copy we urge you to get one before it is too late. Price, postpaid, $1.00.

HEEL-FLY TIME IN TEXAS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

Before dawn Jesse McDonald and I were on the road leading to Dr. Bellah's, which was about three miles distant. The boy was a bright lad and told me he knew the Somers League quite well and that during the past few months he had carried messages, and even provisions, to those who had taken refuge in those thickets. As we rode along I discovered that he carried a cow bell in his mount, which was suspended to his saddle horn, and when asked what he was going to do with that bell he merely remarked, "Wait and see." We halted at Dr. Bellah's and the boy went in to get the medicine. When he came out the doctor accompanied him to the gate, and while we were talking with him four mounted men came riding out of a copse of timber near by. I knew I could outrun them, but I decided to stay and take chances. When they drew up at the gate they began questioning the doctor in a way that showed, at once that they were strangers and not acquainted with the lay of the country. To make bold, I asked: "To what bunch do you gentlemen belong?" "Company K, Gould's regiment." Where do you belong?" came the quick response. "I belong to Richard's company. We have been on duty at Corpus Christi and King's ranch, but we were ordered here to clean out Somers Thicket, and as soon as the Victoria and Columbus boys arrive, we are going to have a general roundup."

"Where is your company?"

"My company has not yet arrived but will be here this evening. Having been raised near here and knowing the country quite well, the captain gave me and one of the boys in the company permission to come on ahead, and having nothing else to do, I thought I would do a little scouting on my own hook before the boys got in. Have you gentlemen scouted any over near the League?"

"No," said the man who seemed to be the spokesman, "We have not scouted very much. We guarded Mayo's Mill last night expecting to capture Tate. We suppose however he is with a lot of others in the Somers Thickets, and I guess we will be with you boys in the big round-up." After some further conversation, from which I learned they were also there to camp on Clark's Creek, they rode away, greatly to my relief. They were not ignorant of the approach of the men from Concrete, Clinton and Victoria and my story sounded plausible enough. Mr. McDonald had told me that Dr. Bellah was all right and I did not hesitate to lie to those fellows in his presence. When this quartette of Company K disappeared, the boy and I headed for Somers Thickets.

It must be remembered that a league of land covers a considerable extent of territory, and this Somers League extended quite a distance along the Lavaca river. The densest thickets—more properly forests—were in the river bottom and consisted of various growths, the live oak predominating. From the trees the long moss hung in great festoons and in places the vegetation overhead was so dense that the sun scarcely penetrated to the earth.

When we entered the thickets proper, the boy halted, dismounted, and attached the bell he had brought along to his horse's neck, remounted, and we rode forward. In reply to my inquiry he said, "This is my signal." After winding around through glade and jungle for perhaps three-fourths of a mile, and while in the act of emerging from a thicket into an open space, a man on foot confronted us and sang out: "Halt! Jess, whar ye going? Who's the feller ye got with ye?" With this the lad introduced me to Mr. Colbath, who was soon informed I was alright and mighty anxious to keep out of reach of the heel-flies. Mr. Colbath led the way to the fair, where we found ten or twelve men, and a harder looking set I never beheld. I had read of Italian brigades, English highwaymen and robbers, pirates, and Mexican bandits, but never in fancy had I depicted such ferocious looking group as that which gathered around me. They were in a rude camp and "shooting irons" were visible all around. They plied me with questions and when I told them from whence I came and of my stampede from Columbus, one of their number broke in with: "Look here, ain't you the chap that stayed all night at Mrs. Davis' a few nights ago when you was runnin' from the heel-flies to beat hi-ll?"

"I guess I'm the man."

"And didn't some fellers comin' cross the prairie on hosses in a run scare yourself o' the house an make you jump in the river?"

"Guess I'm the man."

The fellow then proceeded with extreme merriment to relate, the and three of his men had been at circumstances, adding to and enlarging those every lamentable humor in the story, much to the mirth rounds of laughter. Then turning to me he said: "The lady you stayed all night with is my sister. I am Wiley Clampit, and I am one of the fellers that scared you so bad that you had to jump in the Navisto and sit out there in the bottom with the gars nearly all day." To the crowd he said: "Boys, this feller is all right. My sister told me about him and if it hadn't been for him I would not be here."

Shortly after reaching my new friends, Jesse McDonald started on his journey homeward, and I posted as to how to proceed in case my Mexican and the mules showed up.

I soon found these men were continually on the alert, and there were open to every signal and their scouts and watchmen were on duty at all hours. Several came in during the forenoon and others went out to look around. All had many questions to ask about Mexico and a majority expressed their determination to go across the Rio Grande if they could get headed that way.

In the afternoon Crit and Charley Gollihar and several others came in. Charley Gollihar was one of those fellows who had escaped from the guard house at Columbus and seemed very proud of his achievement. Crit Gollihar was a giant in size and evidently a man of great courage. He said to us as we gathered around to learn the news: "Well, boys, thunder's to pay. Oma (his wife) was up at old man Heath's this morning and Heath had just got a message from Victoria and the company from over about Clinton was to be here today. The company from Columbus and Dr. Pointon's this morning; they camped at Zumwalt's last night. Those fellers who came here after Tate and are going to work until all these other companies come up, then they are going to come in here and clean out everything from a hog to a steer. That's what they say they are going to do; but doin' it! You fellers want to keep awake; there's no tellin' what's going to happen; we may have to light like hell, but that we will have to fetch along something better than heel-flies if they ever clean up this bunch."

I was anxious to meet Joe Tate, but was told that he was on the look out, but would probably show up that evening.

At nightfall the company dispersed in squads of six to ten. During the evening the place of bivouac had been changed by each group or squad. These bivouacs were on the outer edge of the area in a circular form, and it was understood that in case of an attack by any force all should rally to a common center. The distance between these bivouacs was not over 100 yards. Those who had been scouting during the day were allowed to rest and give their horses a chance to graze in one of the near open spaces. Those who had been and who were on picket duty quite a distance from "headquarters," each squad kept a man posted to watch over same and relieve the sleepers in case he heard a signal of danger. Horses that had grazed during the day were brought up, saddled and tethered. No fire was allowed and in order to light his pipe the smoker had to use a flint and steel, which every man carried in those days, as matches could not be procured.

The night passed without incident, and at an early hour the next morning one of the outer pickets reported that the Columbus company had encamped that night at the Mayo's Mill crossing which was not over a mile and a half above us on the river. This news made me doubly uneasy. I was expecting Cirlaco and the Cox boys hourly. They had been directed across the Lavaca at the Mayo's Mill and now in all likelihood they would fall into the hands of the enemy. To warn them of their danger was out of the question and all I could do was to hope for the best.

After breakfast, Crit Gollihar called the men together and explained that scouting parties would likely scour the country adjacent during the day and he declared that he was going to do some scouting himself. He wanted five men, well mounted and well armed, to go with him. He chose his brother, Charley, Mr. Hil, Mr. Clampit, Mr. Colbath, and another whose name I have forgotten. When these men had gone three or four hours, one of the outer pickets came rushing in with a boy by the name of Stamps, who had been sent by squad to notify Mr. Gollihar that a captain with a company of men had been at the house that morning, and after seeing a search of the premises and offering many courtesies, had forced Mrs. Gollihar and her children to prepare breakfast for them. They had demanded fried chicken, and when the refused to kill her fowls for the hungry thieves, they killed them, dressed them and swore if the mistress refused them as they nearly always did, they would burn her house. Mrs. Gollihar had sent the boy, thinking he would find her husband in camp. The boy said the men had left but they would be back for dinner and she wanted protection. When we heard this every man made tracks for his horse and in an incredibly short time all were mounted and ready to respond to the lady's call for help. Every man present wanted to go, but it was decided best for some to remain and allow only five to go, as they would be more than a match for the cowardly heel-flies who would insult and ill-use helpless men and their little children.

We had not gone more than a half a mile when we heard signal guns off to our right and there were answered by the boys we had left behind, Thinking that these boded danger, and not knowing their full import, I remarked to a weed whoop nearby, and Henry Dunn said: "I know that yell; it's Crit Gollihar, and he's got some news or something for us. I know him too well." A minute later the cavalcade entered the small glade where we were halted and Crit Gollihar said that there were ten, and four of these were handcuffs and were securely tied to their saddles. Gollihar had a few words with another one of my former captors at Columbus, and another was no less a person than my friend, Captain Baker, of the Columbus Home Guards.

The captured heel-flies were dismounted and placed under a strong guard. After leaving the camp that morning, Mr. Gollihar and his squad had gone out on the uplands west of us and where they apparently was more game and where here and there was found a small prairie. While passing through a thicket and just before coming to the open, they saw a body of horsemen approaching at a quick gait. They at once spotted them as heel flies, but thought at first they were the Halletsville crowd. They quickly dismounted and secured their horses under concealment and when the foremost left the thicket they found themselves covered with over half a dozen revolvers—some of them carried two sixshooters—and a sharp order, "hands up!" and thus, the capture of the captain and his squad was effected.

When Gollihar was told of our start to his home and the causes necessitating it, he broke into a paroxysm of uncontrollable rage. The Stamp boy had returned with us and having seen the freebooters at Mrs. Gollihar's knew that morning readily identified these captives as the culprits.

Gollihar was prevented from inflicting any personal injury on these unfortunate men, but soon mounted and rode away in the direction of his home, swearing that he was going to investigate and if they had harmed his family or had committed any serious outrage all hell couldn't bar his vengeance.

When Mr. Gollihar had gone the excitement had somewhat subsided our prisoners became more communicative and Mr. Gollihar's brother and many readily identified these captives as the culprits.

OBITUARY.

Died, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kirkland, February 19th, 1923, Mrs. Foy Bittle. Deceased was born as Karnes City, Texas, December 17, 1897, and was married to Albert Bittle of Ingram, Texas, June 1, 1921. She is survived by her husband, Julius Bittle; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kirkland; two sisters, Miss Jennie Kirkland of Medina, and Mrs. Howard Hay of Port Author; one brother, Dwight Kirkland of Medina, Texas, and an infant daughter, Foy Louise, born February 9th, 1923. Mrs. Bittle spent 22 years of her life near Medina, and was loved by all who knew her, she being of an extraordinary kindly disposition and having the true Christian spirit. The husband, parents, sisters, brother and daughter of deceased have the heartfelt sympathy of the community in this their hour of bereavement. Her remains were interred in the Goodman cemetery, February 20th, a very large concourse of sorrowing friends attending. The last sad rites were performed by Rev. W. H. Price.

A FRIEND

Little Frank Montague, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Montague, has been seriously ill this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Autrey came up from San Antonio Tuesday to spend a few days with relatives.

Mrs. Annie E. Brown, who has been visiting friends at Eagle Pass for the past several months, writes the New Era that she will soon return to her home at Tarpley.

Our service can't be beat.—Geo W. Saunders Livestock Commission Co., San Antonio and Fort Worth, Texas. (adv.)

This week R. F. Power sold to R. G. Surber, a three-room house and two lots in the northern part of the city, consideration $650.

"Foolish Wives" at Bandera Theater Friday night, March 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Anton Pyka were among the influenza victims last week, but both are making good recovery.

G. Hicks, of Tarpley, was here Thursday returning home from San Antonio where he had been attending Federal court.

C. Y. Billings, the druggist, was rendered hors du combat by the prevalent epidemic, influenza, last week, but will soon be able to get about.

Richard Schlader, whose post office address is Center Point, Texas, orders the little old home paper sent to his address every week.

Gordon Evans and Charles Hansen were in from the Hansen ranch Monday. Gordon says they had an exciting wolf chase a few days ago and succeeded in running down a big coyote.

Among the seriously ill victims of influenza is Mrs. A. B. Langford. The services of a trained nurse have been secured and Mrs. Langford's condition is reported very much improved.

Mrs. W. J. Davenport, Sr., has been seriously ill with pneumonia, but is reported improving. She is in charge of a trained nurse and her many friends hope for her speedy recovery.

Rev. Father Boivin, pastor of the St. Stanislaus' church here has been seriously ill the past few days. He is very much improved we learn, and we hope he will soon be able to be about.

I. E. Adamietz and family spent several days in San Antonio last week. Mr. Adamietz was attacked by influenza while there and was compelled to remain in the Alamo City until the first of the week.

Mrs. Goldsborough and Miss Thetford, teachers in Bandera High School, are spending several days in San Antonio, during the enforced suspension of school on account of the influenza epidemic.

We are pleased to report W. R. Fletcher steadily recovering from a severe attack of influenza. For several days Mr. Fletcher was a very sick man and his friends feared he was in for a siege of pneumonia.

Miss Annie Habenicht spent last week with the family of Rudolph Scheele, all of them being down with influenza. Miss Annie proved herself to be an excellent nurse and her patients are now well on their road to recovery.

Mrs. W. E. Ruge and Miss Margaret Montague went to San Antonio the early part of last week as delegates to the meeting of the National Council of Catholic Women. Miss Montague remained in San Antonio until Monday when she returned home.

The meeting of the stockholders of the Bandera County Ranchmen and Farmers' Association was not held last Saturday on account of the inclement weather preventing a quorum being present. A call meeting has been issued for a meeting of the stockholders to be held on Saturday, March 10, at which time directors will be elected.

Henry Kalka has an ad in this issue of the New Era. His Feed Mill is in fine running shape now, having been thoroughly overhauled and new machinery added. He is prepared to grind or crush corn and his prices are very low. Regular grinding days are Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, but rush orders will be taken care of at any time if you will leave word at White's Cafe. Henry is a practical mill man and an expert when it comes to the manufacture of corn meal or grinding chops.

The Albuquerque Journal-Democrat of Albuquerque, New Mexico, contained an account of the marriage of Miss Allen Deskin of that city to John Q. Adams of Los Angeles, California, February 12, at the First Baptist church in San Barnardino, California, Rev. M. T. Rose officiating. The bride formerly lived at Pipe Creek, this county, and is well and favorably known here. She is the daughter of T. W. Deskin who lived at Pipe Creek many years.

The suit is based on alleged contratt made in 1918, when, Miss Ralph, who is 29, charges that Kirby promised to "maintain, support and educate her, if she would give up all her time to him, travel with him as his companion, and take care of all of his needs." She declared she did so and changed her name to Kirby at his request to allow them to travel together as "father and daughter." In 1922, she alleges, Kirby agreed to pay her $6,000 in cash and $500 a month for life if she would release him from the agreement and she consented to do so, and received the $6,000 in cash, as promised. One payment of $500 was made last April, she charges, but she has received no further payment since then, she says.

HEAD-FAT FOR MEXICANS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

A little later in the evening toward the close of day, a signal was heard by those in camp and was answered by one of the outer guards. Shortly after Mr. Gollihar and others accompanied by Joe Tate and his younger brother Bob Tate, came into camp. Mr. Gollihar's rage seemed to have subsided since he had learned that the worst damage the prisoners had wrought was the killing of his wife's chickens. I took him aside and asked what he was going to do with those men. He informed me that on Joe Tate's account they were going to hold those men. I saw the desperate efforts to which these men were reduced and under the leadership of Crit Gollihar I could only see disaster in the odds against them too great. A number, some eight or ten of these men had expressed a willingness to go with me into mined men, well armed, and with Mexico, where I had connections and could stand off any body of heel-flies we might chance to meet. I had heard a French officer in Monterey during a riot say that "mobs won't fight, and neither will untrained, undisciplined boys fight." I pointed out that the Clinton company of heelflies would not stand off any body in our vicinity, and even if the town were strongly garrisoned we could avoid its close proximity by crossing the river below that we could easily reach that river in less than one night's travel. remain in concealment during the day. Camargo Monte back, or their monthly stipend began to run low, they would round up a few theives and beeves, and drive them to Mercey or Salitillo and sell them—all in the name and by the authority as they claimed, of the U. S. A. Government. The people of Mexico are as honorable and patriotic as those of any nation on the globe, but on the frontier, the border line between two nations is always the resort of the toughest elements of the two countries adjacents, and Benivedes' regiment seemed to have become a sort of catch-all caught the worst that Mexico had to spare.

"No, boys," said I, "the clink of a dollar or two will remove all obstacles that may offer on the east side of the Bravo."

I further told these men my plans for leaving as soon as possible, that I was going to stay a man to go with me, but all who intended going with me must be ready to start the next night or the next following. And further more that each must agree to act the part from start to finish. Supplies, we might require along the road, must be paid for and not one's rights violated or property molested. Cattle were plentiful and cheap in those days and it would be easy to buy from some stockmen, or others, when in need of food, to kill a maverick (an unbranded yearling) and appropriate its flesh. As to the kind of men we would do, as was the custom, but in all other matters involving the rights of property, the strictest honesty should be observed. To this proposition each man present expressed his heartiest endorsement and I began to realize from this crowd, possibly however coarse the exterior of these rude uncouth men, at heart they were honest, and, this good impression then, the formation of the plan was fully confirmed by subsequent experience.

It was late that night when I stretched out my blanket for a few hours sleep. I was somewhat near, saddled and ready for service. I had determined to brave all lurking dangers and go over to Mr. McDonald's, if possible, to learn something of Ciriaco and those mules. I instructed guards to call me at 3 o'clock in the morning. The distance from the river was not over six miles and my aim was to reach Mr. McDonald's before daylight. After a refreshing sleep I was awakened, mounted and was off.

I reached Mr. McDonald's before day and rode to the back of his field north of the house and tied my horse in a thicket. It was yet dark, and on foot I made my way through the field to the horse lots where I found several head of saddle horses. Selecting the best I could find, I concluded that all was not well. In the little house used for storing corn and feed, I found three or four saddles and saddle blankets. These latter were still wet with the sweat of the previous day's hard riding. Had there been only two saddles I would have concluded that they belonged to Ciriaco and the Cox boy and would have doubtless have been caught, but the number of saddles indicated the presence of danger. Members of the household were astir and I withdrew.

About 200 yards east of the McDonald premises was a cabin occupied by an old negro and his family, who cultivated a portion of McDonald's land. While pondering what to do next, I noticed a light emerging from this old negro's cabin. I decided to try to learn something from the old darkey. As I stealthily approached the cabin I heard him at the lot in the rear of his domicile, feeding the horses. I got between him and his cabin and as he started back to this home after having fed his stock I came up to him and said in a low voice: "Good morning, Uncle; hope you sees any head-fleies around dis settlin'." "Who is you, an' what you foolin' roun' heah fo' dis time o' night?" "Don't you know me, Uncle? I am the man you work at Mr. McDonald's the other day; the man who had your folks do some washing."

"Shuah! Is dat you? Well you's all rite while its dark, but of you is tryin' to keep out'n de way o' dem heel-flies you'd bettah be makin' de sand fly. Whar's you gang on 'em at Mayor A. B.'s an day's sho' mad. Wha' fo' you come heah anyhow?"

"Your folks carry water from Mr. Mc's well, don't they, Uncle?"

"In cose dey do."

"They are up by this time?"

"I dunno, sah, but I spec dey is—de ole missus hain't no youngstahs 'oh mighty early sah. Yas, I spec's de family is up by dis Lawd, no sah, no sah, I nebbah did go back on no white man dat toted his vittles on de chunks like you. No sah! I'll do jus lak you tells me."

"All right, Uncle, you go in the house, get some water to fill your folks; get a bucket as if going for water, then go to the well. "Well, I'll tell you what I want and there will be a bright silver dollar for you."

"Yas, sah!"

(which was near the kitchen in Mr. Mc's yard) and loiter around there until you get a chance to speak privately to Ciriaco and the girls, and then tell her that Mr. Garcia is at your gate and wants to see her. Be quick now."

"Lawd, yas sah, yas sah; I'll hab dat gal heah in two minits."

The first gray streaks of dawn began to appear and minutes passed. Finally I heard the trip of light footsteps and through the slowly vanishing darkness I saw the figure of a woman approaching. It was Lizzie McDonald, and she brought me the most startling news. On account of the growing light of the day I thought it best to time for simple greetings. The men at the house were part of the Clinton company, who had been camped in the direction of Somerset on Chalchiuhtlicue Creek, but a few days before at Mr. Hayne's place, on Brushy. Jesse had gone during the night and had given them word about the capture of my Mexican, and she wondered why he had not found me, as he had ample time to have done so by the previous night. "But it is getting light and they'll miss me at the house. Go, quick; don't go through the field, they might see you. My horse is tied and for Heaven's sake, don't let them arrest you." And with this she was gone and, turning to the left, I made my way through the field by after the young lady's appearance, I handed him a silver dollar, and admonished him to observe secrecy. I learned from him that Ciriaco and the girls had left the house at 3 o'clock in the morning. The old woman's cookin' brekfus, an' de braid is nearly done, an' I'se gwine to get my big portion of braid of yo' can jis wait a minit. It won't tuk yo' long, an yo's gwin to git mighty hongry a runnin' fum dem heel-flies 'fo yo' sets down yo' brekfus." Faithful old slave! He had been "refugeed" by his master from Arkansas and placed in charge of the Ciriaco property. Mr. McDonald, near whom he lived long after he obtained his freedom.

I had neither time nor appetite for breakfast then, and handling the generous hearted old negro another dollar, I hastened around the field through the brush, mounted and rode away in the direction of Somers League. I did not seek to avoid anyone, as it was quite early and the heel flies were never troublesome at that season and there was loot to be had without fighting. For the 'steenth time since leaving Matamoras, I was mad. Ciriaco was among the best bands of those measly scape goats, and besides, they had those mules. I would have those mules if it took all spring and summer too, and if they had left without Ciriaco I would stay with those men in the thickets till the close of the war.

The sun was up shining bright and clear—a typical South Texas spring morning when I reached Dr. Bellah's. I made no halt and hallooed but a short distance when I saw a body of horsemen coming from the direction of Mayo's Mill. That part of the country was open pasture land consisting we at once met the same time I discovered them coming toward me, they raised a whoop and dashed forward. Seeing no escape to the right, I "lit out" and the race began. They chased me more than a mile and at no kept up a running fire as if they expected to hit someone. I reached cover in the edge of the thicket and, hastily sighting, fearing as the boys said, an ambuscade.

Signals had been sounded at different points along the thickets when the firing began and I had not proceeded into the labyrinth of tanglewood until I met a force hastening out to learn the cause. I told the boys it was only a little race for morning exercise and that no heel fly could get near enough to shoot me so long as I was better mounted than the river an' the Lgvaca's no higher than the Navidad." This speech from Bob Tate, the gunderveyed Wylie Clampit, and there was a loud guffaw at my expense.

Everything reached camp I related to the boys all I had heard and told them of my determination to rescue my Mexican at all hazards and asked them if they would stay by me in the undertaking. All agreed to go with me and if there was any fighting to do they would not desert me. It was agreed however to wait until the Gollihar boys and the Tates and Colbath came in and then our attacking force would be larger. Five negro men had come into camp early that morning but no one seemed to know any thing about them more than they had been chased away from some of the heel flies and were considered reliable. The Colorado company that had captured my Mexican numbered only thirty men and boys, mostly the latter, four of these were under guard at our camp, leaving the enemy only 26 and it was considered that a dozen determined men could capture the entire layout.

Shortly after noon, the two Gollihar boys, the Tate boys, Henry and Bob, Mr. Colbath came in, bringing with them a man by the name of Jennings, who said that his father lived a few miles below on the south side of the Mexican river. He was well known to nearly all in camp and had been kept in the brush by the heel flies nearly all winter.

I related my experience to Mr. Gollihar, and those who came in with him, told him of the capture of Ciriaco and the mules by the Benivedes, and my determination to attack the camp of the enemy and that the boys had agreed to join me in the undertaking. Gollihar was pleased with the idea and announced his willingness to lead the expedition. He swore that he alone could whip half the company and since they had gone into the mule business he proposed to become a horse dealer and that some of those heel flies had some really good horses which he stood in great need of just then. We would make the attack that evening about four o'clock.

This proposition was heartily approved by all except Joe Tate. He reasoned along different and more practical lines. He set forth that there were other means at hand by which to accomplish the ends in view; that of rescuing the young Mexican and the mules. He said that openly or stealthy attack those men would involve us in greater embarrassments than those which we now labored, that it would be mustering war on the Confederate forces and that if captured at any subsequent time we would be countrmatialed and hanged. "My plan," continued Mr. Tate "is this: We hold four of their men as prisoners—a captain and three privates. They are a burden to us and we ought to get them off our hands. Release one of those privates right away, and send him into their camp with a proposal to exchange the captain for this young man's Mexican and the two privates for the mules —mule for mule—they'll be glad to do it and no doubtless they know nothing as to what may have befallen these four men.

John Tobey.

It is with sadness that we chronicle the death of our old friend and brother in Christ John Tobey, an old citizen of Kimble county. He died February 26th, at 4:20 p. m. at his home in the northwest section of the county and was buried in the Rocky Bend cemetery at 3 p. m. the 27th. He had been a resident of the county for forty years, and a member of the Church of Christ for 35 years; was married to Mary J. Weldon, May 10, 1868, and the following children were born to them: Avery Tobey, formerly of Kimble county but now of Medina City, Texas; Mrs. Ida Wimberly of New Mexico; Mrs. Julia Menges of Fort Clark, Texas; Mrs. Mary Mayes of Oklahoma; Mrs. Sallie Self of Junction; Mrs. Rosa Underwood and Mrs. Orpha Fish of Fort McKavitt; and Nathaniel and Peter son, both deceased. Thus we part with another one of our old time Kimble county co-laborers who assisted in paving the way for better times. Those of us who are left behind, see the ranks thinned out to a small remnant. May a better day be in wishing for all of us.

The bereaved family have the heartfelt sympathy of their many friends.—John S. Durst in Junction Eagle.

Have Something Left

Money must be earned. Some of it must be spent. The important thing is to have something left.

Saving money is made easy, if you do the saving before you do the spending. Make every day your banking day. Deposit a regular amount each week before you make your purchases. Make your deposit and forget it. Do not leave it to chance. What could be a better motto than just this: "Have Something Left." When you deposit your savings in the First National Bank it will earn 4½ per cent interest. We invite you to bank with us.

HEEL-FLY TIME IN TEXAS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

After some further discussion Mr. Tate's plan was agreed to, of course these deliberations were held at some distance from and beyond the hearing of the prisoners.

During this general discussion, jennings heard the mention the ex boy in connection with the apture of the Mexican and mules d when an agreement was reach- and our plans formulated he ld me he knew the Cox's and the o families were great friends d that the boy was safe. He said had left his father's ranch ly that morning on his return om Columbus. He further ated that it was daylight when and the Mexican neared the avaca river, and he begged the exican to turn down the prairie nd stop at Mr. Jennings' until irn home at his pleasure. The y followed the suggestion and was therefore safe. While the exican went on and rough, and ed. More on Mrs. Cox's ac- ount, than any other, I was rtedly relieved on receipt of this itelligence.

Our plan, as finally agreed upon or the evening was this: Every an was to be in readiness to art at 3 p. m. Boy that was on watch along the out- orders of the thicket would be to for the evening relief.

The prisoners were to be bli- folded, mounted and their h ses were to be led by men detailed or that duty. We were to ride silence to a point in the river bottom a quarter of a mile from he camp at Mayo's Mill—a point here we would be concealed rom view by a dense thicket. rom this thicket we were to wait to the enemy our demand, and they refused we would tie our risoners to trees and charge the amp.

There was a bountiful supply f fresh beef in camp and the men hring the forenoon had bar- becued a quantity of the choicest ieces, and after a hearty feast n beef without bread, I called he boys together and told them f the plan of our raid on the eef supply and it proved successful I was oing to leave the next night, and ll who wished to go with me to Mexico must be ready. Nineteen declared their readiness to accompany me, and to face any perils that might beset our way. The Gollihar boys, the Tate brothers, Dunn and Colbath said they had no desire to leave the country, and they believed when the beef flies found out so many had gone in a body they would abandon the chase, and this would give them more freedom to go where they pleased.

Half an hour before we were ready to start Jesse McDonald came in bringing a sack of corn bread, some salt and the message, the girls had entrusted with the bread before. During the night he had med a party of beef flies, turned and fled and they had chased him to Brushy Creek before the Hurless school house, where he gave them the slip. He then followed a circuitous route— got there with the bread, but it was reduced to the consistency of corn meal.

The lad wanted to go with us against the beef flies, but I, as head as others, objected. I told him he got back home before night if possible, and tell the girls mand that the said Mexican and mules he had gone to Mexico with. The Mexican was captured, that he, their captain, and his followers giving away were being held by a large body of desperados, who were determined to hang them if these demands were not immediately complied with. I could remember the closing sentence of that order. "Therefore I command that the said Mexican and mules be delivered to the bearer." It is stipulated that my release and that of your captive comrades, will follow immediately upon the execution of this order." The order by name of Bast was selected to carry the message under flag of truce. He was instructed, to approach the enemy's camp and observe the strength of the enemy and call for a parley. If he found that their force was absent equal to or inferior to ours, he was to wave his flag over his head twice. He was also instructed fully as to what to say to the enemy. But here arose another difficulty. There was not a white handkerchief in the crowd. There were kerchiefs, but they were of the bandana brand and unsuitable. Bast suggested a shirt, but investigation showed there was not a white shirt in the crowd. Some were there that had been washed, but age and usage and lack of soap and water changed their color. Finally a "poke"—a sort of gunny sack—was found in a homespun cloth and still retained some of its original whiteness, was pressed into service, torn open and the cleanest section cut out with a jack-knife and fixed to a long switch. This Mr. Bast took and with its tarnished folds dancing in the evening breeze, rode boldly to a point within easy hailing distance of the heel fly camp. Some twenty minutes or more elapsed when our lookout motioned for us to advance. He had seen Bast give the signal.

Our party rode out from our place of concealment, leaving two men to guard the prisoners, and when in the open we formed in line and advanced abreast, allowing a space of about ten paces between the horsemen in order to make appearance as formidable as possible. When within one hundred yards of our truce bearer we halted and maintained strict silence. He had come out of the camp and was talking with Bast. When our column came in view we could not fail to note that their excitement and confusion in the enemy's camp. This emboldened us, and Joe Tate and I advanced and joined Mr. Bast. During this movement, our heel flies came out and joined us. Mr. Bast remarked to Mr. Tate as we rode up: "These fellows say they have the Mexican but won't give him up until their captain and comrades are produced. Mr. Tate said to the men: (the two extra men had rode up by this time). "We haven't a moment to fool away parleying with you fellows. Your captain and his three men are over there in that thicket closely guarded by determined men. We have come after that Mexican and we are going to have him and if there is a shot fired at one of my men or a captain and his three men won't last a minute. I've got enough men to bag your whole crowd, and it would do some of them good to get a few scoundrel in your outfit. Hurry up now we've no time for nonsense." By this time the company in camp had rallied and formed (on foot) at the edge of the grove in which they were encamped. Their paucity of number was apparent and we learned later that the number belonging to their command were absent on a scout looking and thank my powers we did not have to fight, but he first wanted to know that the captain was alive and safe, and if so, he would surrender the Mexican in exchange. I spoke up and said: "We do not propose giving you all four of these men not even for them alone. We want a settlement about in the trade. You have a pair of mules you siezed when you took that Mexican; we want those mules and besides, if you have any other prisoners, we want them and are going to have them. Where are those two men you arrested on the Navidad?"

"We are holding four white men and the Mexican. I don't think you men ought to demand the Mexican. The mules he had belonged to Mr. Cox near Columbus, a friend of our company know the mules, and that Mexican stole them, and we caught him after he had ridden all night and the d——d prisoner ought to be hung. We are going to return those mules to the rightful owner."

"I tell you right sir! We want those mules right now. I am the owner of those mules just at present, so trot 'em out. The Mexican is not the boy's. He was in our employ, I entrusted him with the mules and he was on his way to headquarters when you arrested him."

"Well, captain, you're foolin', said the officer Tate said: "Will you bring those mules up—yes or no? Those mules!" "Yes I will bring them out at once, but captain it looks like it would be fair to bring up our prisoners. We can't do that right thing." Tate then said to one of the boys in a very authoritative, loud tone, "Ride back to the prisoners, Jack and my captain, and tell Lieutenant Gollihar to order a detail of two men to bring those four prisoners forward—those who belong to the Texas Rangers—at once."

Hearing the peremptory order, and doubtless believing he was almost in the grasp of an army of Texas Rangers, the commander of the fly man hastened back to his company and by the time our men, (detailed by Captain Gollihar, who, while in the camp, had recalled the prisoners held by the heel flies were being brought forward. They were all handcuffed and Captain Ciriaco had a chance to look until he recognized me in the crowd. When they came up I said: "Where are those mules and the Mexican's horse, saddle and blankets. There's going to be trouble (I here substitute the word trouble. I used a more emphatic word) if those mules and horse are not delivered immediately." "One of the men who is out on scout a riding the horse; the mules will be here presently," spoke up the boy. "I see a horse and mules my own size and age. I had dismounted and was standing with one hand resting on Ciriaco's shoulder and the muzzle of my pistol pointed at his head. The captain chap made that statement concerning the horse, every word of which the Mexican understood, he said to me in a low tone: "Mira, mi caballo y las mulas allistan atados en el bosque cerca del campo." (He lies: My horse and the mules are tied there in the woods near the camp.) I turning on this little heel, the spokesman, I said, "You lie like the miserable thief that you are, This Mexican's horse and mules lied in front with the mules and these dickerings have to stop right now until that stock and everything this Mexican has with him when arrested is restored." Tate gave force to my remarks by ordering the men to get ready for business. A man from the prisoners, young heel fly realizing that matters were about to assume a serious phase, chimed in: "Don't, gentlemen, don't be hasty, the young man is right, he takes the horse and also the mules will be here in a minute."

From our position we could see some tall hustling about the camp. A bridle here; a saddle blanket, a morral, a rope, a quirt, was flashed out there, and each article was brought out. Ciriaco said to me: "Estos ladrones me robaron mi pistola y el poco dinero lo que traigo." (Those thieves have stolen my pistol and the little amount of money I brought along.) I mentioned this fact to the spokesman and told his captain was there to testify that not an article was taken from him or his men during their captivity and that this Mexican's property even to the last farthing had to be restored. Then the captain confirmed what I said and ordered that my demands be complied with.

GOOD-YEAR Service Station

THE semi-flat tread of the new Goodyear Cord Tire with the beveled All-Weather Tread means smoother running. Its new improved rubber compound means longer mileage. Its heavier sidewall, resists rut and curb wear. The interlocked blocks of its beveled tread mean a protected surface. Its low price and our service mean economy.

At Goodyear Service Stations Dealers are self and customer-owned. They stand back them up with standard Goodyear Service

GOODYEAR

While I was engaged in looking to the delivery of those mules and attending to Ciriaco's interests, Mr. Tate and Mr. Bast were attending to the claims of our other four men whom we had liberated. They also had been robbed and demanded remuneration or restoration. The horse and saddle of Mr. Bast was missing, absent and could not be delivered. Several horses were led up and he was ordered by Tate to take his pick. He carefully and not unlike a better horse than the one he had lost. He chose the best horse, bridle and saddle in the layout, and after he was told three days later, these same hel flies had run him and recaptured him, his horse and equipment. The men they had first taken from him if was said was an old plug that could not head a cow. While all this was in progress, I noticed that Gollihar had an old dilapidated wool hat a piece of headgear quite different to that he wore at Columbus, and I asked him if he had been swapping. Pointing to a young chap who was standing in front of the camp he told me that fellow had his hat, and that it was a forced swap. I stated the facts to the captain, who called the lad by name, and ordered him to bring out the Mexican's hat. The hat was found as he apprehended. Ciriaco seized his own sombrero, a very stylish and costly affair, and threw the old hat on the ground, the young heel fly picked it up and sheepishly slunk off. All demands being met, cuffs were removed from our prisoners and they were once more free. As Gollihar insisted on keeping the handcuffs, saying that he might need them at some future time. Joe Tate gave the following wholesome advice before leaving. He told him who he was and assured him that he was going to stay around home and that no set of hot flies could take him in. He told him that he would do well to take his little gang of thieving boys home and keep them to assist the women in making a crop of corn with which to feed the starving soldiers in the army, and closed by warning that swift vengeance would be visited on him and his outfit if any one else in that section was molested.

By this time the day was far spent, the sun low in the west, and bidding the liberated captain and his brave (!) command goodbye we set out on our return to Somers thickets, having accomplished far more than we had expected.

VERY NARROW ESCAPE.

Painfully Burned About Body and Arms When Clothing Catches Fire at Stove.

Early Monday morning E. B. Weismantel arose and made a fire in a heating stove in his bedroom and then went back to bed while the room was getting warmed up. In a short time he got up again and took a snug position near the stove and got too close, for in a very little while he discovered his outing night gown on fire and was instantly inveloped in flames. Mrs. Weismantel jumped out of bed and with rare presence of mind caught him as he was rushing out of the room and with desperate strength tore the blazing garments from him, and put out the fire. Other things in the room had become ignited and for a few moments it seemed as if the house would burn up. Mr. Weismantel was painfully burned about the body and his hands, and suffered great agony until relieved by medical aid. He is getting along all right at the present and will be able to use his hands in a few days. It was a very narrow escape he had.

FIRE SUNDAY MORNING.

Mr. and Mrs. Boulware Burned to Death When Fire Destroys Lewis Residence.

Last Sunday morning about five o'clock the cry of "Fire" aroused the citizens of Bandera and it was discovered that the large two-story residence of W. L. (Jacks) Stevens was burning. The fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to save anything. Mr. Steyens, with his wife and little child, five years old, and Mrs. Steven's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Boulware, were asleep in the upper part of the house when Mr. Stevens was awakened by the flames coming into his room. He aroused his wife and then went to awaken Mr. and Mrs. Boulware but could not get to their room, being driven back by sheets of fire, which also envelop the stairway. He shouted to his wife to jump to the ground and carrying her little child with her Mrs. Stevens jumped and landed safely, and Mr. Stevens followed, but was somewhat brusied by his fall. He was considerably burned about the face and hands while trying to reach the room occupied by the elderly couple, at about $5,000. It was a large two-story structure, and one of the prettiest homes in Bandera. We understand no insurance was carried on the building or its furnishings.

This tragic happening cast a gloom over the entire community. The death of this aged couple, the destruction of the newly acquired home, and the loss of everything they possessed makes us realize the terrible disaster that has visited Mr. and Mrs. Stevens. The night before, when they retired happiness was in that home. They were proud that they had secured one of the prettiest residences in the city, modern in its appointments and provided with all conveniences. They had with them the dear old father and mother and looked forward to the future in fondest anticipation of comfort and happiness in the family circle, little dreaming that a great sorrow was to suddenly descend upon them. Verily, "in the midst of life we are in death." Today they grope in darkness—all is sadness and despair. Words fail us when we try to express our sympathy in this sad case. We are speechless when we try to describe the awful calamity that has befallen our community.

Mr. Boulware was born March 19, 1861, and died March 18, 1923 just one day before his 62nd birthday. Mrs. Boulware was born April 4, 1862, and was 60 years old. They had lived in Center Point many several years, but went to Oklahoma for awhile, and about a year ago they returned to make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Stevens. The surviving children are Mrs. Albert Rees of Center Point, Mrs. Baker Jones, Mrs. John Aaron, Mrs. W. L. Stevens and Ernest Boulware of Bandera.

The remains of Mr. and Mrs. Boulware were taken to Center Point Monday where they were interred.

Have Something Left

Money must be earned. Some of it must be spent. The important thing is to have something left.

Saving money is made easy, if you do the saving before you do the spending. Make every day your banking day. Deposit a regular amount each week before you make your purchases. Make your deposit and forget it. Do not leave to chance. What could be a better motto than just this: "Have Something Left." When you deposit your savings in the First National Bank it will earn 4½ per cent interest. We invite you to bank with us.

Medina Wins Honors.

Last Friday and Saturday Prof. Cliff Freeman and a number of the pupils of Medina High School attended the Hill Country Meet at Kerrville, and carried away some of the honors. Seven schools participated, Rocksprings, Fredericksburg, Boerne, Comfort, Kerrville, Center Point and Medina entering. Fredericksburg won the athletic cup and Boerne the literary cup. In sub-junior spelling Little Miss Viola Forrest of Medina won first place. In volley ball the Medina team won second place. The senior debaters, girls, were Miss Bettie Forrest and Inez Gilbert, and boys, Leslie LeStourgeon and Burbell Britt, of Medina won second place. In junior declamation Olga Knight and Len Alston Whitehead of Medina won third place. Senior declamation, Leslie LeStourgeon and Miss Lela Keese of Medina won third place. In senior spelling Miss Alice Storms of Medina got fourth place. Senior essay writing, Miss Mattie Mae Newcomer of Medina won second place.

The meet was such a success that the schools voted to have another like event next year. Those who attended from Medina report a good time and speak in highest praise of the treatment accorded them at Kerrville.

Joe Callaham, accompanied by his children, Miss Callie and John Callaham was here from Pipe Creek yesterday. John was suffering from a troublesome tooth and came to have it yanked out by Dr. Morgan, and while this was being done Mr. Callaham and Miss Callie came over to the printing office to see the Linotype at work. Mr. Callaham dispelled gathering gloom and care when he told us the New Era was the best little paper in Texas and that he always enjoys reading it. Such praise helps to make a fellow feel that his efforts are appreciated, and we've been whistling and singing ever since Mr. Callaham left the office.

Leg Broken.

Smith Wright, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Granville Wright who live several miles below town, fell from a tree one day last week and fractured his leg just above the ankle. The little fellow was brought to town and the broken limb set, and he is now getting along fine.

Radio Concert.

Warren Hunter's radio concert Within just a few minutes the whole building was a mass of flames and there was no possible chance to save the aged couple inside. It is not known how the fire originated. Mr. Stevens had purchased the place from Charles B. Lewis only a few days before, and moved in from the ranch on Friday. Mr. Lewis had vacated the premises a day or so before and had moved some of his household goods to Uvalde, but still had con-

Making Moving Pictures.

Quite a number of people went from town to the Montague ranch Tuesday afternoon to witness the filming of a Western scene by a nationally known motion picture concern. The film will feature a love affair between cowgirl and cattleman, with all sorts of bloody battles, and the setting—a ranch in Bandera county—affords an ideal place for the scenes that will be filmed. A rodeo, bucking broncos and sure-enough cowboys are in the film.

A Debate.

On Friday afternoon of last week, the sixth and seventh grades of Mary Verde school held a debate. The question was, "Is the Ku Klux Klan of Any Benefit to Our Country?" The affirmative side was represented by Lucille Sutherland and Marvin McBryde, while Laura Bartley and Raymond Reeves spoke on the negative side. Quite a bit of interest was shown in the debate, as was evidenced by the number of visitors present. Intense interest was shown, for this is a live question and much discussed in every part of our country. Each side had good points which were brought out forcibly by each speaker. The judges, Mr. Oscar Nowlin, Mr. A. D. McBryde, and Mrs. Richard Nowlin could not agree among themselves as to which side won. They finally agreed that the sides had "tied." The speakers, were all promising young boys and girls and although this was their first debate, they are promise of becoming good orators.

That the portion of the Bandera-San Antonio road leading through Medina county is to be repaired very soon is indicated by the following report of the Medina county commissioners court which appeared in the last issue of the Hondo Anvil-Herald:

Application for State aid on State Highway No. 27, 1 acceptances with the agreement between Medina county and the State Highway Department, whereby the State is to furnish $9,000 and Medina county $3,000 for the construction of three miles of road at an approximate cost of $4,000 per mile—a total of $12,000—was signed by the court. (The road referred to is a stretch of the Bandera road that passes through Medina county.)

The following is told about an old colored preacher who called for a collection and said: "I don't want no man to gib no' dan his share, brethren, but we mos' all gib recordin to what we rightly kin—dat's jes' what I mean, brethren—rightly, dah, kase we doan' want no tainted money in dis box. Dis leads me to 'splain dat some chickens is missin' dis week from 'Squire Jones' place," he told me. Now, if any one of our brethren hab fallen by de way, side wif dese chickens, he can gib muffin'—muffin,' I say. Now Deacon Jones, pass de box, while I watches and sees if dere's any one in dis congregation dat hab de prayers ob de church in his heart, case."

We have received quite a number of requests for the stories running in the New Era, "How to Fly Time in Texas." If we can get enough orders for the story we will print it in book form at fifty cents a copy. Those who desire a copy of it are requested to send in their order at once, but do not send money until notified to do so. The pamphlet will contain nearly 100 pages. Please order at once.

Within the next month we will begin the publication of a thrilling story of early days in Texas, under the title of "Nine Years with the Comanches and Apaches," being the experiences of Herman Lehmann who was captured by the Indians when quite a small boy. Don't miss the first installment of this story.

It is only they who are faithful in a few things who will be faithful over many things; only they who do their duty in everyday affairs who will fulfill it on great occasions.

To Sell Sprayers.

[illegible] agency to sell the Comet [illegible] and Mr. Hunter will give a demonstration of the handy article on the streets of Bandera near Saturday. This [illegible] sprayer is all requirements. It [illegible] and will [illegible] after sprays of trees, apples, disinfectants, applies dip to stock, showers garden, washes porches, and decks, and does many other things that is needed to be done on the farm. Don't fail to see it in use next Saturday.

Gunbarrel, the local prognosticator, says: "Note that many of my predictions have come true. Some have failed, but not many. I seldom make a bad guess, but cannot guess correctly every time. You know predicting the weather and future events is all guesswork, based on scientific calculation. We got a good rain in April, and we are going to have some more cold and blustery weather this month, and a copy of the Pioneer History some rain. In April we will of Bandera county to his daughhave the usual showers that bring ter, Mrs. W. W. Hogah, at East May flowers. About the middle Ely, Nevada. of May we will hear of severe storms, if we do not feel the effects of them here, which I think will be likely. A cool spell along about the same time. Cyclone and thunder storms in some parts of the country. Along in the early part of May tornadoes will do much damage and floods will devastate South Texas. I believe Bandera county will get her share in this rainy period, with high wind and hail. The latter part of May will be dry. The first crop will be threatened, but will make better than anticipated. Berries will yield well. An unusual number of apples will be in evidence this year. The small grain crop will be damaged to some extent by green bugs. A good corn crop will be realized. The forecast I made some time ago about a wedding that would surprise folks has not yet come to pass. For the present it is all called off on account of the five bride women refusing the prospective bridegroom to give up worry habits that beset him. He has given them up, and the wedding will eventually take place, but just when I cannot say."

Fred Cox, the picture show man, is over from Center Point last Saturday and informed us that he is considering putting on two show per week instead of one, and will in a short time use the Universal feature pictures. Since the closing of Bandera Theater some months ago Mr. Cox has given the best show possible and presented a splendid program each night of exhibition. He is to be commended for the manner in which he has conducted the theater and should receive liberal patronage.

Last Friday when L. Hicks, of Tarpley, read his New Era he saw therein an incubator advertised for sale. He hastened over to the Bandera and bought that article. It pays to advertise in this paper.

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties

When we reached our lair, we found two of our men, who, being out on watch, failed to join to this night evening. They reported to us that the Victoria company was at Wallace's mill, a short distance below, and that several of that ought had evidently been scouting through the country that day. They knew nothing of the Clinton company or any other layout that might be in that vicinity.

After we had spreaded our apples and had our beef roasted over coals, I told the boys that the country wasn't large enough to hold me any longer. I thanked them for their services and in the release the direction of Mayo's since just of my Mexican and the reasurture of my mules, and the only reasons by which I could return had gone out that we had captured the entire Colorado company in Mexico, a place where home guards dared not molest and left the mercified to trees. There where heel flies confined their operations to old cows in the spring flies, she directed. She is a dear time. Twenty-two in all declared girl, and I predicted that they their willingness to go. Some were ready to start then, others were not quite ready; they had some and make certain preparations, etc. After much planning and discussion, it was finally agreed that we would postpone our departure until the following night, at which time we would all meet together and make the start. As a number of the men lived near the German settlement, a distance from where the town of Hope is now situated, it was agreed to meet there for the start at 10 o'clock, and not later than 10:30 p. m. Should, for any cause, those arriving find that it would be unsafe to assemble there, then we were to rendezvous at a point mile further on, and at the back of a field owned by an honest and inoffensive old German by the name of Hample. Each man was advised to come with three or four day's rations of bread and also a could be had, but not to come burdened with baggage.

The German church was about six miles southwest from Mr. McDonald's and having a night and day before me, I resolved to go over and tell the folks goodbye. One of the men announced their willingness to accompany me. With him he had gone down, and we separated. I and my crowd of six, including myself, rode out near the open woods, where we thought he could safely until darkness overspread the face of the earth. Ciriaco led one the mules and one of the men, a Mr. one of the girls came. Quite a number Hendrick, led the other, while I, her I, the Clinton company had rode in advance. When near the Heath place, I halted the men in a copse of timber and rode down to Dr. Belfah's house. The doctor was away on a professional call, but his niece, Miss Olivia Chandler, who lived in the family, came out and answered my inquiries. "Miss Chandler afterward married Wm. Gafford. She has a son, J. A. Gafford, at Silver Valley, Texas, and a daughter, Mrs. Smith, living in East San Angelo."

She heard of our arrival at Mayo's Mill that evening, and the greatest excitement prevailed throughout the settlement. Men had been passing going in the direction of Mayo's since just before sundown, and they were seemingly in haste. The report had gone out that we had captured the entire Colorado company in Mexico, and the men with the mercified to trees. To avoid meeting with any of these heel flies, she directed me to go a little different route to any I had followed before. In going to Mr. Donald's. This route we pursued and reached McDonald's between a quarter of a mile of the house. I concealed my men in the brush and then went into the house and found three heel fly friends in the kitchen having a gay time talking to the women folks who were cooking. I told them these young men that they ought to be with the command at Mayo's mill; that the brush-heeled men had cleaned up the Colorado company that evening and that every available man was ordered to assemble at Mayo's Mill immediately. In reply to their questions I told them we belonged to the Victoria company and were then en route to Victoria to be mustered in. I had come by to see if we could get some bread. Certainly. They were having bread cooked and would have it ready in a short time. The folks were mighty fine people and they never turned a poor hungry soldier away empty. Did we come by where Dey's mill was? Dey got it! They were nearly dead to go to the dance, but they had been left to attend to the cooking of that bread. Dey may men,. Mr. Hamersley, suggested that, seeing very tired and not caring for the dance, we would look after the rations, and they might go to the ball. They readily agreed to over the proposition and were off in a jiffy, leaving us complete masters of the situation.

When they were gone, Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, Jesse and the girls gathered round us in the kitchen to hear the story of the day's happenings. The place of Ciriaco and one of the men on watch on the outside, and to this eager group I related all that day's happenings, not omitting to say by saying that I was on the eve of my departurh and had come to say goodbye. While relating these happenings, the men who had remained in the kitchen with me, went out, saying they had rather be on the outside on the lookout.

Mr. McDonald showed uneasiness and said those men at the dance were liable to appear at any moment and that while we were entirely welcome, yet it was by no means safe. He said I was very imprudent and would certainly be taken before I got out of the country and did not use more caution. He wanted to see those mules that had caused so much trouble, and I had to go with him to the lot, where in the dim starlight, he examined them closely, he gravely shook his head and said: "Too good a pair of mules. You'll never get there with them." I called Ciriaco and the others and told them to prepare to mount. With Mr. He went back in the kitchen to bid adieu. Mrs. Wood Mrs. Donald—everybody called her "Aunt Martha"—had a sack of bread and a small sack of sweet potatoes ready for us to take with us. She said we had as well have that bread as the heel flies. One of the girls gave me a woolen neck scarf, another a pair of woolen mits—all their own make.

It was with a feeling of sadness and dread that I turned away from that hospitable home and rode out into the darkness, not knowing what ill or good fortune the future had in store for me.

One of the men with me knew the road leading to the German church, and taking the lead he held a steady gait until, when we had covered four or five miles, he left the road and he piloted us through a pasture of the man whose son had been with us in the thicket, and the owner of the land who had agreed to go with me into Mexico. Back of Mr. Cherry's field, in a creek bottom, we found ourselves in thicket, where amid the torments of a swarm of mosquitoes at his table, but I declined preferring to stay under close cover. Mr. Cherry and Jesse fed the morning after our arrival at Cherry's. I noticed that my four white companions had a good supply of food, and after questioned they admitted that when they left the kitchen to go on the lookout the night before, they went to the darkey's cabin and told the old darkey that they had come after that bread, and the old slave, thinking they were the hel flies who had ordered the bread, willingly gave it into their hands. I had told them of the morning arrangements that night before I approached Mr. McDonald's house.

About an hour after nightfall, with Mr. Cherry's son, Rob, as our guide, we met in the appointed place of rendezvous, the German Methodist church. When we came in sight of the place, we saw that a large crowd had gathered, and found upon inquirey, that it was prayer meeting night. We rode into a wood near the church and there dismounted, having decided to wait about an hour for our expected recruits. It had been two years since I had attended church, and while I had been taught to be religious by God-fearing Methodist parents, whose rule it was to take the children to the House of God on the regular services, I withdrew from the men and came into the house. I heard the devout leader of that little band offer the opening prayer. He prayed for the poor soldiers in the field, the sick, the hungry, the wounded and the dying. He prayed for the suffering under affliction and bereavement. He prayed for peace in the enemy and prayed God to hasten the end of that unholy war. They sung those old hymns that I had learned at mother's knee, when a child, and their sad, sweet, melody forcibly recalled to mind the days when I was a happy boy in the old home. Then I was now a castaway, a wanderer, and being pursued by relentless men. These latter thoughts disturbed me little, and when the hymns over came me and I sat down and knelt as a little child and implored the Father to bestow that merciful forgiveness that He has given me through all these subsequent years.

After waiting about an hour and a half, our men appearing we went to the edge of the timber field and found several in waiting. By 10 o'clock we counted noses and there were present twenty-one men and two boys. These latter I opposed to be not over 16 years old, and having learned of our plans from some of the men, broke off from their companions to go with me to Mexico. These lads—I promptly ordered to go back home. About 10:30, the appointed hour, we set out on our long and perilous journey to the Rio Grande. The sun was an hour high next morning, when we reached the Guadalupe, a mile or so below where Cuero now stands. We remained in the brush along the river bottom all day, and at nightfall we mounted and headed for the San Antonio and Rockport road. A young man named Walton knew the country and served as a guide. At sunrise we were on the west side of the San Antonio river, where we found a snug place of concealment. Our breakfast was not tempting. Some bread, a few potatoes roasted in the fire, and cornbread which by constant attrition had become a mass of crumbs. Mr. Walton informed us that our position was secure, it being an out of the way place and that the nearest house was nearly a mile distant and that the owner named Inman, lived and that he was a Union man and always worked a good number of Mexicans. This piece of information was gratifying indeed, and calling Ciriaco to one side, I directed him to mount and ride over to Mr. Inman's and learn all he could from any Mexicans that he might chance to meet and then come back and report. In an hour's time he was back and stated that two or three Mexican families were in the place, besides Inman's fat dueno de la hacienda; that they had been no soldiers in that part of the country for several days. Thus finding the way clear, I mounted and went up to the ranch. Miss Inman, the pretty lady interpreter who so generously came to my rescue at Goliad, gave a cordial greeting and repressed great surprise at seeing me at her home. In the best English I could command, I told her having occasion to pass through the country toward the Rio Grande and having heard that she lived near, I had called, to tender my deepest gratitude for her generous sympathy and the part she had taken in securing my release from the little captain and his heel flies at Goliad, that I had learned that her father was a Unionist and for that cause was located from all the earth by these same Home Guards. She led the way to the sitting room where I was presented to other members of the family and I was once more made to feel that I was in the house of friends. A Mexican servant put my horse in the lot and fed him well. Then it, when the noon hour came, was the guest of honor at a real old time family feast.

During my stay, I related some of the event of my trip, and my start back to Mexico and our travels at night instead of day. Miss Inman did not think I would encounter any serious danger until we reached the west bank of the Nueces, and when informed that we would resume our journey at nightfall, she asked that we send a couple of men for provisions, which she would have ready, grateful that I had her offer of aid, while preparing to tell her good bye and be off, Ciriaco advanced from a group of his countrymen and brought forward a Mexican who wanted to go with us.

He was the pelado who had stayed all night with me in the guard house at Goliad. He recognized me at once and with exuberant joy invoked the blessings of all the saints upon my head. All he asked was an opportunity to show his gratitude for my kindness to him while he was in bonds with not a friend near. Don Ciriaco had told him of the mules. He had no horse, no money, he said, but he could ride one of those mules and that would save the trouble of leading it. He would be true and unselfish my friend. He would be my mozo. I asked Miss Inman about this man and she said that as no witness appeared here at Goliad he could be released and later found his way to their place. She advised me to watch him in case I let him go along, as she had put him down as a bad hombre.

After leave-taking of this hospitable family I mounted and saying to the pelado, "If you think you can go with us if it is agreeable with Ciriaco." I set off for our camp. When we reached camp I told Ciriaco that this Mexican whom we nick-named Zareo on account of a glazy blemish in one of his eyes, was to be strictly under his charge; that it was on his solicitations that I had consented to Just Two days had not elapsed when we all regretted having ever seen Ed Cuero.

When Texas seceded from the Union, the United States troops were withdrawn from all forts along the Rio Grande, thus leaving exposed to the Indians all the settlements along the frontier. This state inaugurated at once a very wise system of frontier defense, the efficiency of which proved to be far superior to that adopted by the federal government after the war.

A well defined line along the border was drawn from the Red River to the gulf. Men were subject to military service and who lived beyond or outside of that line were exempt from service in the Confederate army. They were required to organize into companies and one-half of each was required to be on patrol or scout duty all the time. The Medina river, which is about 15 or 20 miles west of Goliad, was said to be of this line at the time of which I write. Beyond, or west of the Medio there were no home guards, such as we had encountered at Las Moras, but a small party lay in the possibility of running or falling in with soldiers going to or returning from army posts along the Rio Grande frontier.

Leaving the San Antonio river at dark, we rode as far as the Medina, where we dismounted, in mixed guard and ate breakfast by morning. The next evening found we reached the Nueces, about two miles above San Patricio, and we find the river bank in favor of swimming our horses over, as the stream was narrow, and a majority of the boys were against building rafts. It was argued that it would not be possible to undertake to cross at the ferry at San Patricio, as there would likely be a picket guard to intercept there and might cause trouble. But I was over-ruled, and to San Patricio we went. As we passed through the little village of 200 or so, we saw very few people, but when we approached the river an animated scene came in view. There were several wagons and carts, some with cotton en route to Brownsville, mule and ox trains, Mexican, German and American. On the opposite bank were a number of people returning from the Rio Grande, laden with merchandise and government supplies. All these with the exception of the ferryman and the river to become fordable, as the little ferry boat was too small to hold up these heavy wagons. While the ferry boat was being hobbily into this vast encampment with its freight camp fires and incessant din of ox and horse bells, we approached the ferryman and asked for the ferryman and was told that he had gone over with his boat, but would be back in a few minutes. We rode to the water's edge, dismounted and waited for the coming of the boat. El Zareo, our pelado, had ridden one of the pack animals without saddle since leaving the Inman place, and complained of being may camels (very tired) and in great misery. He dismounted and stood and a few questions were asked as to where we were from and to where bound, etc. We gave evasive replies to these questions which seemed to be entirely satisfactory. After about an hour after dark when we all got over, and we rode out about a mile and camped near a small lake, known as Lago Cayman, or Lake of the Alligator.

He was a stranger in this community, but the officers have been furnished with a good description of him and he will probably be apprehended.

Miss Maggie Tomlinson of Medina and Mr. Hugh Saunders of San Antonio were happily married here last Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Judge C. W. Harris performing the ceremony. The newly wedded pair left immediately for San Antonio where they will reside and where the groom is engaged in business. This wedding is the culmination of happy courtship of several years, and both bride and groom are well and favorably known in the Medina region. The bride was a popular schoolmiss in Wm. Hatfield's store in Medina for more than four years and made hundreds of friends there. She is the daughter of Mrs. Mary A. Fisher of this place, while the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Saunders of Medina. The bride's costume was a cocoa brown silk Canton crepe dress with accessories to match. Mr. and Mrs. Saunders have the best wishes of their many friends here for a long, happy and prosperous life.

PIPE CREEK

The pie supper given by the mothers and young ladies was well attended. Miss Rambie and Miss Walker had a nice short program by the pupils and each one did fine. The program was rendered just before we sold the pies, which netted $24.16, and we wish to thank every one who assisted us in any way. The proceeds will go to the school.

PASSED AWAY FRIDAY

W. T. Butler Died in Gillespie County After Three Weeks Illness.

Mr. W. T. Butler died last Friday night at 10 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Guffy, at Luckenbach, Gillespie county, after an illness of three weeks. He was attacked by influenza which developed into pneumonia, and ended in his death. The remains were brought to Bandera for burial, the funeral being held Sunday morning at the home of his son, Dr. J. O. Butler, and the services were conducted by Rev. R. A. Potts, the Methodist pastor. Interment was made in Bandera cemetery at 11:30 a. m. The pall bearers were as follows: Judge B. F. Langford, Judge A. L. Mansfield, Ellis Letcher, Len Rayfield, Frank Billings, C. C. White, J. E. Chism, J. M. Hunter. Honorary pall bearers were L. H. Hayes, J. N. Mickle, Judge J. A. Eames, John Pyka, H. G. Johnson, Aaron Meadows, C. Y. Billings, T. E. Noonan.

The passing of this aged citizen closes the career of a grand old man. For almost four score and ten years he lived to bless those with whom he came in contact, and it is with a heavy heart we chronicle his demise, but while we linger here there abides with us the knowledge that the good he has done is ever present and will continue to be an influence and example for others to emulate. Those who were with him during his last illness, when it became evident he had accomplished the tasks set before him in this life and that the call from labor

Money must be earned. Some of it must be spent. The important thing is to have something left.

Saving money is made easy, if you do the saving before you do the spending. Make every day your banking day. Deposit a regular amount each week before you make your purchases. Make your deposit and forget it. Do not leave so important a matter to chance. What could be a better motto than just this, "Have Something Left." When you deposit your savings in the First National Bank it will earn 4½ per cent interest. We invite you to bank with us.

May Guffy of Luckenbach, and Mrs. Alva Willey of Orange, Texas. Mr. Butler was the eldest of twelve children, and is survived by three brothers, H. C. Butler of Seguin, R. J. Butler of Staples, and J. K. Butler of Sinton. He had been a member of the Methodist church for nearly eighty years, and most of his life as an official in that church. He served in the Confederate army, and was paroled at San Antonio in 1865. He served his country as an officer in civil life for many years. In 1884 he moved to Oxford, Llano county, where he resided for over thirty years, but in 1915 he retired from active life and with his wife came to Bandera to make their home with their son, Dr. J. O. Butler. About six months ago they went to Luckenbach to reside for a time with their daughter, Mrs. Guffy, and was there when stricken with his last illness. His wife, who is now almost eighty years old, has been an invalid for some time.

All of the children were present at the funeral except two, J. W. Butler and Mrs. Alva Willey. To the bereaved ones the New Era extends condolence and sympathy, for we keenly feel the sorrow that has overtaken them. But there is comfort in the knowledge that Mr. Butler lived uprightly, dealt fairly with all men, trusted in God, and died as he had lived, honored and beloved by all who knew him. Peace to his great soul.

VANDERPOOL

Rev. O. J. Cole filled his regular appointment here Sunday.

Clyde McBeth, of the Divide, was in Vanderpool Saturday.

Ben Rhyan, a shoe merchant of St. Louis, left last Saturday for his home after a few days visit to his brother, Robert H. Rhyan, of Evans Creek. While here Mr. Rhyan visited other relatives that he had not seen for about thirty years. He was delighted with our beautiful scenery and mild climate.

J. P. Casparis, O. M. Clayton and A. W. Clayton took three truck loads of fat hogs to Sabinal Friday.

Mrs. Ola Hans, of the Divide is in the Utopia hospital for treatment this week.

Miss Irene Adams, of Tuff, was a pleasant visitor at the home of Misses Genie and Gracie Love last week.

D. Foster, of Sabinal, was a guest of his brother, G. M. Foster of this community, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Neely, of Uvalde, were visitors at the home of their cousin, Price Davis, and family.

Messrs. Harmon and Bomar of La Pryor were here Friday to get more of the oil well material which has been purchased for the well at La Pryor.

Joe Lawless is attending court at Del Rio. During his absence his cousin, Mrs. Freeman, of Leakey, is a guest of his family.

Lamar Casparis came in Saturday for a short stay with homefolks. He returned to La Pryor Monday, where he has a splendid position with Mr. Harmon.

Mrs. A. J. Noel returned last week from a visit to her parents below Utopia. Her grandmother, Mrs. Garrett, died from a stroke of paralysis while Mrs. Noel was there. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved ones in this dark hour.

Mark Chisum, of Sabinal, is up from Uvalde, Father's ranch this week assisting Earl Roberts in shearing their goats.

Audrey Moore, Hortense Casparis and Roberta Thompson now take the mail car to the Taylor school every day since the other one ceased, and Ola Mae Schemmelpfenig stays at her Grandmother Schemmelpfenig's and attends.

Mrs. Leinweber, of Hunt, last week sent the children of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Harris 116 varities of beans for planting, and it is the aim of these children to harvest these beans in time for displaying at the county fair. The beans originally came from Oregon and embrace many new kinds that will be tried here.

Next week the last installment of the Hee-Fly story will appear in the New Era, after which we will begin the publication of a thriller entitled "Nine Years with the Comanches and Apaches," a story of captivity among the Indians. All of our readers have enjoyed the "Hee-Fly Time in Texas" story and we are sure they will be pleased with the next serial.

Springtime is here. We know it's here by the feeling that we must soon begin to dig worms for drowning in the river.

The stretch of the Bandera-San Antonio road which crosses Medina county is going to be put in the finest shape that $4,000 per mile will be put in it. When that part of the road is fixed Bandera will get in the swim and will begin to build up in earnest. A good road is absolutely necessary to the progress of any town.

The Lord made this beautiful region. He adorned it with all the beauties of nature—the trees, the flowers, the songbirds, the rugged hills, the fern-clad cliffs, the sylvan dells, and He erected a delightful spot wherein the town of Bandera could be located, and sent along some pioneers to make the town. And Bandera sprang forth. But in later years the town, located in the midst of such picturesque and delightful surroundings, has become careless about its own appearance. Our streets have become littered with stones, old tin cans and rubbish, our buildings are weather-beaten and sadly in need of paint, and our court house square—But we'll not say it. Look at it for yourself. Seems that we don't appreciate the Lord's handiwork.

Lest we forget! A concrete bridge or causeway is needed at the Hondo Crossing here. Individual effort will never build it, but collectively we can put a bridge there that will meet all demands.

Miss Lois Tobey is the New Era's correspondent at Medina. When our Medina friends have visitors or news items of any kind we would esteem it a favor if they would report the news to Miss Lois at Wm. Hatfield's store.

Gillespie Offers Bonus.

Pledging $100,000 in cash, a straight way through Gillespie county and depot grounds in Fredericksburg to the west railroad that will build a line north and south through Gillespie county into San Antonio, now, that 300 business and professional men, farmers and ranchers, met at Fredericksburg Friday night and started a movement which they hope will result in a north and south road to open up a new territory to Central West Texas.

The meeting was held in the Gillespie county district courtroom and was by far the most enthusiastic assembly of substantial citizens ever gathered there. The meeting was called as a result of the proposed bill in the recent session of the legislature providing that the Frisco Railroad build into San Antonio from Brady.

A number of citizens of Mason county at the meeting pledged that Mason county would raise an equal amount and the movement would be put under way. The spokesman from Mason county said that a bonus and right-of way would be obtained.

The Kendall County Fair is to be held September 1, 2, 3.

Let's have a meeting and arrange for the next county fair. It's time to begin preliminaries.

G. A. McNaughton, father of John McNaughton of Medina, died at his home in San Marcos last Thursday night after a brief illness. Mr. McNaughton was a traveling fish, game and oyster commissioner of Texas, and was well known throughout this section. For many years he published the San Marcos Times, and left it to other parties some time ago, devoting his time to State duties.

From different sources we learn that the fruit crop in this county, though damaged to a great extent by the recent cold, gives promise of a good yield.

George Fee, who lives on Winan's Creek, was in to see us Monday and placed an ad in the New to offering cypress lumber for sale. He also has some hardwood timber suitable for wagon parts which he will sell cheap.

Tom Gray is arranging to install a radio receiving set in his home. Before many months there will be quite a number of radiophones in this community.

Rev. A. E. Reetor, presiding elder of the Methodist church came up from San Antonio Friday to fill several appointments and conduct quarterly conference here and at Medina Sunday, but Saturday night he received a message announcing the death of a relative in San Antonio, and left immediately for home. Rev. E. A. Potts, the local pastor, conducted quarterly conference in his stead.

Pipe Creek school district last Saturday voted a maintenance tax of 25c on the $100 valuation. The voting was pretty lively, 42 being cast for and 31 against.

The Associational B. Y. P. U. will meet at the Baptist church here next Sunday at 3 p. m. A good program has been arranged and delegations will be present from Kerrville, Center Point, Tarpley, Winan's Creek, and Medina. The local B. Y. P. U. will serve refreshments to the visitors.

The graduating class of Bandera High School is arranging to present the play, "A Trial of Hearts," at the close of school.

Tax Payers Protest.

Tax-payers of McCulloch county fired the opening shot in the state campaign against the centralization of state taxation. Gonzales has heretofore been known as the Lexington of Texas, but Brady will claim that distinction for the next scrap for a policy of every tub standing on its own bottom while standing in front of the State Treasurer at Austin.

Formal resolutions calling on County Judge Adkins and members of the county commissioners to reduce assessments in order that confiscation may no longer be practiced in 99 counties of Texas were drawn up by the Chamber of Commerce and have been signed by most of the property owners of the county. Judge Adkins, to whom petition and resolutions will go, is known to be in entire sympathy with the movement. What Brady has started, it is claimed and believed will spread rapidly over the entire State.

It is expected and intended that this campaign will have keen influence over the coming special session of the 38th Legislature and defeat of the Satterwhite tax equalization measure at the regular session brought about the crular sale of organized resistance to the present policy that McCulloch county voters so vigorously oppose.

The resolution is already designated a new declaration of independence and its echoes are confidently expected to be heard from all Texas.

The resolution follows:

"Resolved that we, taxpayers of McCulloch county, in meeting assembled this 22nd day of March 1923, feeling hurt and aggrieved that owing to the methods of assessment for State taxes in Texas, we are forced to pay a higher assessment, 50 per cent of actual value and hence to pay more taxes to the state than 99 counties that by reason of a system of law assessments averaging about 15 per cent value draw out of the State Treasury a sum of money greater than the total of all the taxes they pay to the State. We feel that this unequal taxation amounts to confiscation, to which we as free Americans, cannot submit. Now therefore, we do hereby petition our county officers, as far as possible to do so without injuring our county, to reduce our assessments to the same basis of value, as followed by the 99 counties, that in effect pay no taxes to Texas."

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and Who Re-Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties

We were all greatly fatigued with the days hard riding, and being, as we thought, beyond the pale of any serious danger, spirit of security seemed to possess the men. No one wanted to stand guard; it was useless, they contended, we would not be molested, and all were too tired and sleepy to keep watch. I insisted, begged and persuaded until they reluctantly yielded. I kept watch the first two hours and it was only by continued walking and moving about and around the horses that I kept awake. Sleep seemed near to envelop me as a mantle and several times I came near yielding to its influence. At 11 o'clock I turned in, after calling Ciriaco to go watch until 12 o'clock. At 12 he came in and Wiley Clampit and young Kendrick went out.

I was up at dawn and found that Clamnit and Kendrick were still out. When it was sufficient light to see well I discovered that our stock was scattered, and could see no one on duty. I called Clampit and Kendrick to sleep under a huisache bush near the edge of the chaparal. Ciriaco's horse and Clampit's saddle were gone, and El Zarco was nowhere in sight. Ciriaco hastened to the ferry, but no horseman had passed that way. In our search Ciriaco met up with a Mexican soldier, Heliano Torres, who told him that the place where we camped was the most noted of any spot on the road from Soto la Marina to Lago Cayman. He said a few miles above was the "Rincon" a big bend in the river—and this was one of the most wilderness of chaparal and tanglewood. He stated that this bend afforded a safe hiding place for thieves and their stolen stock. This information led to the conclusion that El Zarco had gone to the Rincon, but I ordered the men in search in five directions, one with Ciriaco and others I went to explore the Rincon and the other two men remained to guard the camp.

Two miles above Lago Cayman we came to a ranch occupied by a Mr. Cox, a brother to Rev. Ivy H. Cox, a pioneer Methodist preacher in the West Texas Conference. With the Doctor resided his son-in-law, Jack Cook and wife. The ranch they occupied was on the line of old Fort San Miguel, where a desperate battle was fought and won by the Texans during the revolution. The ruins of the old fort still remained and overlooked a beautiful lake in the valley below. While at the ranch and just before leaving I noticed a very comely looking young man who, while clad in citizen's clothing, wore a Federal cavalryman's hat, such as I had seen the First and Second Texas, U. S. A., wear during Banks' occupation of Brownsville. The young man seemed preoccupied with his own thoughts and appeared to shun me or rather hold himself aloof from me.

Mr. Cook kindly consented to assist me in the exploration on the Rincon. I had engaged the Mexican, Feliciano, and his brother on account of their knowledge of the Rincon and with these two, Ciriaco, Mr. Cook and myself, five in all, we struck out for the big bend. Ciriaco and another man took a trail crossing the river. While riding along I observed a covered to the saddle of a strange horse. On this I called Ciriaco's attention and he declared they were those of his horse. We had no time to lose. Following Mr. Cook's suggestion two men were to swim the river over and follow the trail. Two others were to go on the south side of the river to the old Brownsville crossing, cross over and travel down the river until they should meet the two on their way up the river, having to the great bend in the river Ciriaco and I on the south side would have a much shorter distance to travel, would stand a chance to head off the theives should they keep near the narrow bottoms.

We remained until my scouts had disappeared and then returned to camp. In a few minutes some of our scouts came in and reported they had found no trace of the missing man and horse. Early the next morning Ciriaco and I mounted the mules and went up to the ranch, entertaining a hope that we might hear something from the boys before we started out. I had resolved to keep my eye on those mules day and night hence the reason for having ridden them that morning.

Mr. Cook was like all old Texans in those days, generous to a fault when at his house, and while you were welcome to stay as long as you wished, yet he would employ any and all arts to blister you in a horse trade. Dr. Cox was a Virginian and his long residence in Texas had not impaired in the least those noble attributes of the true Virginian.

Mr. Cook, the Doctor and the Yankee, who was introduced to me as Mr. Stanfield, were going several miles up the river that morning and pressed us to go along. The Doctor took his gun and piloted us to an old ruin in which he seemed to take some interest. This ruin was about four miles above the house and stood on an eminence overlooking the river valley on the east and south, while to the north a short distance away a small creek of water emptied into the Nueces. The walls were of white, soft limestone and were in a fine state of preservation, although hoary with age. The ruin was known among the Mexicans and the few Irish and Americans in that region as "Casa Blanco" (white house) but no one professed to know the builders or for what purpose it had been erected. From the Casa Blanca we went to the Mann ranch a few miles above where a fine property was owned by a Mrs. Mann, and her horse and brand—the running M—was known from the San Antonio to the Rio Grande. We found the place wholly abandoned. The beautiful residence stood with doors ajar, and the silence of desolation brooded over the surroundings. Dr. Cox dismounted and led the way. In the rooms, once luxuriantly furnished, is still remained some of the furniture, but that which held my attention most was the once magnificient library. From early childhood I had been a "book worm," and here spread out before me was the accumulated wisdom of ages. Books on the chairs, on the tables, on the shelves, books everywhere, and for me, no time to read scarcely a title page. Every feature in this once elegant mansion betokened former wealth, refinement and refinement. The sons had gone to war, and the mother and sisters not caring to hazard their lives on a ranch exposed to refugees and exposed to the rapacity of border ruffians, had retired to Goliad, leaving their vast herds of stock and their only home to the mercies of the Bedouins of the border.

Cook and Williams left us and went to look after our stock, and we started on our return. When we had gone some distance the Doctor opened a magazine he had secured at the ranch and began to read as we proceeded. This was my opportunity to fall back and engage Mr. Stanfield in conversation. I told him that Mr. Cook had informed me of his arrest and his detention and further told him how I came to be there and my destination, etc., and if he wanted to escape, I would help him safely to Matamoras. He asked if I was in earnest or was I jesting with him in his misfortune. He would gladly go, but would take any risk; his people in Illinois were well-to-do and if I would provide a way for his escape, would be amply repaid and some day. Before reaching the ranch a plan of escape was agreed upon and learned that Kendrick and Clampit had found a trail where two horses had just left to the river and their tracks where they went out on the opposite side were plainly visible. When Ciriaco examined the tracks he declared they were those of his horse. We had no time to lose. Following Mr. Cook's suggestion two men were to swim the river over and follow the trail. Two others were to go on the south side of the river to the old Brownsville crossing, cross over and travel down the river until they should meet the two on their way up the river, having to the great bend in the river Ciriaco and I on the south side would have a much shorter distance to travel

I understood the signal and we hurried back and learned that Kendrick and Clampit had found a trail where two horses had put me to the river and their tracks where they went out on the opposite side. We were plainly visible. When Ciriaco examined the tracks he declared they were thhose of his horse. We had no time to lose. Following Mr. Cook's suggestion two men were to swim the horses over and follow the trail. Two others were to go on the south side of the river to the old Beeville crossing, cross over and travel down the river until they should meet the two on their way up the river. Owing to the great bend in the river those going up on the south side would have a much shorter distance to travel and would stand a chance to head off the theives should they keep near the narrow bottoms.

We remained until my scouts had disappeared and then returned to camp. During the evening some of our scouts came in and reported they had found no trace of the missing man and horse. Early the next morning Williams and I mounted the mules and went up to the ranch, entertaining a hope that we might hear something from the boys who were still out. I had resolved to keep my eye on those mules day and night hence, the reason for having ridden them that morning.

He asked if I was in earnest or was I jesting with him in his misfortune. He would gladly go; he would take any risk; his people in Illinois were well-to-do and if I would provide a way for his escape I would be amply rewarded. Midnight we were safe in camp and home day. Before reaching the ranch a plan of escape was agreed boys and told them to saddle up, upon, on condition that Ciriaco's horse was recovered.

As most of our stock had been on the grass all day, that night we staked them and put out our guard. It was a delightful clear evening, and we sat around and talked on various subjects until a late hour, when we were startled by the appearance of three horsemen approaching from the direction of the ferry. They were Ciriaco, Shoffit and Kendrick. They had caught the thieves and recovered the horses. Ciriaco would have but little to say about the capture, but Shoffit and Kendrick said it beat a circus. Near the spot where the capture was made, was a small mot of naqua trees. The prisoners were led to this mot and each tied to a tree. The two boys could not understand Spanish very well, but they said they never heard so many "Carrajos" (a Mexican curse word) in all their lives. They stood by as mere spectators to see the fun, while Ciriaco was spokesman, orator and executioner. He tied El Zarco, the pelado, to a small naqua, stripped off all his clothes and whipped him most unmercifully with his quirt. The boys declared that he would have beaten him to death had they not interferred and stopped the performance. Not being satisfied with the beating he gave him before and cut every rag of his clothing, even his shoes into Tragments and turned him loose stark naked. The Mexican with El Zarco could speak a little English and protested his innocence. He was a young lad, and as they had no proof against him other than being caught in bad company, they let him off easy.

The next morning, accompanied by Ciriaco and three others of my trustworthy men, I went up to Dr. Cox's. On the road I told these men my plans for getting the Yankee out of his trouble. When we reached the Doctor's it was quite probable that I would have no chance to talk to my prisoner, as my host would occupy all of my time, and, moreover, if seen talking to with Stanfield suspicions would be aroused. One of the boys could get him aside and instruct him to be at Lago Cayman that night between 9 and 10 o'clock without fail. I noticed while at the ranch the previous day a McLelland saddle, the kind used by the federal cavalry at Brownsville, and was to be instructed to bring the light army saddle, a bridle and a stake rope, which he could easily carry.

We remained a couple of hours and his family that the Doctor and his family that the object of my visit was to thank them for the kind favors they had shown me; that I was going to leave immediately, and sincerely hoped that some future day we might meet again under more favorable circumstances. By way of parenthesis I want to say here that on this and my previous visit I took note of the three sons of Dr. Cox. James, the eldest, who was about my age, later became one of the dearest boyhood friends I ever knew. Alex, another son, was some ten or twelve old, while the youngest—Lennie they called him—was a wee bluegrel lad about four years old and was the pet of the family. He is now a prsperous merchant at Ozona, Texas, and Crockett county has not a more popular upright citizen than L. B. Cox.

During our stay at Dr. Cox's I observed that one of our men was engaged in conversation with Stanfield and I made my stay sufficiently long to enable him to explain fully every detail of my plan. When we left the ranch one of the men told me to be on my guard, as Cook had left early that morning and he believed he was getting his crowd together and if possible arrest us on some pretext or other. He was hated by the Mexicans, and at all hazards I should be on my guard. (While seated at his table writing, Cook was shot and killed by a Mexican shortly after the close of the war.)

It was about 10 miles from the Nueces to Banquette, which was then a very small village on Agua Dulce Creek, and directly on the road to King's ranch and Brownsville. We rode to the Agua Dulce that evening, leaving Banquette two or three miles to the right and went into the brush, struck camp and waited for night to shelter further operations. When it became dark, four of us rode back to Cayman and lingered there until our man came up with his saddle and bridle swinging across his shoulder. We had an extra horse ready for him and by 9 o'clock without fail. I noticed while at the ranch the previous day a McLelland saddle, the kind used by the federal cavalry at Brownsville, and was to be instructed to bring the light army saddle, a bridle and a stake rope, which he could easily carry.

To Build Monument.

The movement to erect a monument to the memory of the Bandera county boys who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War is now under way. A committee is composed of W. R. Fletcher, J. W. Short, Judge A. L. Mansfield, Miss Margaret Montague and Mrs. Chas. Eckhart, who will receive all donations toward the monument fund. Sums from $1.00 up are solicited, and as donations are made the names of the donors will appear in the New Era each week. It is hoped to raise $1,000 by voluntary subscription for this purpose, and patriotic sentiments should impell every citizen to send in his subscription at once without having to be solicited by the committee. Those noble boys gave their lives that we might enjoy the blessings of liberty. What will you give, that their sacrifice might be kept fresh in the minds of the oncoming generations?

All Day Singing.

The Church of Christ of Rocky Creek, Lima and Wallace Creek will hold an all day singing at Medina the fifth Sunday in the month, April 29th and will have dinner on the ground. Every body will be invited to be there and take part in the singing.

The Company You Keep

Just as a man is judged in a personal way by the company he keeps, so is he judged in a business way by the banking connection he makes.

A checking or savings account with a good reliable institution like this one reflects good business judgment. It builds prestige.

So choose wisely and soon.

Warren Hunter has been trying out some experiments with his radio receiving set, and is now able to transmit by telephone the concerts he receives over the radio. By placing a telephone in front of the radio's loud speaker horn he relays the concerts. During the past few nights he has treated friends at Medina, Parley, Pipe Creek and Utopia to radio music via the telephone.

Have Something Left

Money must be earned. Some of it must be spent. The important thing is to have something left.

Saving money is made easy, if you do the saving before you do the spending. Make every day your banking day. Deposit a regular amount each week before you make your purchases. Make your deposit and forget it. Do not leave so important a matter to chance. What could be a better motto than just this: "Have Something Left." When you deposit your savings in the First National Bank it will earn 4½ per cent interest. We invite you to bank with us.

PIPE CREEK.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Drake, of Boerne, spent Sunday with relatives at Pipe Creek.

Mrs. Charles Spencer has returned to her home at Pipe Creek after a delightful visit to friends at Kenedy.

A large crowd of young folks enjoyed an Easter party Saturday night at the home of J. E. Callahan in the Pipe Creek community. Prizes were given girls for the prettiest display of easter eggs, and to the boys for best display of candies, as follows: Mrs. Charlie Callahan, first prize; Miss Rebecca Vawter, second prize; Arthur Pickens, first prize; Edgar Pickens, second prize. Everybody had a fine time at this happy gathering.

B. Y. P. U. Rally.

The Associational B. Y. P. U. rally at the Baptist church last Sunday drew a large crowd, delegations coming from Medina, Tarpley, Kerrville, Lewis Creek and other parts of the district. The meeting was directed by Ed Caton, of Medina, and the program given was a very well arranged and enjoyable affair, and was as follows:

Song by the congregation.
Devotional, led by Delbert Hicks of Tarpley.
Welcome address by Miss Evelyn Mansfield of Bandera.
Response to the address of welcome by Howard Butt of Kerrville.
Violin solo, by Austin Carlton of Bandera.
Keynote address by Ed Caton of Medina.
Piano solo, by Miss Martha Holt of Kerrville.
"What the B. Y. P. U. means to the individual," by Miss Garnett of Medina.
Talk given by Gordon Taylor of the San Marcos Baptist Academy.
Business session.

The members and visitors of the B. Y. P. U. were then served with delicious refreshments of cake and punch, after which adjournment was taken. The next meeting of the Associational B. Y. P. U. is to be held at Ingram.

Home Caught Fire.

Veteran Amasa Clark and his good wife were in from the farm yesterday afternoon and called to see the New Era force. They informed us that their home caught fire yesterday morning, and but for the speedy country of the blaze by their daughter, Mrs. Bessie Schmidike, it might have been destroyed. A few buckets of water soon put out the fire, which was caused by burning cinders falling on the roof.

HEEL-FLY TIME IN TEXAS

Experiences of a Young Man Who Went to Mexico to Avoid Conscription, and When He Returned to He Encountered Many Difficulties.

(Concluded)

Feeling quite safe and thirty miles of the main line of travel we decided to rest at Rancho Los Olmes a couple of days and give our horses needed rest. Grass was excellent, rich and nutritious and the simple Mexicans were kind and hospitable. The morning after our arrival a Captain and 30 men, all Mexicans, belonging to Benevides' regiment of cavalry, U. S. A. came up and went into camp within fifty yards of our location.

Before unsaddling, a bunch of their men shot a fine beef steer that with other cattle had come to the watering place, and while some built fires others engaged in dressing the beef and ere long the aroma of barbecued meats filled the air. The owner of the animal came out and protested, the captain offered him ten dollars in Confederate money, which was refused. The refusal gave the captain mortal offence. He told the old Mexican who was being ruthlessly robbed that his refusal to accept the national currency showed that he was a traitor to his country and that he ought to be shot. He, the captain, with his men had been detailed to procure a large herd of beeves for the hungry soldiers that were fighting for their country; he had orders to pay ten dollars a head in Confederate money (which was ten cents or less on the dollar), and when a cattle owner refused the offer, he was a traitor and no pay would he get.

These men were well mounted, well armed and better dressed than any Confederate soldiers I had ever seen. The captain offered to divide beef with me and became very friendly. When he asked me to what command I belonged I told him I was captain of my company and we had been detailed to scout through that section and to report to the commandant at Rancho Davis; that we were short of coffee and sugar and if he had any of those luxuries to spare I hoped he would honor us with a small requisition. Certainly, he didn't have anything to spare on hand, but he would be more than glad to accommodate a comrade in arms—and we got fourteen pounds of real high grade coffee and two dozen pelonellios—the only kind of sugar they had.

In conversation, this captain admitted the stealing of livestock and justified the act by saying that it was for the benefit and maintenance of the army. He further stated with humor that in the organization of the regiment which he commanded that if ten companies of Mexicans were incorporated in one regiment with Mexican officers, they would steal everything in sight from El Paso to Boca del Rio Grande. "Acting upon this advice," said he, they had attached seven companies of Americans to our regiment and it turned out they can steal more in one day than we can in a life time. They steal cotton and grab the customs revenues, while we are busy down to press beeves and horses for the government and when these are driven across the river and sold they pocket the proceeds, barely allowing us our monthly pay of sixteen dollars, specie, our sugar, coffee, clothing, etc."

After five or two days at Los Olmes and the morning we left one of the captain's men told Cirilano they had rounded up over six hundred head, during the past day and a half and that they would get as many more before leaving. I wish to say in this connection that I do not vouch for the truth of this Mexican captain's statement, I merely wish to relate the story as I was told to me. At the time, I had no occasion to give it discredit.

Our next point was a crossing on the Rio Grande, some miles below Rancho Davis. I had learned from the Mexican captain, from Ranch Los Olmes, that one of the two American companies of his Benevides's Regiment was posted at Rancho Davis. Knowing the cupidity of these soldiers stationed on the Rio Grande, I had no desire to meet but rather the reverse and fervent desire to avoid their presence. However, we traveled leisurely, gave our horses ample time to rest and graze until we reached a point about eight or ten miles from Rancho Davis we fell in with two Mexicans, the elder of whom informed us that he had owned a ranch four miles below Rancho Davis and invited us to go by and accept his hospitality as there was to be a baile (dance) there that night and we would be entirely welcome.

I sized this man up as being an all round picaro, a fawning rascal and would do to watch. We had halted when he and his compadre came up and after listening to his invitation to his fandango, I told him of our situation, our desire to push on and without encountering opposition from the Confederates. He told me there was

The Ford Coupe, with electric self starting and lighting system, has a big, broad seat deeply upholstered. Sliding plate glass windows so that the breeze can sweep right through the open car. Or in case of storm, the Coupe becomes a closed car, snug rain-proof and dust-proof. Has all the Ford economies in operation and maintenance. The little old home paper has been under the present management two years and during that time it has prospered in such a way as to lead us to believe that the people appreciate the efforts put forth in behalf of our town and county, which encourages us to redouble our efforts to make the New Era just such a newspaper that everybody will want to read. We will pursue the even tenor of our way, eschewing politics, treat all fairly, and do our best to make Bandera the "Glory Hole" of Southwest Texas.

We are not ashamed to boost this wonderful region. There may be some who think the New Era goes to the extreme in telling of the advantages and resources of Bandera land, but just let them go elsewhere and reside for a time and before long they will be coming back singing the song of repentance and praising Bandera above all other sections. Candidly, the writer has lived in various portions of Texas, and we have never found any section equal Bandera. Of course we do have our disadvantages here, and drawbacks, but taken as a whole it is a goodly land, figuratively flowing with milk and honey, and the sooner we all come to realize this fact the better it will be and we will set about to overcome such disadvantages as we have.

Chas. Schreiner

Miss Myra Jennette Hunter has completed the taking of the scholastic census in the Bandera school district, and reports 220 scholasties enumerated.

C. A. Moore, of Camp Verde, is a new New Era reader. He ordered the great family weekly sent to his address for a year, and also ordered a copy of the Pioneer History of Bandera County.

The many friends of Mrs. Lee Burney of Center Point are pleased to learn that she is rapidly recovering from appendicitis, for which she underwent an operation at a Kerrville sanitarium several days ago. Mrs. Burney is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fitzgerald of Bandera.

L. H. Hayes informs the New Era that he will open a meat market in the Lincoln building about the 15th of the present month. The establishment will be in charge of his son, Will Hayes, and W. E. Schoenert will be employed for awhile to assist in getting started.

George L. Dixon, postmaster general at Tarpley, dropped in to chat with us Saturday and gave good report of conditions in his bailiwick. George L. has been bitten by a radio bug and conceived our radio specialist while he who advised him that the only remedy for his ailment was to get a receiving set.

John Ross has been giving demonstrations of a handy sprayer in town, and the dozens of ills that is claimed for it. It is a very simple affair, something on the order of a pump, but it can be used to spray trees, disinfect poultry houses, wash automobiles, and do many other things about the premises. Let him tell you about its usefulness.

Mr. and Mrs. Louie Haegelin and children were in the city Saturday and Mrs. Haegelin called to renew her subscription to the New Era and also ordered the little paper to continue its weekly visits to her father, Mr. C. Backhaus at Pipe Creek. She informs us that her parents paid her a visit and spent a couple of days at her home a short time ago.

The story, "Heel Fly Time in Texas," will be published in pamphlet form within a short time. It will contain nearly 100 pages and will be sold for fifty cents per copy. Place your order now if you want a copy.

We inadvertently announced in our last week's issue that the election for school trustees would be held on Tuesday April 3, when we should have said the election would be held on Saturday April 7. The first Saturday in April is the usual time for holding elections for this purpose.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Price and Miss Mabel Thalmann went to Vanderpool Friday after Miss Leo Price, who has been teaching the Nalyon school. They returned Saturday.

We are not ashamed to boost this wonderful region. There may be some who think the New Era goes to the extreme in telling of the advantages and resources of Banderaland, but just let them go elsewhere and reside for a time and before long they will be coming back singing the song of repentance and praising Bandera above all other sections. Candidly, the writer has lived in the various portions of Texas, and we have never found any section equal Bandera. Of course we have our disadvantages here, and drawbacks, but taken as a whole it is a goodly land, figuratively flowing with milk and honey, and the sooner we all come to realize this fact the better it will be and we will set about to overcome such disadvantages as we have.

Chas. Schreiner

KERRVILLE, TE

When you have visitors don't forget to ring the New Era and tell us about them. Or better still, write their names on a slip of paper and send in to this office and in this way assist us in keeping the little old home paper up to its present standard.

The Bandera Plumbing and Tin Shop can supply you with corrugated iron roofing. tf

If you want to sell your property list it with me. I have calls for farms and ranches of all sizes. Bear Perner. tf

Miss Helen Rugh returned Tuesday from San Antonio where she spent the past month.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hayes have rented the Welch cottage and will move in from the Montague ranch next week.

Pete Pyka and B. F. Langford will go to San Antonio next Sunday to serve as jurors in Federal court.

Tarpley is to have a radio. George L. Dixon, postmaster at that place, engaged Warren Hunter to make and install a receiving set in his office.

Mrs. O. L. Wallace, of San Antonio, came up last Thursday and spent several days with her sister, Mrs. C. R. Rugh. Mr. Wallace came for her Tuesday.

All matter intended for publication should be sent in not later than Wednesday noon. Items coming in later than that hour may be crowded out.

Mrs. Brian Autrey, of San Antonio, came up last Friday to spend a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Mansfield.

Joe Bullion, of Fredericksburg, was here yesterday on business. Mr. Bullion is engaged in securing and marketing walnut timber, and informed us that he has crews on the Sabinal and near Harper getting it out for shipment. We necessarily met Mr. Bullion for nearly eighteen years, and were glad to greet him again, and to know that these time has dealt gently with him.

In this issue will be found the advertisement of the Kuehne Hardware Company of Boerne. They will appreciate your business and cordially invite you to come and see them when in Boerne.

We have a few copies of the "Pioneer History of Bandera County" on hand yet, and if you have not secured a copy we urge you to get one before it is too late. Price, postpaid, $1.00.

A. K. Burr, of San Antonio, was a business visitor in the city Saturday.

E. J. Frazer and Wm. Church, attorneys of San Antonio, were here on business Saturday.

George Johnson passed through Bandera Monday enroute to his home at Medina from a business trip to San Antonio.

John Wright, of Oklahoma City, Okla., arrived Tuesday on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Wright.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Price and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Meadows were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elvins Hicks at the ranch Sunday.

A special session of commissioners' court was held last Saturday to approve bonds of county officials made to conform to the new law.

Mrs. W. A. Davenport, Sr., is steadily recovering from her recent severe attack of pneumonia, and her many friends hope she will soon be able to be about.

Miss Myra Jennette Hunter has completed the taking of the scholastic census in the Bandera school district, and reports 220 scholastics enumerated.

C. A. Moore, of Camp Verde, is a new New Era reader. He orders the great family weekly sent to his address for a year, and also takes a copy of the Pioneer History of Bandera County.

The many friends of Mrs. Lee Burney of Center Point are pleased to know that she is rapidly recovering from appendicitis, for which she underwent an operation at a Kerrville sanitarium several days ago. Mrs. Burney is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fitzgerald of Bandera.

L. H. Hayes informs the New Era that he will open a meat market in the Lincoln building about the 15th of the present month. The establishment will be in charge of his son, Will Hayes, and W. E. Schoenert will be employed for a while to assist in getting started.

George L. Dixon, postmaster general at Tarpley, dropped in to the New Era office Tuesday and a good report of conditions in his bailiwick. George L. has been bitten by a radio bug and consulted our radio specialist while here who advised him that the only remedy for his ailment was to get a receiving set.

John Ross has been giving demonstrations of a handy sprayer in town, and the device does all that is claimed for it. It is a very simple affair, something on the order of a pump, but it can be used to spray, fruit trees, dissinfect poultry houses, wash automobiles, and do many other things about the premises. Let him tell you about its usefulness.

Mr. and Mrs. Louie Haegelin and children were in the city Saturday and Mrs. Haegelin called to renew her subscription to the New Era and also ordered the little paper to continue its weekly visits to her father, Mr. C. Backhaus at Pipe Creek. She informs us that her parents paid her a visit and spent a couple of days at her home a short time ago.

The story, "Heel Fly Time in Texas," will be published in pamphlet form within a short time. It will contain nearly 100 pages and will be sold for fifty cents per copy. Place your order now if you want a copy.

We inadvertently announced in our last week's issue that the election for school trustees would be held on Tuesday April 3, when we should have said the election would be held on Saturday April 7. The first Saturday in April is the usual time for holding elections for this purpose.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Price and Miss Mabel Thalmann went to Vanderpool Friday after Miss Leo Price, who has been teaching at Nalyon school. They returned Saturday.

An Honored Citizen Dies.

Mr. W. W. Coughran died at his home in this city last Sunday after a lingering illness of several months. Funeral services were conducted at the home by Rev. E. A. Potts, pastor of the Methodist church, and interment was made in Bandera cemetery in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing friends and relatives.

William Wesley Coughran was born near Center Point, Polk county, Arkansas, December 18, 1843, being therefore 79 years, 3 months and 8 days old when the Death Angel came and gathered him unto his fathers. Mr. Coughran came to Texas with his parents in 1860, and later entered the Confederate army and was in the closing battle of the war at Brownsville, and received his discharge there. He was married to Miss Permelia Adkinson November, 8, 1866, who died in 1877. To this union were born six children, four of whom are living, Wesley Coughran of Marfa, Oscar Coughran, Austin Coughran of Tarpley, and Mrs. Mollie Boyce of Rocksprings. In 1879 Mr. Coughran was married to Miss Melissa Harrison, and to them were born seven children, three girls and four boys, five of whom are still living, Luther Coughran, Ed Coughran, Mrs. Lillie White, Miss Stella Coughran of Bandera, and Elmer Coughran of Tarpley.

Deceased moved to Bandera county in 1900, and was known throughout the county for his uprightness, honesty and right living. He had been a member of the Methodist church since his twenty-first birthday. He was loved and esteemed by all who knew him, and in his passing Bandera county loses a good citizen, the community a good friend, and the family a kind, loving husband and father. Mrs. W. L. Pries and little daughter, Armintie, returned Tuesday from a most enjoyable week's visit to her daughter and sister who are in the normal at San Marcos.

Otto Meyers, under direction of our trustees, has just completed a nice cement cistern at the school house.

Gus Klemstein is doing some substantial improvements in and around his home, while F. A. Maverza is building a roomy barn of native cypress lumber.

Our community feels a little bit honored, that through the kindness of Warren Hinrise, of Bandera, we were treated to a most delicious cake contest, at the school house one day each week, after a vote of merit, thanks to him and hope he may come again some time.

Fred Thalmann and Guy Bamsin transacted business in San Antonio Monday.

District Conference to Meet Here.

The meeting of the Kerrville District Conference of the Methodist church is to be held in Bandera April 25 to 29, inclusive. Preachers and delegates from Kerrville, Center Point, Mason, New Braunfels, Boerne, Fredericksburg, Junction, and other points will be in attendance, and it is desired that the homes of our visitors and that they be provided people be thrown open to the with accomodations during the five days' session of the conference. If you can take care of one or more of the visitors please notify the Methodist pastor, Rev. E. A. Potts.

For The Heroes' Monument.

Next week we will begin the publication of the list of donations to the monument to be erected to the memory of the Bandera county boys who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War. If you have not already contributed please send your contribution to this office or to Miss Margaret Montague, the treasurer of the monument committee. Let's raise the thousand dollars needed in quick time.

Miss Cecile Hamner, of San Antonio, was the guest of Miss Loris Faris a few days last week.

Have Something Left

Saving money is made easy, if you do the saving before you do the spending. Make every day your banking day. Deposit a regular amount each week before you make your purchases. Make your deposit and forget it. Do not leave so important a matter to chance. What could be a better motto than just this: "Have Something Left." When you deposit your savings in the First National Bank it will earn 4½ per cent interest. We invite you to bank with us.

Talk on for Bandera.

Rejoice and be glad, Bandera land has donned the garb of springtime and loviness crowns her brow.

Have you responded to the call for donations to the soldier's monument in Bandera? Don't delay.

The beautiful spring weather makes the fellow who lives in this glorious land rejoice that his lot is cast in such a delightful regich. It will soon be fishing time, boys.

A pleaant greeting for the stranger in our midst has a far-reaching effect. That stranger goes back to his people and tells that Bandera people are neighborly.

Bandera is noted for that old time West Texas hospitality that was so much in vogue some thirty or forty years ago. Let it be said that this hospitality still lives. Entertain the preachers and visitors at the Kerrville District Conference which meets here the last of this month in such a manner that when they return to their homes they will be able to say that Bandera is the most hospitable town in the state.

The New Era completes its seventh year this week, and we enter upon our eighth year with excellent prospects. The New Era is a healthy youngster, and lays aside its swaddling clothes to don larger and more fitting garments, for it expects to confine to grow.

Remember the meeting at the court house next Saturday to arrange details for the next county fair. You are urged to attend the meeting. Get your "dander" up, and hustle to make the fair the best ever.

The State Legislature has been called to meet in special session next Monday to pass revenue measures that will take care of the fast increasing defieit of the state treasury.

"Lest we forget." Donate a dollar or more to the soldiers' monument fund today.

It has been demonstrated that Bandera county can display the greatest array of farm and ranch products of any county in South-west Texas. Our neatly arranged and well conducted fairs of previous years have occasioned much favorable comment. Let's go to greater lengths this year. Attend the fair meeting at the court house next Saturday.

OUR HEROIC DEAD

On the monument to be erected in Bandera to the memory of the Bandera county boys who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War—yielded up their lives in freedom's cause, will appear engraved the following names;

LESLIE BOWNDS	WADE EVANS
ERNEST POLVADO	BLAKE DAVIS
SAM CLARK	JOHN V. KALKA
OSCAR HABY	HENRY LOESSBERG
JAMES POLVADO	ARTHUR PADGETT
LOWELL PATTERSON	CHARLIE EVANS
RAYMOND ECKHART	NATHAN BAKER
ELMER SCHUMAKER	NEWT PETTY
TWIGG L. WOOD	FRED HAMMOND
EDWARD BURLESON	HENRY BAUMER

Won't you contribute a dollar or more to the monument that will perpetuate the memory of these boys? Send your donation to Miss Margaret Montague, treasurer of the monument committee.

Bandera is going to entertain the preachers and delegates who come to the meeting of the Kerrville District Conference here April 25 to 29 inclusive. The five days' session will be a busy one. Accommodations for the visitors will be provided, and they will be made to feel that Bandera is brimming over with hospitality and good fellowship. Open wide your doors and invite them to come in. If being a Methodist gathering, there is going to be a noticeable decrease in the feathered tribe after the conference adjourns, for many chickens will be forced to "enter the ministry."

Campers and outing parties are already beginning to come to Bandera to enjoy our delightful climate and out-door attractions. The summer season will witness the greatest influx of these visitors ever seen here.

The all-day singing at Medina on the fifth Sunday in this month, arranged by the Church of Christ, promises to be a real enjoyable event, and singers from Lima, Rocky Creek, Wallace Creek, Tuff, Bandera, Laxson Creek, and other parts of the county will be there. You are invited to come and stay all day. Bring your baskets, for dinner will be spread 'neath the shade of the trees.

Eradication of the tick has depleted Bandera county funds, but Uncle Sam says the tick must be eradicated at any cost. When we get rid of the tick, we'll be tickled to announce that funds will be available to improve our court house square.

Don't fail to read the opening installment of the story, "Nine Years with Apaches and Comanches," which appears this week. This story will run through three or four issues of the New Era, and when it is finished we have another good one to follow. The New Era is the only weekly paper in Texas featuring this kind of matter. If you do not take the New Era, don't you think you ought to?

When you have visitors don't forget to ring the New Era and tell us about them. Or better still, write their names on a slip of paper and send in to this office and in this way assist us in keeping the little old home paper up to its present standard.

Radio Sets made to order. Get my prices before buying elsewhere.—Warren Hunter.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Duff, were in from the farm Saturday.

Miss Tennessee Whitehead, of Medina, was a visitor in the city Thursday.

Jake Short, accompanied by his friend and classmate, Johnnie Jefferson, came up from San Antonio Friday night to visit homefolks.

In the election held last Saturday Henry White was elected on the board of trustees for this school district. Full returns from ever the county for trustee at large are not all in, and we do not know who was elected to that office.

Mrs. E. R. Fulks, of Somerset, is spending the week with the family of B. F. Faris.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hayes and Mrs. A. A. Head were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will Hayes at the Montague ranch last Sunday.

Allen Hayes, who holds a position in Houston, is home on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hayes.

The graduating class of Bandera High School will present that interesting play, "Hearts and Diamonds," sometime in May, under the direction of Mrs. G. S. Rambie, the efficient expression teacher.

The new St. Joseph's school building is nearing completion. The interior walls are now being plastered and within a short time the new edifice will be finished throughout.

Miss Loris Faris has returned from San Antonio where she spent a couple of weeks with her sister, Mrs. S. H. Ford, who has been ill with influenza.

W. E. Mansfield and son, Frank, went to Three Rivers last week to look after some cattle they have pastured there.

A. V. Pue was in from the ranch Monday and dropped in to "howdy" the editor, and incident ally give us a pat on the back and an encouraging word.

Judge Sam O'Bryant, who is now living at Taft, California, asks that the little old home paper be sent to him there. Judge O'Bryant has many friends throughout this county who wish him prosperity and good luck in the Golden State.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallace returned to San Antonio last Thursday after a visit to Mrs. Wallace's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hodges. Mrs. Wallace spent several weeks with her mother while Mrs. Hodges was dangerously ill with pneumonia, remained until she was able to be up and fully recovered.

Chas. Ruede, a prosperous stock farmer of the Pipe Creek community, was a visiter Friday and renewed his subscription to the little old home paper. Mr. Ruede informs us that he will soon begin shearing his sheep, some of which have twelve months' wool on their backs and he expects to receive a good price for the fleece.

The Story of Herman Lehmann, Who Was Captured by Indians in Mason County, and Who Became to All Intents and Purposes an Indian father and mother of Herman Lehmann came over from Germany with the Prince Solms colony in 1846, and settled at old Fredericksburg, Gillespie county, Texas. Some time after the close of the Civil War they secured a large tract of land on Beaver creek, in Mason county, about twenty-five miles northeast of Fredericksburg. On this land they built their frontier home and engaged in farming on a small scale, and stock raising on a large scale. At the beginning of the Civil War, and up to 1872 the Indians made their periodical raids into the Texas frontier settlements, and adjoining counties, committing depredations as far south as Austin and nearly to Antonio, and the sod of many fine smiling valleys of these counties had been sanctified with the blood of these hardy pioneers while endeavoring to establish in the wilderness a home for their families.

The valleys of Beaver creek and tributaries offered an inviting field for the daring pioneer, and for three years the German families located near the Lehmann ranch and these, although several miles apart, formed the nucleus of a small settlement. Game in these valleys was exceedingly plentiful, the range was excellent, and there was no scarcity of water. With these natural advantages and despite the raids of the Indians, during which numbers of their horses were driven off, and their cattle maimed and slaughtered, these colonists prospered beyond precedent, and today their descendents are among the most prominent in point of intelligence and wealth of all the citizens of Mason and Gillespie counties.

In the month of May, 1869, Herman, Willie and Caroline Lehman, and a smaller sister had been sent by their mother to frighten the birds from the wheat field not far from the house. These innocent children, not suspecting danger, tarried at play in the field, until they were startled by the appearance of a large body of mounted Apaches. The father and elder brother, G. A. Lehmann, were away from home, and it seemed for a moment that the entire family were at the mercy of the savages. Two Indians dismounted and, entering the field, soon ran down and seized the children, the distracted mother and her elder daughters witnessing the proceedings from the house, but dared not go to the rescue. Herman was about eleven years old and Willie was about two years younger. When the two Indians seized these children the two boys put up a brave fight while being dragged to the field fence, near which was a growth of small bushes. These they sieged and held to with the energy of despair, and this proved a salvation of the two little girls. It seems that the Indians who remained mounted were not a little fatigued while being dragged to the fence approached by the two savages with their captives. When the Indians reached the fence, they knew that they would have to pick up a boy and throw him bodily over the obstruction. One Indian threw the girls over the fence and turned to assist his comrade with the boys. The little girls, once over the fence and on the side next to the house, urged by the screams of the boys, ran with all speed for the home shelter. The mounted Indians, watching the proceedings, gave chase and followed the fleeing children to the yard gate, discharging a flight of arrows during the brief pursuit, several of which pierced the clothing of the girls, but not the flesh.

When the Indians reached the gate, doubtless they would have entered the yard, but were met by gun in the hands of the intrepid Mrs. Lehmann, they hastily withdrew. Herman and Willie were securely tied on the horses, none too gentle, and the party started off going in the direction of House Mountain, gathering horses along the route. When within two miles east of Loyal Valley the savages changed their course and traveled in the direction of the Llano river, where they divided, six going in one direction and the other seven to Willow Creek, east of Mason, where they encamped. A calf was killed, its stomach removed and the entrails of it hastily devoured by the Indians, who seemed to regard it as a rare delicacy. The two little captives had been released from their horses and were exceedingly hungry. The entrails of the calf were offered them as food, and on refusing the nauseating diet Herman was seized by an Indian, who with a knife made an incision, thrust the boy's head into to the calf's paunch, rubbed the contents therein contained over at this entampment, and then, to show a rest, the party united and took a course bearing north of Mason and in the direction of Menardville. The captives suffered much from the effects of hunger and sunburn. They had been stripped of all their clothing and exposure to the hot sun had burned the surface of their head, shoulders, and back to a festering blister. The Indians crossed the San Saba near the old Block House, and following in a northerly direction of Kickapoo Springs, which point they reached in the night. Near these springs they crossed the road leading from Fort Concho to Fort McKavett and along which there was more or less travel every day. Here a drove of horses, they left the plain trail, which the troops at either post could have easily followed, and at the point where they crossed the road they bore in the direction of Twin Mountains, west of Fort Concho. At these mountains they halted, and while they cooked their beef, changed horses, and at dark they lighted signal fires on the summit of one of these elevations, but they did not know while the captive boy did not know at the time, but after a long residence with the Apaches he learned that it was the custom when on the return from a successful raid to build signal fires on high peaks in order to warn any of the tribe who might be going in on a like raid of their presence and success. Leaving the Twin Mountains the Indians followed a course leading to the crossing of Concho to the plains, and after eight or ten days travel they reached the village, which, according to Herman's recollection, must be in the mountains of New Mexico.

As before stated, it was in the night when they reached the Kickapoo Springs, they had been cautioned by the owner of the two boys, and the entrails of the animal is not even an Indian's endurance is not proof against the demands of hunger. Willie Lehmann, the younger of the two captives, was not bound as was his brother, but mounted behind an Indian. The child was almost exhausted from the long ride, hunger, loss of sleep and the burning fever that resulted from exposure. After leaving the springs he noticed the Indian behind whom he was mounted kept closely in the rear of the cavalcade, and that he was noddling slowly inching back on the crupper, so that no part of his body came in contact with that of the savage, he bided his time. It was not long until the Indian slowly leaned forward over the withers of his horse—asleep! Seizing the opportunity, the boy quickly slid backward into the tall grass, where he lay until all sound of the retreating enemy had died away. Although on the verge of extreme exhaustion, the child felt every reason to believe that the Indians would return and institute search, and his first impulse was to get as far away as possible from the scene of his escape and not to follow the back trail. Shaping his course as best he could by the stars and the direction he came, the weary, suffering boy traveled all night. When dawn came he found a pool of water in a small creek, and this he plunged, slaked his raging thirst and sought to cool the fever that was consuming his vitals.

convinced him that they were friends. He told them of his capture, escape and suffering. They acquiesced, but held something in hand as if he would conceal it. Upon investigation they found that it was the entrails of a bird, deftly stripped in leaves. The boy told how he had come upon a covey of partridges, had thrown a stone and luckily killed one, and had eaten it raw, and that, fearful he would find nothing else to eat soon, he had preserved the entrails to be eaten later. These the Indians men wept when they heard the child's simple story, and when they realized their little fellow's forlorn condition took him tenderly in their arms and bore him to the nearest ranch, where he received every attention. Clothing was given him, and when he was able to travel he was taken to his home on Beaver creek.

A short time after the occurrences above related, the Apaches made another raid in the Beaver creek settlement and made the Lehmann home their principal objective point. It seems that they had only a short time before erected a new house some little distance from their former place and had moved into it before the house was completed. It was a box house, with a porch in front and a shed room on the opposite side. Two large windows were in front of the main building and these windows were incomplete, they having neither blinds nor shutters. An account of this attack has been told by Mrs. Mina Keyser, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lehmann, who, then a girl, participated in the defense of her home and proved herself a heroine in the fullest sense. She says:

"In 1869, two months after Herman was stolen, father and Adolph were away on a mile-and-a-half hunting land. Willie and I drove the horses to water. On the way back we came to a high bluff and while the horses were drinking a big rock rolled down the bluff and struck near us. I told Willie that we must run home; that it might be Indians. We started to get the horses out. Not having enough water, they went reluctantly. But we hurried them to the pasture and then ran to the house. Mother had to do all the seeding for her large family by herself in those days, so she put me to stitching on the sacks straight seams. We had not been sitting there long until the dog began to bark. I looked out to see what it was barking at but could see nothing. In a few minutes he set to barking again and we thought father was coming home with the cows and calves, and as he always scolded if the gate was not opened I rushed toward the gate, and my horror, there came twelve Indian warriors in a gallop, having their shields before them, many to and fro like snakes, their long hair dangling in the air. Its hideous and frightful they look! They did not yell or make more noise than was necessary. Silence is a characteristic trait of the Apache, while the Comanche always shouted, yelled and made all the noise possible. They rode around the house, about 50 yards away, the first round, and kept circling, coming a little nearer each time. I fetched in the stock and we closed and barred the doors. The smaller children were terribly frightened and mother, somewhat nervous from they came more closely to the house mother looked out through the window and said, 'Whist, came a lance, passing close to her temple and stuck in the table nearby. After a few more rounds mother, who was very careful not to expose themselves to shotgun fire, they gave up the siege and galloped away. When father and Adolph came they were so enraged they wanted to follow them, but we persuaded them not to go. When the Indians disappeared and we opened the door, there stood our faithful old dog, Max. Several lance wounds and the torn up turf in the yard showed that the brave old dog had done his part. His honest eyes looked pleadingly into those of his mistress and then he fell over exhausted from the loss of blood. Part of the time during the fight I stood by one of the windows with a long cane knife while mother guarded the other with an axe. Some of the Indians went into the other room, took all the blankets, broke up the furniture, and open the feather beds, and wrecked things generally. The Indian that mo-of the men who had witnessed the affray, and from that moment he received best treatment. He was initiated into the tribe and became to all intents and purposes a full-blooded Apache. He was adopted into a family of one Indian name, and about the village, he had all privileges conceded to his new associates. He was encouraged to ride and practice horsemanship with the Indian lads, but was not permitted to go on these rides alone. He was taught the art of making bows and arrows and special lessons were given him in the preparation of sinew and the fashioning of that material. And thus the captive's life glided along uneventfully until the return of the raiders who had attacked his father's house. The wounded chief was in sore straits and was immediately placed in a tenee which belonged to the Big Medicine Man. For several days after his arrival he had to submit to having small shot picked out of his lazy old carcass, and every time he underwent the operation the captive boy was unmercifully beaten with switches. He begged for protection at the hands of his new foster parents, for they told him they were powerless to help him, and further assured him that if the wounded chief should die he would be put to torture and slain. The chief recovered, but the hatred he entertained towards the boy continued, and four years later resulted in his own death at the hands of the captive, whose cool nerve and splendid marksmanship finished the work his heroic mother had undertaken.

Ladies' Bazzar.

The Missionary Society of the Methodist church will conduct a bazzar in a part of Mr. Fitzgerald's store Saturday, April 21, at which sale we will present some nice bargains in fancy and practical bonnets, aprons, and other household necessities. We will also have chicken sandwiches, coffee, cocoa, cake, and ice cream. Come and get your lunch with us. We will appreciate it.—Committee. 2tc

School Entertainment.

The Sisters in charge of St. Joseph's school are arranging to give an entertainment in the auditorium of the new school building Saturday night, April 21, the proceeds of which will go toward purchasing equipment for the new building. Program for the entertainment to be given will appear in the New Era later. The general public will be invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Milam Faris and M. E. Faris were here from Medina Tuesday, and while in the city Mrs. M. E. Faris paid the New Era sanctum an appreciated visit and placed her name on our ever increasing list of subscribers.

Mrs. George Freeman.

Mrs. George Freeman died last Monday at her home on Wallace Creek, after an illness of only a few days. The immediate cause of her death was influenza. The remains were taken to Kerrville for burial. Mrs. Freeman was 60 years old. Her maiden name was Miss Sallie Rickman, and she was the wife of George Freeman, a well known stockman of the upper part of the county. Beside her husband, she is survived by four children, James Freeman of Kerrville, Lonnie Freeman of Bluff, Cliff Freeman of Medina, and Mrs. Ora Miller of Winters. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved family in the loss of the good wife and mother.

E. D. Ogle has opened a barber shop in the G. W. Banta building next door to the postoffice in Medina. He will also clean and press cloths and take orders for tailored suits. Your patronage solicited. Aprl2-4t

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Fisher, of San Antonio, spent Sunday with Mrs. Fisher's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Faris.

J. H. Saul was over from Camp Verde Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Eb Holt were over from Tarpley Thursday.

R. H. Padgett, of Tarpley, went to San Antonio to attend Federal court this week.

Mrs. W. M. Pingleton and children, of Indian Creek, were visitors in the city Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Dean and little son, James Harold Dean, of Tarpley, were in the city Saturday.

Mrs. Tex. E. Armstrong, of Dallas, arrived Saturday to be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Erwin for a few days.

H. J. Hermes and children, Oscar, Gustave, Cleophas and Viola, were here from Tarpley, Saturday and paid the New Era office an appreciated visit.

Warren Hunter entertained the Winan's Creek Community Club with a radio concert last Friday night, which was enjoyed by a large crowd.

G. Hicks came up from San Antonio Thursday where he had been attending federal court. His son, Delbert Hicks, came in from the ranch after him.

Ralph Watson, of the Lima community, was in to see us last Friday. He was on his way to San Antonio to spend Sunday with his sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanly Lewis and two children were here from Sabinal last week, guests of Mrs. Lewis' mother, Mrs. H. H. Carmichael.

The New Era sanctum was brightened last Friday by a visit from those motherly ladies, Mrs. Mattie Jones and Mrs. J. A. Head, who came to see the linotype in operation.

Miss Madge Head of Stewartsville, Mo., sends in a subscription reminder to the New Era. She says she hears radio concerts broadcasted from San Antonio, and enjoys them very much.

P. R. Caffall, accompanied by his son, Ruben, went to Cuero Friday to attend the funeral of his aged father, Tom Caffall, who died there last Thursday night. Afterward were an old settler of that region.

F. A. Kelly, of Medina, orders the New Era sent to his address for a year. Mr. Kelly has a grain binder and some steers for sale, and his ad appears in the Want Column this week.

Gus Britsch, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Irene, and niece, Miss Britsch, was in the city Saturday. Mr. Britsch lives on East Verde and says everything is looking lovely out there.

Wave Cox was perambulating around town Saturday and dropped in to see the printer. Mr. Cox has been down with influenza for several weeks, but is getting his strength back and we hope he will soon be rid of the effects of the ailment.

Veteran Amasa Clark informs us that he received a box of the oranges last week from his daughter, Mrs. Caroline Taylor, who resides at Van Nuys, California. The daughter remembers her parents each year with a box of oranges, and Veteran Clark says ahey are very delicious and of the highest grade.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hunter, Rachel Hunter and Minnie Mae Iansfield were guests of J. T. Walker and family on Chalk Bluff last Sunday. In the afternoon we attended divine worship t Wallace Creek and heard a he sermon from Brother Robert Penney. It is always a pleasure o meet with the brethren at that place.

Parties desiring to get grain orders may leave word at this office. The Kuehne Hardware Co. of Boerne will be their representative in this territory in a few days, as which time he will be glad to see them if possible. Orders taken will carry the usual guarantee against grain failure through fail.

Barn Burned.

Early last Friday morning a large barn on the premises of Louie Haegelin was destroyed by fire of unknown origin. Heroic work on the part of Mrs. Haegelin and a little son saved the home, a short distance from the barn, from destruction also. The fire occurred about four o'clock in the morning, and when discovered by Mr. Haegelin it was beyond control. The loss amounts to several thousand dollars, and falls pretty heavily on Mr. Haegelin. In the barn at the time was a Ford Car, a shearing machine, about 100 head of corn, a buggy, implements, tools, etc., all of which were consumed. No insurance was carried.

Remember the meeting at the court house next Saturday to arrange details for the next county fair. You are urged to attend the meeting. Get your "dander" up, and buckle to make the fair the best ever.

The State Legislature has been called to meet in special session next Monday to pass revenue measures that will take care of the fast increasing deficit of the state treasury.

"Lest we forget." Donate a dollar or more to the soldiers' monument fund today.

It has been demonstrated that Bandera county can display the greatest array of farm and ranch products of any county in South west Texas. Our neatly arranged and well conducted fairs of previous years have occasioned much favorable comment. Let's go to greater lengths this year. Attend the fair meeting at the court house next Saturday.

larger and more fitting garments, for it expects to continue to grow.

the shade of the trees.

Eradication of the tick has depleted Bandera county funds, but Uncle Sam says the tick must be eradicated at any cost. When we get rid of the tick, we'll be tickled to announce that funds will be available to improve our court house square.

Don't fail to read the opening installment of the story, "Nine Years with Apaches and Comanches," which appears this week. This story will run through three or four issues of the New Era, and when it is finished we have another good one to follow. The New Era is the only weekly paper in Texas featuring this kind of matter. If you do not take the New Era, don't you think you ought to?

When you have visitors don't forget to ring the New Era and tel us about them. Or better still, write their names on a slip of paper and send in to this office and in this way asist us in keeping the little old home paper up to its present standard.

A big fish fry was enjoyed near the Lee de Montel place on Medina Lake yesterday, which was participated in by the following happy crowd: Mr. and Mrs. Jim Newcomer and daughter, Miss Laura, and Mrs. L. Harwood, Pierce Harwood, Mr. and Mrs. Bush and little son, Billie, Mr. and Mrs. Lee de Montel, Adolph Schott and Eichhold. About fifty pounds of fish were caught by Pierce Harwood and Adolph Schott Tuesday night, and were prepared and fried by the ladies of the party, Jim Newcomer volunteering before hand to clean all the fish that were caught. Along about cleaning time it was discovered that Jolly Jim and all the rest of the men were conspicuous by their absence, but they reappeared when "dinner was served." Report comes that Lee Montell got a bone in his throat and had to eat a whole pan of corn bread to get it out. Every member of the party enjoyed the outing and are in readiness to go again when the next fish fry takes place.

Another Railroad

San Angelo, Texas, April 17—With two propositions offered, it begins to appear highly certain that a San Antonio railroad will be built in the near future.

For a bonus of $10,000 a mile, R. A. Love of San Antonio, proposes to construct a line from Kerrville to San Angelo, via Junction and either Eldorado or Fort McKavett. Kerr and Schleicher counties have agreed to put up this amount and the plan is now being submitted to Schleicher, Menard and Tom Green counties.

Mr. Love arrived here Saturday. He promoted and built the Miles-Paint Rock line, now a branch of the Santa Fe in Runnels and Concho counties; also the San Antonio-Fredericksburg road, a link in the present San Antonio-Arkansas Pass system. He says the San Antonio has promised him $150,000 the day he finishes a line connecting the Alamo City and San Angelo.

Mr. Love estimates that the road can be built from Kerrville to this city at a cost of $25,000 a mile. He says that his associates favor building via Fort McKavett, but that if the right sort of deal could be made with the Orient its dump to Eldorado would be preferable as a right-of-way.

A line from San Antonio and the gulf coast connecting with the Orient road, in Mr. Love's opinion, give the Orient more tonnage than is now obtained from the Southern Pacific at Alpine and would further enable the Orient to become self supporting.

Mr. Love is confident that the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission for a road such as he proposes can be secured.

Interest in railroad building here has been given much impetus following the chartering last week of the San Antonio-Medina Lake & Western Railway company, which proposes to construct a railroad from San Antonio to Sonora, connecting there the long-proposed Orient extension.

The line, Mr. Love and associates are working on, would parallel this system on the north and would open up a similar territory that raises much livestock and portions of which have mineral deposits and timber, but is now entirely without rail transportation.

Mrs. Pete Andewald enrolls as a new subscriber to the New Era this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ruge went to the fiesta at San Antonio this week.

TARPLEY TOPICS.

Friends of Miss Mamie Jay will be pleased to learn of her marriage to Mr. Ray Jackson March 21, at Shidler, Okla. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. S. L. McCracken of Tarply, was raised here, and is a most estimable young lady. The groom is a well-to-do citizen of Shidler. The bride's brother, H. D. Jay, was best man at the wedding, which occurred at the home of her grandmother there. Mrs. McCracken expects to visit the newly married pair soon.

Fine rains have fallen throughout this section and everything is beautiful now.

Mrs. Katie Baker is visiting her grandchildren. One great grandson, Mrs. Batchler, thru.

Mr. Faider and Mr. Hollingsworth, of Vanjy, who are caring for Mrs. McCracken's boys, were here last week.

Grandmother Jeffers and son, Will, spent Sunday with Mrs. Roye Dean.

H. D. Jay, formerly of Tarpley, is now engaged in business at Shidler, Oklahoma.

Mr. Jay, of Pleasanton, is the guest of Wade Hamilton.

R. N. Padgett returned Saturday from San Antonio where he attended federal court.

We wish that our school will soon be out. The children say they will miss their teacher, Miss Alden.

Mrs. McCracken is expecting her brother from Paris, Texas, in a few days.

Springtime is coming! E. L. Bennett, John Clark, and W. D. Glass went to the Medina river fishing last Friday, and came back Sunday with lots of fish.

John Clark came back with a nice bunch of sheep. We never learned where he bought them, but they are good ones.

Emsley Clark has a brand new grist mill.

School will be out this week. We will miss Professor Briggs and Miss Alden. Hope they will teach here next year.

John Cozart and W. D. Glass sent a load of fat calves to San Antonio market last week.

We all wish to thank Warren Hunter for the radio music which he gave us over the telephone, and we all want a radio in our homes.

During the District Conference of the Methodist church, which convenes here next Wednesday, arrangements are being made for a picnic dinner on the river on Friday and Sunday during the session. You are invited to bring your lunch baskets and share in the enjoyment of the occasion.

D. F. Chipman, J. A. Barnette, Mrs. Yoe, W. E. Rivens, G. O. Speckles, J. A. Fanqus, H. N. Whaley, J. M. Riney, N. G. Dedis, San Antonio; Delbert Hicks, Irma Hicks, Tarpley; R. E. Nichols, Sherman; J. B. Cole, Max Cole, Dallas; M. F. Holmes, Little Rock; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Miller, Boerne; Jim McGlry, Center Point; W. B. Hayes, Nat B. Jones, Del Rio; Love Hager, Medina; Bob Remschell, Kerrville; R. H. Bills, Sabinal.

There will be a baseball meeting at Wright's Hall tonight, April 19th of all the citizens of Bandera who are interested in the organization of a baseball team for the town during the coming season. It is hoped that not only all prospective players will be there, but also all citizens who are interested in the team, as those present will be considered as representing the team and all fans. All matters referring to baseball this season will be submitted to a vote of those present, and among other things to be discussed will be the days upon which games are to be played.

Buying Fords

The public is buying Fords. Lee Risinger, the local Ford agent, reports the following sales made the past few days:

G. W. Bush, Medina, touring car.
G. W. Reinarz, Pipe Creek, touring car.
Ernest Adams, Medina, touring car.
P. B. Barnes, Bandera, truck.
J. A. Gazaway, Utopia, touring car.
Wiley Meadows, Bandera, touring car.
J. R. Justice, Medina, truck.
Dock Evans, Lima, touring car.

Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Merritt, of Center Point, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Guy S. Rambie last Saturday.

Veteran Amasa Clark, 95 years old, says he had two sons, two grandsons, and a son-in-law in the World War. One of these noble boys gave up his life in defense of his country, and his name will be found inscribed on the monument to be erected in Bandera. How much have you donated toward the monument?

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Langford and children were here from Kenedy Monday on a visit to Mr. Langford's mother, Mrs. B. F. Langford, Sr.

Pierce Harwood, of Pipe Creek, who has been absent, in West Virginia several months, returned last week.

Arrivals at the Riverside Inn.

Another Railroad

San Angelo, Texas, April 17—With two propositions offered, it begins to appear fairly certain that a San Antonio railroad will be built in the near future.

For a bonus of $10,000 a mile, R. A. Love of San Antonio, proposes to construct a line from Kerrville to San Angelo, via Junction and either Eldorado or Fort McKavett. Kerr and Kimble counties have agreed to put up this amount and the plan is now being submitted to Schleicher, Menard and Tom Green counties.

Mr. Love arrived here Saturday. He promoted and built the Miles-Paint Rock line, now a branch of the Santa Fe in Runnels and Concho counties; also the San Antonio-Fredericksburg road, a link in the present San Antonio-Arkansas Pass system. He says San Antonio has promised him $150,000 the day he finishes a line connecting the Alamo City and San Angelo.

Mr. Love estimates that the road can be built from Kerrville to this city at a cost of $25,000 a mile. He says that his association favors building via Fort McKavett, but that if the right sort of deal could be made with the Orient its dump to Eldorado would be preferable as a right-of-way.

A line from San Antonio and the gulf coast connecting with the Orient would, in Mr. Love's opinion, give the Orient more tonnage than is now obtained from the Pacific at Alpine and would further enable the Orient to become self supporting.

Mr. Love is confident that the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission for the road such as he proposes can be secured.

Interest in railroad building here has been given much impetus following the chartering last week of the San Antonio-Medina Lake & Western Railway company, which proposes to construct a railroad from San Antonio to Bonnie connecting there the long-proposed Orient extension.

The line, Mr. Love and associates are working on, would parallel this system on the north and would open up a similar territory that raises much livestock and portions of which have mineral deposits and timber, but is now entirely without rail transportation.

Mrs. Pete Andewald enrolls as a new subscriber to the New Era this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ruge went to the fiesta at San Antonio this week.

TARPLEY TOPICS.

Friends of Miss Mamie Jay will be pleased to learn of her marriage to Mr. Jack Lackard March 21, at Shidler, Okla. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. S. L. McCracken of Tarpley, was raised here, and is a most estimable young lady. The groom is a well-to-do citizen of Shidler. The bride's brother, H. D. Jay, was best man at the wedding, which occurred at the home of her grandmother there. Mrs. McCracken expects to visit the newly married pair soon.

Food prices have fallen strangely out this section and everything is beautiful now.

Mrs. Katie Baker is visiting her children at Ozona, great grandmother, Mrs. Lobellen, this week.

Mr. Faister and Mr. Hollingsworth, of Yancy, who are caring for Mrs. McCracken's boys, were here last week.

Grandmother Jeffers and son, Will, spent Sunday with Mrs. Pope Dean.

H. D. Jay, formerly of Tarpley, is now engaged in business at Shidler, Oklahoma.

Mrs. Jesse Powell entertained as the guest of Walter Silvers this week.

R. N. Padgett returned Saturday from San Antonio where he attended the funeral of his mother.

We regret that our school will soon be out. The children say they will miss their teacher, Miss Alice Love's opinion.

Mrs. McCracken is expecting her brother from Paris, Texas, in a few days.

Spring fever is coming. R. L. Bennett, John Clark, and W. D. Glass went to the Medina river fishing last Friday, and came back Sunday with a load of fish.

John Coffey came in with a nice bunch of sheep. We never learned where he bought them, but they are a good one.

Emsley Clark has a brand new grist mill.

School will be out this week. We will miss Professor Briggs and Miss Alton. Hope they will teach here next year.

John Cozart and W. D. Glass sent a load of fat calves to San Antonio market last week.

We all wish to thank Warren Hunter for the radio music which he gave us over the telephone, and we all want a radio in our homes.

During the District Conference of the Methodist church, which convenes here next Wednesday, arrangements are being made for a picnic dinner on the river on Friday and Sunday during the session. You are invited to bring your lunch baskets and share in the enjoyment of the occasion.

And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.—Galatians 6:9.

Let it be distinctly understood. The Bandera New Era stands for the best interests of Bandera first, last and all the time. We have no axe to grind in anything we advocate for Bandera's good. We recognize in everything that will help this town and county a fan-for that will help us. And we're going to talk on for Bandera.

The county fair will be held on August 1, 2 and 3. Write and tell your friends to come.

An Old Settlers' Day will be a feature of the Bandera County Fair. Proper entertainment will be provided for our pioneer citizens, and it is expected that a great many who now live in other sections will attend and be in the big reunion.

Tomorrow night you will have the opportunity of hearing local musical talent in recital, along with expression artists under expert training at the high school auditorium, and on Saturday night at the new St. Joseph's School auditorium will be other exhibitions of local talent in an interesting play and cantata. Some pleasing surprises await you. We advance the claim that good old Bandera possesses talent of the highest order, and all that is needed to bring it to the fore is expert training, and our boys and girls are now getting it.

Tell it not in Gath, but carry the news to Mary! Bandera is going to have a bigger and better fair this year than ever. Everybody pull for it, and lend assistance in every possible way. The annual sale and show of the United Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association is to be held during the fair.

The preachers are coming. On next Wednesday the Kerrville District Conference of the Methodist church convenes in Bandera for a five days' session. What arrangements have you made to entertain these preachers while they are in our fair city? Read Hebrews 13:2.

Another railroad project is in the air. Going to build to Medina Lake now, and on to San Angelo later. Here's hoping.

How much will you donate to a monument to be erected in Bandera to the memory of those boys who went from Bandera county to the battle front and made the supreme sacrifice for their country? You may have made up your mind just how much you want to contribute toward that monument, and if so, please tell the committee about it. If you have not, then do so at once. Let's go!

Glory Hallelujah! Surveyors are in the field to make a survey of the proposed work of fixing that portion of the Bandera-San Antonio road where it crosses Medina county. The work is to be done under supervision of the State Highway Commission, and will cost $4,000 per mile. An appropriation of $12,000 is now available to be expended on the three miles.

The glorious rains of the past few days have been copious and will be of untold benefit to the range and growing crops. Looks as if old Bandera county is going to be "in the swim" this year.

Bandera's thriving suburb, San Antonio, is in the midst of a big fiesta this week, in celebration of the great victory attained by the Texan army at San Jacinto, April 21, 1836, just eighty-seven years ago. A large crowd is attending the fiesta.

Bandera is building right along. During the past few weeks two new stores and a new meat market have opened for business, and one new business house is in the course of erection. Talk on for Bandera!

It is expected that the special session of the Legislature which convened in Austin last Monday will pass the Lackey Bill, the purpose of which is to equalize state taxes. If the bill fails to pass old Bandera county is going to be heard from in a very effective manner.

The New Era is proud of its corps of county correspondents. Last week we published news letters from seven communities in our county, and we put 'em all on the front page. Wish we had more to go with 'em. We would like to have a letter from East Verde, Pleasant Branch, Lawson's Creek, Honey Creek, and other communities not now represented. These letters should reach us on Tuesday, if possible. Everybody likes to read the community news.

We are not an advocate of cheap wages, but come to think of it, we are working for you for the princely salary of a dollar and a half per annum. Can you beat it?

We know you are reading our serial story, "Nine Years With the Apaches and Comanches." Fine, isn't it? And it's a true story, written several years ago by the New Era editor's father, John Warren Hunter. As soon as this story is completed we have another thriller for our readers.

The little old home paper overflowed with news this week, and we had to issue six pages instead of the usual four. As soon as we get certain work we now have in hand out of the way the New Era will be enlarged to take care of all the local happenings. And all for a dollar and a half a year.

There's going to be a melody at Medina on the fifth Sunday in this month, April 29th to be exact. All day singing at the Church of Christ building in that town, and dinner under the spreading trees. Singers from Lima, Rocky Creek, West Prong, Wallace Creek, and other neighborhoods will be there, and they are going to have a great time. Fill up your lunch basket and go. You'll be welcome and will enjoy it.

Old Dame Nature, as old as she is, has come out once more in her garb of green, and is really beautiful. We love that old girl.

Combined Class Recital.

Mrs. G. S. Rambie's expression class, Mrs. Claud Stephens' piano class and Austin Carlton's violin class will be presented in combined recital Friday evening, April 20, at 8 o'clock, at the High School auditorium. No admission charge will be made, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

School Entertainment.

The Sisters in charge of St. Joseph's school are arranging, to give an entertainment in the auditorium of the new school building Saturday night, April 21, the proceeds of which will go toward purchasing equipment for the new building.

For The Heroes' Monument.

Next week we will begin the publication of the list of donations to the monument to be erected to the memory of the Bandera county boys who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War. If you have not already contributed please send your contribution to this office or to Miss Margaret Montague, the treasurer of the monument committee. Let's raise the thousand dollars needed in quick time.

Notice to Subscribers.

Mrs. C. W. Harris is the New Era's agent at Medina and is authorized to collect and receipt for subscriptions to this paper. Subscribers are urged to give her their renewal and same will have attention as if sent direct to this office.

Ladies' Bazar.

The Missionary Society of the Methodist church will conduct a bazar in a part of Mr. Fitzgerald's store Saturday, April 21, at which sale we will present some nice bargains in fancy and practical bonnets, aprons, and other household necessities. We will also have chicken sandwiches, coffee, cocoa, cake, and ice cream. Come and get your lunch with us. We will appreciate it.—Committee. 20c

THE NEWS

"The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein. For he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods. Who shall ascend in to the hills of Jehovah? and who shall stand in His holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto falsehood, and hath not sworn deceitfully. He shall receive a blessing from Jehovah, and righteousness from the God of his salvation. This is the generation of them that seek after him, that seek thy face, even Jacob."—Ps. 24:1-6.

A HAPPY FAMILY REUNION.

Mrs. Eliza Reitzer and her children, Mrs. Annie Reitzer, Mrs. Lydia Dreves, William Reitzer, Mrs. Regina Zumberg, Lee Reitzer, Mrs. Lizzie Schoenert, August Reitzer, and Henry Stuetz.

A happy reunion took place in Bandera on Sunday, April 8, 1923, when Mrs. Eliza Reitzer, one of our pioneer mothers, who lives on East Verde, met all of her children in Bandera for a family reunion, picnic and farewell party combined. Bandera was selected as the meeting place because of it being the most convenient point for all to gather here and was on the route of Mrs. Reitzer's daughter, Mrs. Dreves, and family of Austin, who were on their way to Portland, Oregon, where they intend to make their home in the future. They were traveling the long distance, 3,300 miles, in two automobiles, and expect to be on the road several weeks. The Dreves family made an overland trip to Portland about two years ago and were so well pleased with that country they decided to go there to live, and will engage in the dairy and poultry business.

The sumptuous spread was under a large oak tree on the bank of the beautiful Medina river, and a jolly good time there was for all. After dinner, kodaks were kept busy taking pictures of the crowd. One picture taken shows four generations. All of Mrs. Reitzer's children are living. She will be seventy years old May 9, and is in the best of health. She has nine children, twenty-four grandchildren and two great child present at the reunion is a daughter of Mrs. Alma Brassweel, born in Portland, Oregon, three years ago. Her mother being well known in Bandera county as Alma Dreeves before marriage.

The festivities came to a close at four o'clock p. m., when the seven automobiles began to purr and everyone was ready to start on their respective destinations, saying goodbye to mother, brothers and sisters. Eyes were moist with tears, as all were sad to part. All wished the Dreves good luck and prosperity in the Far West, and some present expressed their intention of making the trip to Portland in 1925 to the big exposition there.

Mrs. Reitzer's children present at the reunion, were Miss Annie Reitzer, Mrs. Lydia Dreves, William Reitzer, Mrs. Regina Zumberg, Lee Reitzer, Mrs. Lizzie Scoenert, August Reitzer and Henry Stentz. One son, John Reitzer, was unable to be present.

Kerrville District Conference.

The Kerrville District Conference of the Methodist church meets in Bandera next Wednesday, April 25th at 8 p. m., and will hold over the following Sunday.

In addition to the usual conference business there will be preaching twice a day. The following special features have been planned:

Thursday afternoon, Rev. J. F. Simpson, presiding elder of the Cuero district, will conduct an institute in the interest of the rural work—how to hold and build up country and village churches.

Friday, H. M. Ratliff, Conference Sunday School superintendent, will conduct a Sunday School institute.

Saturday at 2 p. m., there will be a special Epworth League program, led by District League Secretary, Miss Mary Holdsworth, of Kerrville. Mrs. W. S. Scott, of San Antonio, president of the West Texas Conference Woman's Missionary Society, will have charge of a two hours program, beginning at 3 p. m. Saturday. She will be assisted by Mrs. C. J. Rees, of Center Point, District Secretary, and by visiting Woman's Missionary specialists.

Sunday will be devoted especially to the interest of the laity. Dr. Horn, president of Southwestern University, will deliver an address at 11 a. m. In the afternoon, Judge H. C. Geddie, of Kerrville, District Lay Leader, will preside. Judge M. A. Childress, of San Antonio, Lay Leader, of the West Texas conference, will be present, rendering expert assistance. Mr. Barnett, manager of the Methodist Orphan Home, will be here Thursday and Friday with the famous Orphanage Band, mixing fine music with the program. Other musical features will be a double quartette, composed of pastors of the district, while one or more male quartettes of the laymen are expected.

Card of Thanks.

Railroad Project

A railroad line has been chartered to run from San Antonio to San Angelo, via Medina Lake, a distance of approximately 225 miles.

The incorporators of the company are Paul Hansen, P. J. Lucas, W. L. Williams and a number of others. Henry King, attorney of Kerr, Edwards, and Sutton counties. Mr. Williams has just returned from New York and said that he had the assurance of financial backing in building the line. The company is capitalized at $100,000. Contractors estimate that it will require approximately $7,000,000 to build the line to San Angelo; but the promoters believe that part of the line, especially that proposed between San Antonio and Medina Lake, can be made to pay well as soon as constructed.

It was stated that the plans of the company would include the development of a resort at Medina Lake, with the operation of interurban cars over the line from San Antonio. Options, it is said have been obtained on several acres of land near Medina Lake dam. Plans call for the construction of a large resort hotel on the site.

Game Laws Recommended.

The following new tax laws for Texas were recommended by the governor in his message to the legislature Monday:

A law by which, in keeping with their value, producers of oil, refineries and pipeline lines shall pay to the state in accordance with their severance producing profits derived from the state's economic wealth.

A law by which corporate franchise privileges be taxed upon basis of the value of such privileges received fro mthe State.

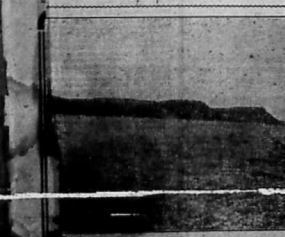
A law by amending the present system of assessing property for taxation so as to conform with present earnings.

A law providing for a more progressive system of taxing property with liberal exemption in favor of the wife, and limited issue.

A law by which property of a character now subject to uniform tax, yet escaping same be introduced to the tax rolls and be made paid its share.

A law by which delinquent taxes may be impartially collected and the proceeds paid into the funds that will equalize, for the use of the State tax, levy. Valuations.

Income Tax Law: Such a law, and should be, designed only to reach a considerable number of persons, who have left no physical property to tax, yet in their particular occupation or far beyond the ordinary wage-earning basis are using public expense. They enjoy the protection of the law; and bear their rightful share of the expenses of Government.



Medina Lake

Road to Be Fixed.

A surveying crew was at work this week on the portion of the Bandera-San Antonio road that crosses the corner of Medina county, which indicates that bids will soon be advertised for the construction of approximately three miles of first class highway, the work to be under supervision of the State Highway Commission. The sum of $12,000 has been appropriated for this work, Medina county contributing $3,000 and the Highway Commission $9,000. This is known as State Highway No. 27, and under the new law the upkeep will be borne by the Highway Commission.

If now looks as if our fondest dreams are to be realized, after many months of weary waiting and much speculation as to whether or not we were ever going to get that awful piece of road fixed. Through the efforts of Mr. D. E. Colp, of the Old Spanish Trail organization, the appropriation was made possible and we will all rejoice and be glad when it is finished and Bandera has a real good road all the way to San Antonio.

Ganderbone's Predictions.

Ganderbone, the local prophet, calls attention to his forecasts that have been fulfilled almost to a letter during the past two months. He says: "Some more rain this month, and also rain in May, with thunder storms and hail. Some damage expected to fruit and corn crops; small grain will yield well. Expect severe storms about May 10th, with high water in the river and creeks; will do considerable damage in parts of Texas. Weather will be spoil about May 15th. Toward the end of May heavy local rains and much thunder and lightning—a danger period. Keep these dates in mind and see how far I miss my guess. Insects will be numerous this year and damage to growing crops. Snakes will be more numerous than usual, and several people will be bitten. Summer will be cool and delightful. A number of weddings will take place in June, and among these will be the one I have been predicting for some time."

School Closes May 18.

Bandera High School will close on Friday, May 18, with appropriate commencement exercises. The graduating class is composed of fourteen boys and girls, as follows: Howard Eckhart, Ellis Krause, Claude Krause, Warren Hunter, Rosese Hayes, Misses Edna Stevens, Lora Thallman, Myra Jennette Hunter, Agatha Pyka, Maizie Jurecezki, Jo Noonan, Pauline Ethridge, Mabel Thallmann, Annie Habenicht.

Buys Another Radio Set.

Austin Carlton, one of the local radio phans, has purchased another radio receiving set, larger than the one he has been using, and equipped with loud speaker. He will install it in his home in this city, and will dispose of the smaller set.

If you want to sell your real estate list it with the Ethridge Real Estate Co. This firm has a number of inquiries for ranch and farm tracts in this county. Who wants to swap a small ranch tract for business property in the Lower Rio Grande Valley? See Ethridge.

All matter intended for publication should be sent in not later than Wednesday noon. Items coming in later than that hour may be crowded out.

The story, "Heel Fly Time in Texas," is the title of a new 32-page pamphlet' form within a short time. It will contain nearly 100 pages and will be sold for fifty cents per copy. Place your order now if you want a copy.

The County Fair

Considerable interest was manifested in the meeting at the court house last Saturday, called for the purpose of arranging details and plans for the next county fair. It was decided that the fair would be a free fair again this year, and the same officers hold over. The date for the next fair was fixed for August 1st, 2nd and 3rd, and the committees are now being selected and arranged for, and will get busy to make it the best fair Bandera county has ever held. In due time these committees will be announced, and it is hoped that each one who is placed on a committee will serve. The annual show and auction of the United Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association will be here during the fair.

The following ladies have been placed on the available list by committee work in the fair, and at a meeting to be held later will be assigned places on the various committees:

Other names will be added to the above list. These ladies are requested to meet in their respective communities and arrange for effective co-operation in committee work under direction of the central committee, a chairman of which is to be selected.

The following men have been selected for committee work, and will be assigned to special duties within a short time: Ed Mansfield, J. W. Short, Henry Adamietz, C. C. Burris, Matt Adamietz, Julius Dugos, Booker Davenport, F. M. Montague, Charles Eckhart, E. Hicks, H. Harper, Henry Kalka.

Mass Meeting

The mass meeting at the court house last Saturday night drew a large crowd. The purpose was the purpose of taking some steps to in some manner get the Legislature to pass a law that would equalize taxes now in force. Judge J. A. Hudson presided at the meeting. Hon. Joe O. Montague introduced John B. Carrington of San Antonio, who in a short address explained how the tax division was being used for the benefit of about 99 East Texas counties, and showing where Bandera county is paying from two to four times more taxes to the state, relatively, than those counties are paying. At this juncture Frank M. Montague arose and made a motion that our county commissioners be petitioned to assess each man's property at $1.00, and this motion brought forth the query as to how the county could run on that amount, pay the county officers salaries and take care of current expenses. Mr. Montague promptly replied that the ranchmen of the county had been able to conduct their business without money, and the county ought to be able to do the same. General discussion followed, and the proposition was seriously considered, and at present finally being reached that no action would be taken if the present special session of the Legislature would act favorably upon the following petition:

"We, citizens and taxpayers of Bandera county, in mass meeting, held this the 14th day of April, 1923, herewith call attention to the following facts:

"Bandera county has for the past ten years assessed its property for state taxes at 55 per cent to 75 per cent of actual value. By contrasting these assessments the county has been penalized by the census of 1920 with the assessment values of non-paying counties, thereby not only robbing from three to four times more taxes to Texas, relatively, than they pay.

"Bandera Bandera is relatively a poor county of small taxable values, [illegible] on [illegible] taxes to get money to run the county, and because county assessments are also above assessments, we are compelled to pay [illegible] greater state taxes than many richer counties.

"Therefore, we petition the legislature to pass the bill to permit the county of Bandera Carl C. Lackey, providing a system of equal and uniform assessments in the aggregate as between counties in such that all citizens of Texas, may pay their state taxes on a uniform assessment, and so applying equal and uniform taxes."

The above petitions are in real earnest in regard to a just equalization of taxes in Texas. The scales are unevenly balanced and this county is not getting the returns that rightfully belong to us. The movement that has been started will continue to grow and if relief is not soon forthcoming old Bandera is going to start something that will echo around the world.

District Conference to Meet Here.

The meeting of the Kerrville District Conference of the home office district church is to be held in Bandera April 25 to 29, inclusive. NINE YEARS WITH THE APACHES AND COMANCHES

The Story of Herman Lehmann, Who Was Captured by Indians in Mason County, and Who Became to All Intents and Purposes an Indian

In the course of two years Herman had developed into a full-blown Indian. He had learned their language and in point of horsemanship, endurance and skill with the lasso, the lance, the bow and arrow, he was the peer of any of their young braves. The fascination of the free and untrammeled life of the roving Indian had obliterated all affection for those at home and hushed all desire to return to his father's house. It has often been said by old frontiersmen that the worst of all Indians is the white captive taken in early childhood and raised up among the Indians. He seems to inherit the bravery and shrewdness of the white man, to which is added the cunning craftiness and something more than the blood thirstiness after a four years sojourn with the Apaches. His first raid with his new associates was in the early region of Fort McKavett, where they stole a span of large sorrel mules out of the post corral, almost under the eyes of the soldiers. Ilhey stole, also, a number of horses, and on their return they came out by way of the Lipan Flat, near Fort Lonely. During the night Herman and an Indian came on near the post, but while prowling around, the two became separated, the Indian by chance having left their horses in care of their comrades, who were concealed on the South Concho, about a mile away. Herman, however, saw a fine horse in a lot close to a house that was just outside the soldier's quarters, and while trying to lead the horse out of the lot he was fired upon by someone, presumable the owner. Herman had left his bow with his comrades, but he had a six-shooter which he drew and opened fire on his assailant, who dodged around the corner of the house and returned the fire, the shot striking the side of Herman's pistol and knocking it from his hand. In the meantime the horse had jerked loose and the alarm had been given. Herman was disarmed and his only alternative was precipitate flight. He made for the nearest point of the river, south of the post and escaped. He gives many graphic accounts of raids into Texas, and New Mexico; he knew Victoria, the noted Apache chief, personally, met Geronimo, as that chief confined most of his operations to Arizona. He joined in raids in West Texas, even going so far as House Moutain and Loyal Valley, where they stole horses belonging to his former neighbors and friends. On one occasion after his people and before he had acquired a good vocabulary of his mother tongue, he asked his mother if she remembered seeing watch fires on House Mountain one cold night.

"Yes," said the mother, "I remember the time; there was snow on the ground, and the Indians made a raid and got off with a large number of horses." "Me got them!" said Herman, exultingly. "Me got them!" and stooping down, he traced in the loose sand with his finger, different brands belonging to men who lived in the village and vicinity and all these had lost horses on that particular occasion.

Herman's closest call this boy captive ever experienced was that when the rangers under Captain Roberts overtook and captured a band of marauding Indians on the plains above San Angelo. Of this action, I will give first Herman's version and next, I will give the account as related by Mr. Tom Gillespie, who was a ranger in Robert's Company, and participated in the battle. I have heard the narration of Herman by Captain Roberts, Captain Lamb Sieker and the late Ed Sieker all of whom took part in the fight and their accounts coincided with that given by Captain Gillespie.

HERMAN'S NARRATIVE

"We had been down in the settlement on a raid and secured a large bunch of horses. We were out by way of Kickapoo Springs and it was not far from that point that our scouts brought us word that the rangers were on our trail after us. We dreaded the rangers, because they were well armed and always shot to hit. So we headed for the plains, and rode day and night. We knew how these rangers could ride without sleep or food and our only hope was to outride them. When one of our horses showed signs that he was fagged out; we would rope a fresh horse from the herd and continue the race. At one time we halted long enough to kill a burro that some Mexican had left on the range. We roasted the meat of the animal and ate it. We were very hungry and we relished it. The day following, we killed and brought along by the Comanches, and although the races were kept up during the days, and many horses changed hands, the three boys were not permitted to be together long at a time. Korn and Fischer were afterwards restored to their people, but the latter had become so thoroughly Indianized that he could not adopt himself to the ways of his people, and finall returned to the Comanches. Adolph Korn remained with his people and became a leading man. He died at Mason, Texas, only a few years ago.

KILLS THE HATED CHIEF

One day it fell to Herman's lot to go on duty as herder on a large caballada of horses. By some means during the day some of the stock became scattered, among those which had strayed were a number belonging to the hated chief. When Herman found he could not round up the herd and recover the horses, he sent an Indian boy, who had assisted him during the day, to the village, about a mile away, for help. On the way into the village the boy met the chief and told him of the horses having strayed off. The chief hastened to the herd in a great rage. When Herman saw him coming he knew there was going to be trouble, and the first thing he was to escape the infuriated Indian by flight. Within a half a mile, and in the direction of the village, was a high, rocky hill, too steep for a horse to climb, and to this hill the boy directed his horse at full speed, the Indian in close pursuit, and yelling as if to aid to the boy's flight. When Herman reached the hill, or that part of declivity where the horse could go no further, he abandoned his horse and ran up the hill and was soon out of sight among the boulders. When he left his horse he was careful to hold on to his bow and shield, and when he found that he could go no further to cover, he began to breathe easy and for the moment felt quite safe. But the Indian was not to be baffled by his fated paleface. Doubtless he recalled the many long days of suffering he had passed in pain and agony, caused by that boy's mother—and an Indian never forgets. He also dismounted, and silently, stealthily, wended his way up among those rocks, crags and boulders, until at last he came up face to face with his intended victim and the struggle began. Herman told the writer that he met that Indian with as much coolness and self-possession as he ever felt while shooting a buffalo or lancing a snake. He rather felt elated over the opportunity of forever settling the matter as to which of the two should survive. The chief was armed with his bow and lance. His shield he had left when he dismounted. When he came up with Herman he had just turned the corner of a large boulder and his first pass was to hurl his lance. This was turned aside by Herman's shield. The Indian then threw himself in position and as he drew his right hand to his quiver to [illegible] forth an arrow, Herman drove a feathered shaft through his body. The Indian reeled and turned half around, only to receive another arrow in the region of the heart, and, with a yell, fell forward—dead.

Wesley Caffal made a trip to San Antonio yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Moore and sons were over from Hunt to spend Sunday. We are pleased to learn that they will soon return to their ranch on West Verde.

Dave Cox orders the New Era sent to L. B. Montz, at Morgan Springs, Alabama, for one year.

Miss Grace Duke, who taught a successful term of school near Hunt, in Kerr county, returned home last week. Her school closed Friday with a well-arranged entertainment presented by the scholars.

Remember the program at the Bandera Theater next Monday night, instead of Saturday night. The picture to be shown is "Society For Sale." Don't miss it.

Messrs. Bud Keese, J. Y. Miller and Tom McBryde were down from the Medina region last Saturday.

The New Era sanctum was favored with a visit from Mrs. J. R. Johnson and children and Mrs. E. H. Sewall of Medina, who were in the city yesterday. They came down with Mrs. Sewall's sister, Mrs. Dolby, who was returning to her home at San Antonio after a delightful visit at the Sewall ranch.

H. L. Atkins, Jr., who is now in Porto Rico in the employ of a large sugar company, was recently given a raise of 25 per cent in salary, for efficient service. Bandera is proud of this young man, who, among several others in various parts of the country, is making good. Days may be greatly enjoyed by a New Era's weekly visits.

Last Friday Percy Pue, Sid Stevens and Milam Faris caught and killed a big wolf, in the Thalmann pasture. Mr. Pue first shot the wolf, merely creasing it with a bullet, and when it revived the animal was turned loose and the dogs put after it. A lively chase ensued, resulting in the capture and annihilation.

Raymond L. Parker, of Miranda City, was here Tuesday on a visit to his sister, Mrs. R. E. Blunt. He called and ordered the New Era sent to his address before returning to Miranda.

We have discovered that there is one man in this vicinity who does not read the New Era. A couple of weeks ago we advertised that a package of soap had been found and that the owner could get the same by calling at this office. Thus far we have sold the soap, as there has been no call for it. There are a few people in this vicinity who do not take the New Era, but we know they read their neighbor's copy, which is all right. We are curious to know the man who does not read his home paper, and if he will call at this office we'll cheerfully give him his soap.

BILLINGS & SON

Captured a Still.

A few days ago Sheriff Henry Stevens received a tip that a whiskey still had been brought into the Pipe Creek community and was to be set up and operated there. He accordingly got busy, and last Sunday in company with Deputy Sheriff Herman Harper, Joe G. Montagu, Dan Reagan and Elmer Brown, he went to the Emil Heisler ranch, three miles north of Pipe Creek and located the object of his search in a small canyon not far from the Heisler ranch house. The posse came upon the moonshiners before they realized anyone was near and arrested four men at work with the still, which was in a tent near a spring. The men arrested gave their names as W. B. Crane, C. M. Weaver, Charles H. McGill and Vernon Crane. They surrendered without any resistance, and were brought to town and placed in jail, one of them being beastly intoxicated. Sunday night Will Edwards brought in the still.

The still is a most complete and elaborate affair, of 30-gallon double run, capacity, and one of the men, who claims to be a boiler maker by trade, says he made it himself at a cost of less than $100. The still was in full operation when Sheriff Stevens and his posse appeared on the scene, and was making it's first run. Eleven gallons of whiskey had been run out. This was also confiscated by the sheriff, along with twelve barrels of mash, ten sacks of sugar, a quantity of glycerin, some coloring matter, and all of the equipment there.

W. B. Crane, one of the men arrested, in a statement to the New Era reporter at the jail Sunday night, said he regretted very much that the officers swooped down on them so soon, as it was the still's first run and he wanted his friends to get some of the best whiskey that had been made in this state by one of the best known stills. He seemed rather talkative and inclined to boast of his ability to make good whiskey. When asked why he came to Bandera county as a field in which to operate his still he stated that he leased the Heisler place about two months ago, and thought it was an ideal region in which to escape detection, saying further that the equipment, which was made in San Antonio, was brought out on Sunday, April 15, and put up during the following week, and two of his friends came out Saturday night to see it start off last Sunday. Crane claims to have been in the ranger service under Captain Saunders at Harlinger, and along the border.

All of the men captured are stout, husky fellows, and all are married, except Vernon Crane, who is a boy about seventeen years old. All claim to be from San Antonio.

W. B. Crane was admitted bail in the sum of $300 by Judge Cordy Monday afternoon and went to San Antonio to arrange to secure bail in the sum of $500 each for the other three men.

Baseball Club Organized.

A rousing meeting of baseball fans and players was held at the Wright Hall last Thursday night, when a club was organized to furnish good games for Bandera this season. The following boys were enrolled as players; Felix Knibbe, John Langford, Nace Langford, Frank Billings, Earl Mansfield, Will Hayes, James Cox, Bernard Anderwald, Clinton Risinger, John Gilliff, Elmer Schmidtke, Joe Flynn, Walter Britsch, Leonard Hamilton, Chuck Blakeney, Dan Rugh, Tom Adamietz, and Ignatius Kuntz.

Frank Billings, I. E. Adamietz, and Lee Risinger were selected as the executive board. Frank Billings was elected manager and I. E. Adamietz is the secretary-treasurer. It was then decided to play games on Wednesday and the games are to be called at 2 p. m. sharp. Three games are to be played during each month if possible.

Rev. E. A. Potts made a good talk at the meeting and encouraged the boys in their efforts by saying that he would help in every way he could, and would get his church members to do likewise. It was decided to finance the club this season in the same manner as was done last year, by subscriptions and through the

And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.—Galatians 6:9.

Greet the visitors with a smile and tell them they are welcome in old Bandera.

The preachers are with us. This week Bandera is keeping open house to the Kerrville District Conference of the Methodist church; and the town is full of preachers and delegates, and the preachers and delegates are full of glory and chicken.

Within a short time a tag sale will be put on for the benefit of the county fair. Remember it is to be a free fair and the only means of raising money necessary to bear the expenses of the fair is by tag sale, sale of concessions, and by donations. Help the county fair and you help yourself.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the movement to erect a monument in Bandera to the memory of our soldier dead. Several have come in during the past week and subscribed to the fund for that purpose. Every man and woman in the county would contribute only one dollar to this fund the necessary funds would soon be raised and the monument put in place. "Lest we forget," let's do it now. Send or bring your donation.

The uncovering of a whiskey still and the apprehension of the operators within six hours after the apparatus was first put in operation in this county was a nice piece of work on the part of Sheriff Stevens and his deputies, and he is to be complimented on his quick action. If people who claim to know of violations of the prohibition laws would co-operate with our officers, and report such things, as was done in this instance, law enforcement would be made a whole lot easier and the moonshiner and bootlegger would soon be put out of business.

We told you so. The entertainments given in this town last Friday and Saturday nights displayed some excellent local talent, convincing us that with the proper training our boys and girls can do things. Latent talent benefits nobody. Bring it to the fore. Let's show the world that we have the best in line. Not only will such entertainments help develop the ambitious boys and girls, but recitals, concerts, entertainments and the like bring our people together in a community meeting, and encourage neighborliness, friendliness and good fellowship. When these things are neglected a selfish aloofness creeps into the community life and poisons the fountain head of the community welfare, with the result that petty jealousies, factional strife and civic indifference gets a foothold, and nothing can be accomplished. Bandera has too much at stake to allow these conditions to exist.

The finishing touches were given St. Joseph's new school building this week. M. F. Johnston, who had charge of the construction of this handsome edifice, is due praise and credit for the excellent work that has been done in the construction. It is a neat and imposing structure, substantial throughout, and arranged in a most convenient manner. We understand the cost of the building amounts to about $10,000. Most of the labor was furnished free by members of the Catholic church, the stone and woodwork being done by local citizens, I. E. Adamietz as chairman of the building committee looking after all details in this line. It's a building any community may well be proud of and is a monument to the determination and progressiveness of its builders.

Combined Recital.

The recital given at the High School Auditorium, last Friday night by the expression class of Mrs. Dow Sansbury, the music class of Mrs. Claude Stevens and the violin class of A. P. Carlton was one of the most enjoyable fairy given here in some time. The pupils all showed expert training rendering their parts of the program in a most pleasing manner and showed expert training on the part of their teachers. From the smallest tot to the largest, all contributed to making the program highly interesting from start to finish. The young folks participating were, in the violin class, Pauline and Ethridge Jones, Jenette Hunter, Eunice Price, Roy Mansfield, Marvin Hunter, Jr., Joe, Frank Gollibart, Emily Ruth Rambie, .

In the expression class Elizabeth McIlroy, Coy Herman Mansfield, Selma Grace Mansfield, Raymond Hollingsworth, Edward Chism, Mildred Rambie, Walton Hicks, Frank Hodges, Shirley B. Potts, Bennie Adamietz, Mazie Jureczki, Aileen Cash. In the piano class, Merle Beck, Evelyn Mansfield, Glayda Holloway, Irma Hicks, Isabell Cox, Emily Ruth Rambie, Edna Stevens, Amanda Lane, Lora Langford. Each member was so good that it was impossible to say just which was the best. "Enoch Arden," recited by Miss Maizie Jureczki, brought greatest applause, as did the recitation, "Calls" by Hunter Hornsby Chisum, "The Broken Doll" by Mildred Rambie, and the "Minuet" by Elizabeth McIlroy.

Miss Mazie Jureczki was packed to its full capacity, many of the audience having to stand up because of lack of seats. It is hoped that this kind of a program will be repeated before a great while, for such talent is appreciated and the public is becoming interested in entertainments of this character.

St. Joseph's School Concert

The entertainment at the new St. Joseph's school last Saturday night was a great affair. The spacious and well arranged auditorium of the new school building was filled to overflowing with people eager to witness the program, which consisted of musical numbers, comedy songs, recitations and dances, the Gypsy song and dance by Misses Agatha Pyka, Maizie Jureczki, Agatha Isabel and Agnes Adamietz being particularly pleasing. Among other features of the program that were enjoyed by the crowd were "The Old Kentucky," by a group of boys; "Up Cæsar's Creek," a play by eleven boys; piano selections by Hedwig Adamietz, Isabel Adamietz, Margaret Anderwald, Elsie Adamietz, Agatha Mazurek, and Adela Jenschke. "Queen Calendar at Home," a cantata was greatly enjoyed, and was rendered by twenty-five pretty little girls dressed in pleasing costumes, with Miss Maizie Jureczki as Queen Calendar. Participating in this were Rosalie Flynn, Margaret Anderwald, Martha Adamietz, Ethel Turner, Iris Pyka, Frances Kalka, Mary Pyka, Alice Jureczki, Elsie Adamietz, Isabel Anderwald, Frances Pyka, Rita Flynn, Isabel Mazurek, Hedwig Adamietz, Adela Jenschke, Catherine Mazurek, Mary Turner, Lillian Saunders, Josephine Adamietz, Henrietta Kalka, Mary Pyka and Mary Jureczki.

The proceeds derived from this entertainment netted $120.00 and will go toward equipping the new school building.

Miss Emma Eames, who has been teaching in Kerr county, has closed her school and returned home last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Evans, who now live near Hondo, were visiting friends here last week.

Percy A. Pue was down from Medina and placed an ad in the New Era. He is an expert sign painter, and will do sign work, auto painting, house painting or anything in his line. See his ad in another column.

George R. Tait is now stationed at Fredericksburg, where he is commercial manager of the Southwestern Telephone Co., having charge of a vast territory. He was formerly located at Brownwille.

Capt. Charles de Montel was here from Camp Verde Friday to consult Dr. Morgan, the dentist, and while here was the guest of his daughter, Mrs. A. W. Pue. He called in and spent awhile with the New Era editor, and told us he had been "under the weather" the past two months but is getting all right again.

NINE YEARS WITH THE APACHES AND COMANCHES

The Story of Herman Lehmann, Who Was Captured by Indians in Mason County, and Who Became to All Intents and Purposes an Indian

In the meantime the boy sent by Herman had procured help and had returned to the herd. From his high perch of concealment, Herman could overlook the plain and see what was going on. He saw the Indians round up the stock and saw them when they found the horses ridden by himself and the chief. He could see by their actions that they were excited and he knew that the vengeance of nearly all the tribe would be wreaked upon him if found. Just that moment he had not realized the awful predicament in which he was placed. The hill, or rather range of hills, that afforded his concealment swept around each of the village, forming a half circle. The scene of the killing was nearly due west of the village. Knowing that searching parties would soon be scouring the plain here away and follow the ridge to a point north of the village where he lay in close concealment until after dark, had the most implicit faith in the faithfulness of his foster-parents, but he knew their utter inability to protect him. His only hope lay in flight. The Comanches and the Apaches are not on good terms at this time; he did not know a word of the Comanche dialect, and should he fly to them, the nearest tribe, his condition might not be improved. But fly he must, but before leaving he must secure a mount and provisions, and in order to do this he must see his foster-father. To warn him of the utmost caution he approached his father's tepee and quietly made known his presence. The Indian directed him to go immediately and conceal himself at a certain place outside the village and wait; that others at that moment were on the lookout for him.

When the herd had been driven in the late evening, Herman's horse and that ridden by the chief had been brought in with the others, and Herman's foster-father had taken charge of the boy's horse, removed the saddle and turned the horse back into the herd. As directed, Herman went to the place designated and after waiting half an hour, the old squaw came to him, bringing with her a small supply of dried buffalo meat, a number of arrows and a canteen which had been taken from a soldier killed by some of the Apaches during a raid the summer before. The old squaw wept bitterly when she told him goodby, and said she could never see him alive again. She had not been gone long on her return to the tepee before the foster-father came, bringing the boy's saddle, bridle, blanket and lasso. He told Herman to go to the herd and take a certain horse, which, for endurance and fleetness, he found by experience to be the best of any owned by the tribe. He heeded the fact that he could not shield or protect his foster-son. He urged him to go as far away as possible before dawn, and to continue with all speed during the next day and night, as by that time he would be missed, and would advise him as to what direction to pursue or where to go. He only said "go," and when the two parted the last time for all time, he realize that of all mortals on the earth, he was the loneliest.

In trying to secure the horse he had spent a sleepless and excitement risk, and it was past the hour of midnight when he finally succeeded in getting the animal away from the herd. It required but a few moments to saddle and bridle, and he was off. He shaped his course eastward, and after many miles away when the morning sun came up. He found himself in a vast plain with a few range of hills far away to the south. This plain was wholly without vegetation except cactus and in places a growth of sage brush. The soil was loose and a fine abundance of grass should attract the attention of the enemy and he should be discovered and slain.

And thus the days and weeks and months glided by until one bright night he was startled from his sleep by the chief shaking him and telling him he would not tell, but it seemed to have been that of a human voice. He went inside his cave and listened, and in a few moments he heard a loud laugh! The moon was at its full and the canyon was lit up almost as bright as day. Going around a projecting rock near his cave and looking down the canyon he saw a large camp fire not three hundred yards away, and he could hear human forms passing to and fro near this fire, and could hear their voices.

Talking advantage of the growth of willows that fringed the bank of the little stream he crept sufficiently near their camp to hear their conversation and to his utter dismay he found they were Apaches, evidently returning from a raid down in Texas, as they had a large drove of horses, which were being herded below their camp in the canyon. Returning to his cave and gathering up his supply of provisions, he mounted his horse and going up the canyon some distance to a gap that served as an outlet to the level plain above, he struck out towards the east, not knowing where he was going anymore than on a previous occasion when he had fled for his life from the same enemy. He crossed several streams during his travels; one of which he believed to be the Rio Grande, after which he changed his course to the southeast. On several occasions he saw men whom he took to be white men or Mexicans, but these he avoided, knowing that they would take him for an Apache, the common enemy to all men. But at length he found himself in a region entirely destitute of grass, game, timber and water. His horse was almost famished and could scarcely walk. It had turned extremely cold and as nightfall drew near, death from cold and hunger seemed imminent. Just ahead Herman says he saw a hill, or stony, bleak ridge, and just before it became dark, he ascended this hill to get a good view of the country ahead, hoping against hope that perhaps he might see a fire or a smoke in the distance of perchance there might be a band of roaming Indians in this region. When he came to the foot of the ridge, he left his horse and ascended on foot and when he had reached the summit, what was his amazement to see a band of Indians less than a mile away coming directly toward the ridge on which he was standing. The night of these days he no alarm. Cold, hungry and exhausted, his horse unable to go further, he became indifferent to his fate. From his position he watched the strangers, saw them go into camp, erect their tents, hobble and their horses and all was darkness save over the cold earth like a mantel, he saw the gleam of their little campfire. He had no idea as to who they could be. He knew they were Indians, but whether they were Apaches, Kiowas or Comanches, he could not tell, as it was too dark to see the shape and build of their tents. He quickly approached the camp and came sufficiently close to hear their conversation and laughter. Their's was a strange tongue, and he first hesitated then withdrew. If they should prove to be Comanches, they would probably treat him as a friend. If Kiowas, they would either deliver them into the hands of the Apaches, or send them his scalp instead. It was a trying moment in relating this portion of his history he said to the writer: "I decided that it was death or life. I was nearly famished, having eaten nothing for three days, and the cold was so intense that I knew I would freeze to death before morning. If I gave myself up to those Indians, they could only kill me. Knowing that all Indians admire a brave man, I put on a bold front, and was standing in their midst before they were aware of my presence. You ought to have seen those Indians! With a war whoop that rang wild and shrill they sprang to their feet and with drawn bows surrounded me. Then all became still and two came near me and by the dim light afforded by the waning camp fire peered into my face as if trying to learn my identity. I stood erect, silent as a statue and glared at them defiantly. One of them who could speak a little Spanish said "Americano?" I told him "No" "Mexicano?" "No." "Apache?" "Si!" When I said Si (yes) he said something to an old Indian who came nearer and began to talk to me in Apache. He told me I was with Comanches and if I proved to be allright, I would be among friends and would be protected. I then asked for food, which they gave stintingly at first, warning me of the danger from overeating, I told the old Indian of my capture by the Apaches, my long residence with them, my trouble and escape, all of which he translated to the others, who showed interest in my story by many explosive grunts. Three of the men went with me to the ridge where I had left my poor horse. We led him into the camp, and the best I could do was to cover him with a buffalo robe which one of the Indians kindly loaned me for the purpose. There being no grass, he had to remain hungry. I was given a warm place to sleep in the tepee, and from that moment I have always found the Comanches to be my most devoted friends. Don't you believe that the Comanche is a bad man. You hate him and believe him to be a rascal, but the Comanches don't keep books and their side of history has never been written."

Dr. W. W. Beetz, the Kerrville optometrist, was here Monday and Tuesday to remedy defective eyes. Dr. Beatty makes regular visits to Bandera and is building up a large clientage. Besides being an expert oculist and optometrist, he is a polished gentleman and makes friends wherever he goes.

Hugo Jenschke was in from the farm Saturday exhibiting a freak in the way of a young turkey that had four well formed feet. It was fully developed in every way and would probably have grown up, but was accidently killed a couple of days after it was hatched out. The additional feet were at the tail end on top of its back.

T. H. Phillips, G. G. Hinds, and son, Leslie Hinds, all the way from Pipe Creek, were in the metroplis Saturday and favored the New Era with an appreciated visit. Mr. Phillips renewed his own subscription and that of his son, John Phillips, at Port Arthur. He sends the little old home paper to all of his children.

Miss Clara Mansfield came up from Pleasanton to spend Sunday with her parents, Judge and Mrs. A. L. Mansfield. She was accompanied here by Miss Mildred Cox, Miss Louise Dicker, Leslie Cox and Leslie Lyons, all of Pleasanton. Miss Cox and brother, Leslie formerly lived in Bandera, being the daughter and son of Berry Cox.

Two new members have been enrolled in Cemetery Association and the following have donated trees since last report: John Mansfield and C. F. Thallman, Bandera, and David Thallman of Beaumont. During the past few months the Association has been increasing its membership and is becoming quite active in improving the cemetery, putting out shade tree along the main drive, way and cleaning up the burial plots. A meeting has been called for Saturday, May 5th, at which time every member should be present as important business is to come before the meeting.

Mrs. Florence Kehoe, of San Antonio, spent Sunday in Bandera.

Mrs. Clements Kalka returned Friday from a delightful visit to friends in San Antonio.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Drake, of Chicago, were registered at the Riverside Inn yesterday.

Miss Ellinor Stein returned Tuesday from San Antonio where she spent several days with her brother, Charlie Stein.

R. E. Blunt, the tinner, has purchased 100 acres of land from John Ross, located below town and will build a home there.

Mrs. Charles Mentagne and daughter, Miss Margaret, spent last week in San Antonio. Miss Margaret was quite ill while there.

The class play by the graduates of Bandera High School is to be given Friday night, May 4. It is entitled "Hearts and Diamonds."

Miss Lura Newcomer and Adolph Schott of Pipe Creek, and Pierce Harwood of North Carolina were guests at the home of J. H. Bruce last Sunday.

A deal is pending whereby Charlie Moore will buy the Turner ranch on West Verde. The deal will probably be consumated this week.

Miss Merle Granbury, of Houston, is a guest in the delightful country home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Buck. She will spend the summer here.

We learn that John A. Weimers, of the East Verde neighborhood, has leased his ranch and will go to Hext, in Menard county, to install and manage a cotton gin for his father-in-law, Mr. Searcy.

W. F. Kuehne, representing the Kuehne Hardware Co., of Boerne was in the city Monday in the interest of his firm. Mr. Kuehne dropped in to see the New Era while here, and reports business good.

Community Singing.

The all-day singing at the Church of Christ in Medina last Sunday brought a large crowd from Lima, Rocky Creek, Wallace Creek, West Prong, Medina and other communities, and was one of the most enjoyable occasions we have attended for a long time. The singing started at 10:30 a. m. and everybody participated. At 11 o'clock Robert Swinney preached an able sermon, which was followed by the communion service, and the crowd was dismissed for the noon hour. Baskets were then brought forth and a great feast was spread. All sorts of good things had been prepared by the ladies, fried chicken, salads, vegetables, cakes and pies, and all were invited to partake freely. About 2 p. m. the singing was resumed, a special program of congregational singing, duets, quartettes, and solos being arranged. Some of the best numbers were duets by Messrs. John and Marsh McAlpin of Medina, and quartettes by W. C. Swinney, Royle Swinney, Robert Swinney, Miss Lorena Swinney and Ralph Watson.

It was a great day, well spent and enjoyed by everybody, and we're hoping the songfest will be repeated, accompanied by another good dinner before many weeks pass.

District Conference

The Kerrville District Conference of the Methodist church, South, which had been in session since Wednesday night of last week, closed Sunday night. Interesting programs were had each day of the conference. Rev. J. O. Coppage of Center Point, preached the opening sermon, and on Thursday morning the session was given to routine work under the direction of the Presiding Elder A. E. Reetor, Rev. J. E. Simpson, presiding elder, of the Uvern, district, preached Thursday morning on "Leadership Training for Young People" in the afternoon the conference engaged in the study of rural church work with Rev. Simpson directing the study. Special feature of the afternoon program was select readings, songs and instrumental numbers rendered by five girls, Ruth Edens, Frances Strawn, Iora May Strawn, Willie Frances and Eliza-beth Adams, from the Methodist Home at Waco. At 8 p. m. Mr. Barnett, manager of the Home, with these girls, had charge and rendered a very interesting program.

Nearly all of Friday was given to quite a bit of business. Rev. H. M. Rabb, of West Texas Conference superintendent, was present and conducted the institute pro-

Riverside Inn Sold.

Miss Laura Duffy has sold the Riverside Inn to the Misses Pat Rier of San Antonio, who will take possession immediately. The well known hostelry has been owned and managed by the Duffy family for more than forty years, having been established by Miss Duffy's father, Col. Hugh Duffy. We understand the new proprietors have plans for improvements and will erect a number of cottages to accommodate the increasing patronage. The Misses Fuller own property across the river from town, and spend a greater portion of their time here. Now that they have become identified with the town's commercial interests we are pleased to learn that they will make their home here permanently.

Bandera Girl Married.

Miss Robbie Padgett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Padgett of Tarpley, was recently married to Mr. Gray Gossett, a prominent grist of Utopia. The New Era hastens to join many friends in extending congratulations and best wishes. The bride is well known here, having been a teacher in Bandera High School and in other schools of the county. She taught last term at Leakey. They will make their home at Utopia. May God's richest blessing rest upon this worthy couple.

And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not—Galatians 6:9.

Banderaland is the most beautiful region on earth at this season of the year. Don't you think so?

Bandera is to have another barber shop, as underscored by recent gains made by children of gray whiskers to growing, weed as grass and weeds.

There was melody and glad song at Medina last Saturday night until Sunday. The people of that community are following the right way to delightful entertainment, civic progress and community advancement.

For lack of space this week we leave out list of names of the our heroes who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, but don't let the absence of this list from these columns one week cause you to forget to make a donation to the fund now being created to erect a monument in Bandera to the memory of our heroic dead. Send in your donation.

The district conference of the Methodist church, which closed here Sunday night, was one of the most successful meetings ever held in this city. Preachers and delegates from other places highly praised Bandera's hospitality, and our home people were delighted to greet and entertain the visitors. Gatherings of this kind always redound to the good, in that it brings people together for exchange of views and fellowship. "No man liveth unto himself," and the intercourse we have with outsiders helps us to improve conditions in our own community.

Each community in the county should begin now to make preparations for the County Fair to be held in Bandera August 1, 2 and 3. The ladies of each community, whose names appeared on the list published in the New Era a short time ago, and others who will volunteer their services are urged to meet together and arrange fr displays from their respective communities. Organize and go about it just as if you were preparing for a fair right in your presinct, select your representatives to act on the county committee, and send them to Bandera when the county meeting is called. In co-operation there is giant strength; individual effort accomplishes but little. We're going to have the best county fair that has ever been pulled off and you'll be proud of the part you have in making it a success.

We have a few copies of the "Pioneer History of Bandera County" on hand yet, and if you have not secured a copy we urge you to get one before it is too late. Price, postpaid, $1.00.

We always noticed that the fellow who drives a car the fastest gets off the road, the fellow who averages 25 miles an hour and gets there as if he had only a limited time to reach his destination. The fellow who terrorizes both man and beast along the highway is the one who frightens, knocks down and outruns the lives of school children along the road and who makes it dangerous for others to travel. Usually he is the proprietor of the country store. This fellow, Texas is the identical cheap who hardly ever does anything worthwhile after he reaches his destination. The fellow who does enough sense to do some thing after reaching his destination usually has enough to drive at a moderately safe rate. May the tribe of the speed demon specially become extinct—New Braunfels Herald.

A Delightful Recital.

Last Sunday night, in company with Prof. C. T. Carlton, the writer attended the recital given by pupils of Mrs. P. P. Layton's "American Music class at Medina, which event was held in the Methodist church. It was well worth the price of admission, and we regret that we did not have the privilege of hearing all of the numbers rendered by the pupils, which, under the efficient coaching of Mrs. Layton and assisted by Mrs. Henry Beseke, presented a program that was a credit to the pupils, the teacher and the community. The program consisted of songs, duets and choruses, the subject of the American Music Association is to encourage the development of our own American national talent, and this is the first time in the history of Medina that such a program was rendered. Mailing the little town of Bandera county, coming right along in the march of progress and keeping abreast of the times, the good people of Medina are to be congratulated on the splendid manner in which they have taken up the work of encouraging

These stories, coupled with the fact reach in those days, and on every that he was the only occasion the congregation son of Chief Peta-Na-Co-Na, who ran and asked all Christian people was slain in the battle with Capt. to pray that God in His mercy and Ross (1850) elevated him to might restore her child.

During these years she traveled the chieftainship of the Coman- hundreds of miles in the effort to che nation. learn something of her lost boy, When the Comanches and other tribes were brought in and placed Miss. she learned that the Apaby the government on reservations ches had been located on the near Fort Sill, Herman was listed as a prisoner of war. On reservation at Fort with the rest and, in 1875, she went to the command- opposite submission to the white and at last post and also those in soldiers, but when he saw there for the purpose of every post in north- was no other alternative, he used west Texas hurried. To these she every available means to conceal gave a description of her son and his nationality. He avoided the employed them to keep a close presence of the white man as long as possible and seldom went of anyone within reach, who had but recently been at Fort Sill, or anywhere in that region, and inquired her there and went to interview him. And, thus the anxious years went wearily away and no tidings came from her long lost son. Many mother would have abandoned all hope of ever seeing her child again. They would have said, "He is dead, all prayers of no effect; they will not bring back the dead!" But not so with Mother Buehmier. "God will restore to me my boy. His mercies endure forever, and his promises are sure. I trust Him. I believe Him and I know He will bring back my child!" were her words on every occasion when doubt as to his being alive was expressed in her hearing.

Some time during the latter part of the year 1877, General McKenzie left Fort Sill and made a tour of inspection of the frontier posts. He passed through Fort Concho, Fort McKavett, thence to San Antonio. At old Fort Mason, which is twenty miles north of Loyal Valley, he spent the night. When his presence in Mason became known friends sent a courier to notify Mrs. Buehmier that General McKenzie would pass through Loyal Valley the day following, and that as he was direct from Fort Sill she would perhaps have an opportunity to learn something of her son.

Unfortunately Mrs. Buehmier was away when the courier came, but others were immediately dispatched, but before they reached her, General McKenzie and escort had passed Loyal Valley and were well on their way to Fredericksburg where they expected to pass the following night.

When Mrs. Buehmier received word that General McKenzie was expected to pass through Loyal Valley she rode with the speed of the wind to reach home in time to intercept him, but failing in this she hitched a team of fresh horses to her carriage, and accompanied by her husband, drove like John and came up with the General before he reached Fredericksburg.

Of the interview with General McKenzie and its happy results we will allow Mrs. Buehmier to relate her own story:

"Time passed away so slowly. I increased my efforts to learn something of Herman. My faith was thoroughly tested. I heard one day that General McKenzie was coming through Loyal Valley and I thought I could intercept him, as I thought that would be a good chance to find out if any more white boys among the Indians had come into the reservations and given up. But he passed before I got to see him. I got my husband to hitch up and carry me to Fredericksburg. We followed on and overtook the General in his camp three miles this side of Fredericksburg. I was conducted to his tent and knew him when I saw him. I told him when Herman was stolen and as he had just come from the reservation thought perhaps he could tell me something of my boy. He asked me to give him the age and description of the boy. When I had done so he said: "There is one white boy there, but from your description I don't think he is your son of whom he is not-that old." He dropped his head and studied for a moment then said: "Madam, I'll tell you what we will do: we will go to Fredericksburg and telegraph to the soldiers there to bring him down and if he is your boy I will be very glad, and if he should prove not to be, I will have him taken to San Antonio and place him where he can learn a trade. He has no business with the Indians." He telegraphed to start immediately with the white boy to Loyal Valley, but received a reply that the boy had gone on a buffalo hunt and would not be back for three months. These were the longest three months I ever spent. I could never wait more than two weeks until I would go to the office to know if they had returned from the hunt. At last a telegram came, saying he had returned and with an escort would start immediately. Think of my anxiety and joy, mixed with doubt and fear! If he should be my long lost son, I would be the happiest woman in the world! I counted the days and many little things brought up doubts and fears! I inquired of everybody who came to see me if any of they had seen or heard of Indians coming, but I obtained no tidings. One morning a man passed soldiers between Loyal Valley and Mason. These soldiers, he said, had charge of the white boy and they were coming, quite near that night. I walked incessantly pausing to listen for the sound of their ambulance, but I could hear nothing but the patter of the rain against the window panes. While we were at the supper table a large crowd came in and said Mrs. Buehmier, we've come to take you out to see your boy. Mr. Buehmier objected to my going out in the rain; said my going would not hasten things along any. A school teacher who boarded with us said: "Boys, you go meet Herman; the night is too disagreeable for Mrs. Buehmier to go out, and no one knows who she would do if she were to see him in the road." The boys went out three miles where they found them in camp. They asked the soldiers to drive into the Valley that they might meet me there. Friends came from far and near to rejoice with me, if it should prove to be my boy. There were three hundred present. Closer and closer came the sounds of the wheels of the soldiers' ambulance, while my heart beat faster and faster. When that ambulance to bring the boy I drove to the door, but they still held me. I tore loose, ran to Herman, threw my arms around his neck and wept. I then held him to the light to see if it really was my Herman. When in the light, Great Lord! I thought it was my Herman. Mina came up and said, you see the scar on his hand? That is where I cut him with our little hatchet. Sure enough, a close examination proved it to be Herman. Imagine the joy, the bliss and happiness that assurance brought me. I shall ever be grateful to General McKenzie for having my boy brought home."

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Weimers went to Kerrville Friday, returning Saturday.

Mrs. H. H. Carmichael and son, Gervis, have returned from a visit to Sabinal.

Lee Risinger has purchased a radio receiving set and will install it in his home.

Miss Alvena Batto returned Saturday from a delightful visit to friends in San Antonio.

Vernon Powell of Geffer Point, was among the delegates to the district conference here last week.

Rev. P. J. Boivin, pastor of the Catholic church, has received a fifty Star roadster, the first of its kind to appear in Bandera.

The completed census shows 1124 pupils within the scholastic age in Bandera county, as compared to 1144 last year.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Lewis, of Pipe Creek, were visitors in the city Tuesday and paid the New Era sanctum an appreciated visit.

Edwin Schoenert killed a monster rattlesnake at the Schoenert farm last Sunday. The reptile possessed nine rattles and was over five feet long.

Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Canafax were here last week to attend the district conference. Rev. Canafax teaches the Rocky Creek school.

Henry Bielefeld, a staunch friend to this New Era, sends in his renewal from Central, New Mexico, and says he enjoys reading the little old home paper.

The home of Mrs. Cleophas Hicks, near Tarpley, was badly damaged by fire last Monday. Prompt arrival of citizens of Tarpley saved the building, but a portion of the roof was burned.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Billings and little son, Irvin leave today for Beasley, Texas, where Mrs. Billings will spend several weeks with her parents. Frank will return in a few days.

Steve Thomas writes us from Fredericksburg to send the New Era to him at that point, and also send along a volume of the Pioneer History of Bandera County.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brown, of San Antonio, were guests of Mrs. Henry Haby Tuesday. They came up to bring Mrs. R. T. Hale, of Menard, who will spend awhile with her daughter, Mrs. Haby.

We were glad to once more meet Rev. R. S. Adair, pastor of the Methodist church at Boerne. He was in attendance at the district conference here last week. We knew him some eleven years ago at Orona, and we are pleased to find that the years have dealt kindly with him and that he is still enjoying good health.

Last Sunday at Medina we ran up against John Buckelew at the dinner table, and between bites he informed us that he had just about finished grafting 400 pecan trees on his ranch on Wallace Creek, and believes he made a successful job of it. We are pleased to note that many of our citizens are turning their attention to pecan culture.

Mr. and Mrs. John Green accompanied by Miss Jewell Green, Miss Callie Baxter and Miss Willie Mae Buckenbach, cattle owners from Mason, to attend district conference last week. We knew Mr. Green at Mason some thirty years ago, when he was just a boy arrived from sunny Tennessee. He is now teaching school at Camp San Saba, and is rated as one of the most successful educators of Central West Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Boehme, of Pipe Creek, brought us three freak hen eggs last Friday. They were laid by the same hen and the shells were very uneven and somewhat rippled. Adolph suggested that if we would set them under a hardshell turtle we might be able to hatch out an alligator. This sort of observation brought on more talk and Adolph said that in company with John Dunlap he recently went fishing at the Bottle Spring on Medina Lake and they caught a whole lot of fish, while other parties fishing there at the same time got hardly a bite. It's all in the knowing how, he says.

COMING—Dr. J. M. Boyle, the eye specialist, will be in Bandera next Saturday to remain one week. Office, in Risinger build- ing. Those in need of his services should call early.

He will be in Medina next Wednesday and Thursday.

Grandpa Charlie Gray has moved his family to Medina Lake where he and his son will operate a motor boat again this season.

Mrs. C. J. Nichols, of Loyal Valley, is here to spend the summer with her daughter, Mrs. C. Billings.

George Ijessberg has gone to Kerrville to accept a position, and orders the New Era to visit him there.

Privilege school will close Friday, May 11, after a successful six months' term. A community singing will be given that night at the school house.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kidd and M. W. Nichols of Loyal Valley, and Miss Rosalia Bide of Harper, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. Billings during the district conference last week.

Granville Wright romped over our sanctum Saturday and proudly announced that a fine baby girl was coming on for another year. Granville says things are getting lovely down on Medina Lake, and fish are biting prodigiously.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Price and daughters, Misses Lee and Evelyn and Mrs. and Mrs. M. J. Scott, went to Junction to attend a fifth Sunday meeting with the Baptist church there. They returned Sunday and reported having a delightful trip.

J. A. Mitchell, an industrious farmer of the Winan's Creek community, was in town Saturday and Kerrville New to coffer by the contribution of a dollar and a half to keep the little home paper coming.

Felix Knibbe, the tonsorial artist, spent several days in San Antonio last week. As the bad side of his aged mother who underwent an operation for appendicitis and came through fine and is now said to be making rapid progress toward recovery and during her visit to her grandmother Mrs. Harrison Brown is also gaining several pounds in weight.

Last Sunday was Mrs. R. P. Dower's fifty-fourth birthday, and she and Mr. Dower gave a pleasantly surprised that afternoon when all of their children and a few friends came in bringing cake and ice cream for a celebration that was enjoyed by all and the good mother many happy returns of the day. Ganderbone's Predictions.

Ganderbone says—Nearly all of my recent predictions have been fulfilled. During May we will have some thunder storms, with wind and hail. Heavy rains and hail between eighth and twelfth, which is storm period. Growing weather. Cotton will yield fairly well this year, despite the ravages of the boll weevil. Berries will produce abundantly, and watermelons will be plentiful. Lots of redbugs, ticks and greenbugs will be in evidence. Summer revival meetings and picnics will be numerous. Several weddings in June. The fair will be the best ever."

HOUSE FOR SALE.

Mrs. C. J. Nichols, of Loyal Valley, is here to spend the summer with her daughter, Mrs. C. V. Billings.

George Eisenberg has gone to Kerrville to accept a position, and orders the New Era to visit him there.

Privilege school will close Friday, May 11; after a successful six months' term. A community singing will be given that night at the school house.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Kidd and M. W. Nichols of Loyal Valley, and Miss Reseda Bode of Harper, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Billings during the district conference last week.

Granville Wright romped over our sanctum Saturday and proclaimed the kale to keep the New Era coming on for another year. Granville says things are getting back down on Medina Lake, and bids are biting greedily.

J. R. Price and daughters, Misses Lera and Evelyn and Revel and Mrs. M. J. Scott, went to Junction to attend a fifth Sunday meeting with the Baptist church there. They returned Sunday and reported having a delightful trip.

J. A. Mitchell, an industrious farmer of the Winan's Creek community, was in town Saturday and enriched the New Era's coffer by the contribution of a dollar and a half to keep the little home paper coming.

Mrs. Linnie Buck, who is employed at the Robert S. Kerr Memorial Hospital in San Antonio is spending a couple of weeks with friends and relatives here and in Medina Lake, and came home to celebrate Mother's Day. She has undergone an operation for appendicitis, and has been confined to the hospital during her visit to her grandmother, Mrs. Harriet Chimney, this city. She gained several pounds in weight.

Last Sunday was Mrs. R. P. Power's fifty-fourth birthday and Mr. Power determined to pleasantly surprised that afternoon when all of the children and a few friends came in bringing cake and ice cream for a celebration that was enjoyed by all, and to wish the good mother many happy returns of the day. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Corley, Elsie Corley, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Caffall, Sidney and Doris Caffall, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Power, Mrs. L. H. Hayes, Roscoe Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Caffall.

PAINTING—I will do a general line of painting. Signs and Automobile Painting a specialty. See local agent for John Deere implements, Satisfactory payments, Waterloo Boy tractors service.—P. A. PUE, Medina, Tex and stationary engines.

SOUTHERN STEEL COMPANY
4500 S. PRESA ST., SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS. PHONE MISSION 48.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Weimers went to Kerrville Friday, returning Saturday.

Mrs. H. H. Carmichael and son, Gervis, have returned from a visit to Sabinal.

Lee Risinger has purchased a radio receiving set and will install it in his home.

Miss Alvena Batto returned Saturday from a delightful visit to friends in San Antonio.

Vernon Powell of Geffer Point, was among the delegates to the district conference here last week.

Rev. P. J. Boivin, pastor of the Catholic church, has received a Duffy Star roadster, the first of its kind to appear in Bandera.

The completed census shows 1124 pupils within the scholastic age in Bandera county, as compared to 1144 last year.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Lewis, of Pipe Creek, were visitors in the city Tuesday and paid the New Era sanctum an appreciated visit.

Edwin Schoenert killed a monster rattlesnake at the Schoenert farm last Sunday. The reptile possessed nine rattles and was over fifte feet long.

Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Canafax were here last week to attend the district conference. Rev. Canafax teaches the Rockey Creek school.

Harry Burleson, a staunch friend to the New Era, renewed his renewal from Cotton, New Mexico, and says he enjoys reading the little old home paper.

The home of Mrs. Cleophas Hicks, near Tarpley, was badly damaged by fire last Monday. Prompt action of citizens of Tarpley saved the building, but a portion of the roof was burned.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Billings and little son, Irvin leave today for Beasley, Texas where Mrs. Billings will spend several weeks with her parents. Frank will return in a few days.

Steve Thomas writes us from Frederick, Okla. to send the New Era to him at that point, and also send along a volume of the Pioneer History of Bandera County.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brown, of San Antonio, were the guests of Mrs. Henry Haby Tuesday. He came up to bring Mrs. R. T. Hale, of Menard, who will spend awhile with her daughter, Mrs. Haby.

We were glad to once more meet Rev. R. S. Adair, pastor of the Methodist church at Boerne. He was in attendance at the district conference here last week. We knew him some eleven years ago at Boerne, and we are pleased to find that the years have dealt kindly with him and that he is still enjoying good health.

Last Sunday at Medina we ran up against John Buckelew at the dinner table, and between bites we informed us that he had just about finished grafting 400 pecan trees on his ranch on Wallace Creek, and believes he made a good job of it. We are also pleased to note that many of our citizens are turning their attention to pecan culture.

Mr. and Mrs. John Green accompanied by Miss Jewell Green, Miss Callie Baxter and Miss Willie Mae Hudson, left Sunday for Mason to attend district conference last week. We know Mr. Green at Mason some thirty years ago, when he was just a boy arrived from sunny Tennessee. He is now teaching school at Camp San Saba, and is rated as one of the most up-and-coming educators of Central West Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Boehme, of Pipe Creek, brought us some fresh hen eggs last Friday. They were laid by the same hen and the shells were very uneven and somewhat rippled. Adolph suggested that if we would set them under a hardshell turtle we might be able to hatch out an alligator pear. But in the conversation brought on more talk and Adolph said that in company with John Dunlap he recently went fishing at Pipe Creek Spring on Medina Lake and they caught a whole lot of fish, while other parties fishing there at the same time got hardly a bite. It's all in the knowing how, he says.

BOY FATALLY INJURED BY FALLING FROM WAGON

Deporable Accident Occurs Near Tuff Last Tuesday Morning

Hiram, the seven-year-old son of M. S. Manning, of Tuff, was fatally injured Tuesday morning when he fell from a wagon loaded with cedar posts. The wheels passed over his body and fearfully crushed him, several ribs being broken and it is believed one of the ribs penetrated his liver. The injured lad was rushed to a hospital at Kerrville where it was expected an operation would be performed to save his life. Up to three o'clock yesterday afternoon no word had been received as to his condition, which is regarded as hopeless.

The accident occurred near the home of the family. The mother, Mrs. Manning, was in San Antonio on a visit at the time, and was called home by the distressing news.

Taft Praised Bankers' Work

President William Howard Taft in his talks to American bankers praised the work they are doing.

Did you ever stop to consider what this country would be without banks?

There never were as many bank depositors in the United States as there are today.

Are you a depositor?

If you are not, see us today about opening an account.

DRILLING TO START SOON IN VANDERPOOL FIELD

New Tests to be Made by the Humble Oil & Refining Company.

We learn that the Humble Oil & Refining Company of Houston has taken extensive leases in the western part of Bandera county, and will at once bring in a drill and begin operations to thoroughly develop the territory around Vanderpool and Utopia. "About 18,000 acres have been blocked, on which two more wells will be sunk to a depth of at least 3500 feet.

This is strictly a development proposition, undertaken by a concern that has plenty of money to carry out their plans. It will be remembered that the well which was drilled at Vanderpool two years ago by the Wood-Texas concern went to a depth of over 4,000 feet, encountering oil and gas at different depths, and finally was shot in an attempt to bring in the oil, but without result. The drilling of the well did not result in failure altogether, inasmuch as it proved the formation of the region and acting on what was found in that hole the present development project will be undertaken. Through the efforts of Joe E. Chisum and W. R. Fletcher outside capital has become interested, contracts have been signed and within a very short time Bandera county may have a gusher within her borders.

Have Something Left

Saving money is made easy, if you do the saving before you do the spending. Make every day your banking day. Deposit a regular amount each week before you make your purchases. Make your deposit and forget it. Do not leave so important a matter to chance. What could be a better motto than just this: "Have Something Left." When you deposit your savings in the First National Bank it will earn 4½ per cent interest. We invite you to bank with us.

And let us be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.—Galatians 6:9.

Donations to the fund for a monument to the Bandera county boys who gave up their lives in the World War are coming in very slowly. We are sure it is not a lack of patriotism on the part of our people, but merely a putting off making their contribution. The monument is going to be erected, and we are sure every citizen wants to help in this laudable undertaking.

Crop conditions in Bandera county are very good now. Oats are and wheat are thriving and will soon be ready for cutting. Corn is coming right along, and it is predicted that we will have a good cotton crop this year, although the acreage planted to cotton is very limited.

Summer visitors are becoming numerous in Bandera. Fishing parties, picnic parties and tourists are now coming in to enjoy the recreation and outdoor sport, fishing and bathing here.

We are in receipt of the initial number of the La Pryor New Era, just established by Jack Stinebaugh. It is a newsy paper and starts out with a good advertising patronage. Mr. Stinebaugh at one time edited the Bandera Enterprise and has many friends here who wish him success in his new venture.

The Uvalde Leader-News was recently sold by the receiver to Mrs. Ward of that city, and H. P. Hornby has leased the publication. The New Era hopes the Leader-News' financial troubles are now over and that success may be realized by all concerned.

After one has gained the world's record in the non-stop dance they have lost their morals and no doubt ruined their lives. What will their record be?

You have been reading the story, "Nine Years With the Apaches and Comanches," appearing in the New Era. This story ends in this issue, but next week we will publish an account of a battle between Captain Roberts' Rangers and a band of Indians which occurred on the Concho plains in 1875, in which Herman Lehmann participated, he being with the Indians at that time. Captain Jim Gillett of Marfa recently published a book, "Six Years With the Texas Rangers," in which he mentions this fight. Captain Gillett was also a member of Roberts' Ranger company.

We have a few copies of the "Pioneer History of Bandera County" on hand yet, and if you have not secured a copy we urge you to get one before it is too late. Price, postpaid, $1.00.

Blest be the Tie That Binds

The sale of the Riverside Inn last week and the retirement of Miss Laura Duffy from the management of this well known hostelry, marks the passing into new hands of a pioneer establishment in this town. In the early days Col. Hugh Duffy came to Bandera and purchased the property and established a hotel which, for more than forty years has catered to the public patronage. Distinguished men from all parts of the United States and some from foreign countries have found homelike comforts under its hospitable roof. Col. Duffy was an ideal host, and loved by everybody. He reared his family there, and when he laid his burden down his place was taken by his daughter, Miss Laura Duffy, who conducted the hotel in the same manner as her father. She was born there, grew to womanhood there, and now that she is to sever her association with all of those ties that surrounded her from earliest childhood, there comes a parting that will be sad in the extreme. Every native of this town shares that sadness, for clustering about the old Duffy Hotel are memories of other days, social gayeties, receptions, dinners, balls, functions, and the like, in which the youth and aged of times past and present participated. Memories that will linger as long as the generation now coming on shall live, and in the hearts of both young and old will be found that tender love for Miss Duffy, wherever she may go, that will endure for aye, and bring her back to old Bandera to spend the remainder of her days among those who have known her and loved her from childhood.

Cemetery Association

As announced, a meeting of the Cemetery Association was held at the Baptist church Saturday afternoon. The attendance, however was small, on this account action on some matters was postponed. A motion that the Association make a donation to the monument fund was unanimously carried. A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. J. A. Head for his kind assistance in the purchase and planting of trees set on the driveway, and also to the Ramsey Nursery for the generous manner in which their order was filled. Nearly all trees were donated by members and friends of the association, and it is a gratifying to report they are all growing nicely. Work of clearing the grounds of brush, weeds and undesirable trees will be taken up again soon.

R. E Willis was over from Tarpley Friday.

Prof. J. E. O'Bryant was the guests of friends in the city Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam I. Stevens were in from the ranch last Thursday and walled at the New Era office.

Eddie Leibold was a visitor in the city Thursday and while here he called in and advanced his New Era figures.

Herman Harper and Doc White spent a night on Medina Lake last week, and caught lots of fish, many of which would weigh fifty pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Bartlow and little son, Ross, were here to spend last week-end with Mrs. Bartlow's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fitzgerald.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Akin and little son, of Medina, were visitors in the city Friday and paid the New Era sanctum an appreciated visit.

The graduating class of Bandera class play, "Hearts and Diamonds," tomorrow (Friday) evening at the High School auditorium. Don't miss it.

Mrs. H. C. Wright and Mrs. W. H. Fitzgerald paid the New Era sanctum an appreciated visit last Saturday and were interested in the linotype's performance.

The ice cream function given for the benefit of St. Joseph's school last Sunday was well patronized, the proceeds to be used toward buying equipment for the new building.

Ed Herpel, recently of the Herpel & Yantis Motor Co. of San Antonio, has purchased the business of the Jordon Motor Co. at Boerne. This firm transacts considerable business in Bandera county, having this territory on their Ford contract.

We are in receipt of an invitation from Miss Stella Mae Willis to attend the commencement exercises of Hondo High School, Tuesday, May 22. The young lady is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Willis, of Tarpley, long time friends to the editor.

Mrs. Albert Rosenthal and son Joseph, of Tarpley, were in the city Friday returning from a visit to Kerrville, where Mrs. Rosenthal's daughter, Miss Hilda, is attending the Nostre Dame Academy. While in Bandera they paid the New Era office a pleasant visit.

Capt. John T. Wright, of Tarpley, was in the city Monday and paid this office an appreciated visit. Capt. Wright operated a black-smith shop here several years ago and was an expert in his line. He is now living in quiet retirement on his ranch near Tarpley. He came in to make a donation to the monument fund.

Winan's Creek Community Club kept "open house" last Friday night when an enjoyable play party and ice cream festival and box supper was given at the school house in that community. The tidy sum of $43.55 was realized from the sale of boxes, ice cream and cake, and will be used to employ a singing teacher there.

Fred Cox was over from Center Point Saturday looking after his picture show interests. Mr. Cox says he has arranged to put on a better grade of pictures at the Bandera theater, and during the summer will bring on some special features. It is probable that "The Old Nest," which was shown here last year, will be put on again soon, as there have been several requests for it.

Mother

The only statement that Mark Twain ever put in print concerning his wife was published in the "Christian Union" in 1885. It is as follows:

"The mother of my children adores them—these six infidels. Here they worship her; they worship anything which the touch of her hand has made sacred. They know her for the best and truest friend they ever had, or ever shall have; they know her for one who never did them a wrong and cannot do them as long as she lives; consequently as she would the best and the oldest in the land; and who always required of them good speech and courteous conduct toward all, f whatsoever degree, with whom they chanced to come in contact; they knew her for one whose promise, when her reward or punishment, is gold, and always worth its face, to the utmost farthing. In a word, they knew her, and I know her; for the best and dearest MOTHER that lives—and by a long, long way the wisest."

Mother's Good Night

Oh, mothers, so weary, discouraged, worn out by the cares of the day, often grow cross and impatient, complain of the noise and play; for the day brings so many vexatious, so many little things to annoy; but mothers, whatever may vex you, send the children to bed with a kiss.

The day is done, the feet that wander, perhaps from the pathway of right; the dear little hands find new mischief to try you from most thoughtful mind. Think of the desolate mothers who'd give all the world for your bliss, and, as thanks for your infinite blessings, send the children to bed with a kiss. For some day their noise will not vex you, the silence will hurt you far more; you will long for the sound of children's voices, for a sweet childish face at the door. And to press a child's face to your bosom, you'd give all the world, dear mother, if you could but for 'twill bring you in sorrow, send the children to bed with a kiss.—Unknown.

Oh, man, in bank or storehouse you're mother's boy for aye; go write her a letter and tell her today. You'll be glad you did, for truly, better than tongue can tell, 'twill ease the pain your silence gave, and make your own heart glad. And when with heart all broken, you bid a last goodby, you'll know the Star of Mother's Love still shines from yonder sky. And thank you for that letter, and bids you meet her there, where God's own face gives purest light, and answers mother's prayer.—Sunday School Executive.

Who ran to help me when I fell, and would some pretty story tell, or kiss the place to make it well? Mother.—Jane Taylor.

How many buttons are missing today? No one knows but mother. How many playthings are strewn in her way? No one knows but mother. How many thimbles and spools has she missed, how many burns on each fat little fist, how many bumps to be cuddled and kissed? Nobody knows but mother. How many muddy shoes all in a row, how many stockings to darn, do you know? How many torn little aprons to mend, how many hours of toil must she spend, what is the time when her days work will end? Nobody knows but mother. How many cares does a mother heart know? How many joys from her mother love flow. How many prayers by each little white bed, how many tears for her babes has she shed, how many kisses for each curly head? Nobody knows but mother.—Will H. Brown, Book of Poems.

"Our Dead, or the Life After Death," a pamphlet written by Rev. H. L. Atkins of Bandera, and brought out by the North Carolina Publishing Co., now on sale at Billings & Son's Drug store. Price 20 cents per copy, or $1.80 per dozen. You will find it interesting, instructive and helpful. Buy a copy and see.

NINE YEARS WITH THE APACHES AND COMANCHES

The Story of Herman Lehmann, Who Was Captured by Indians in Mason County, and Who Became to All Intents and Purposes an Indian

Those who had witnessed this happy meeting add a number of facts not mentioned, by Mother Dischmier. Numbers of them have told me that it was near the noon hour when she received word that the escort should be at Loyal Valley. She immediately began preparations for a great feast. She started runners in every direction to call friends, far and near. Every oven and stove in town was kept hot, baking bread and cakes; beeves and muttons were slaughtered and a pall of smoke ascended from pits of barbecued meats. A slow rain began falling in the evening but that did not retard preparation for the feast, nor did it lessen the attendance. Everybody loved Mrs. Buchmier, knew how she had prayed, and trusted, and now that the lost son had been found and was nearing home, they hastened to join in the general thanksgiving.

When he arrived and she finds sure that he was her son, those present relate that never before had they heard such shouts of praise and thanksgiving to God by His goodness and mercy. The good mother was a devout Methodist and her righteous soul became full to overflowing. There was no dearth of tears of joy that evening; feasting, singing hymns of praise, German and English, prayers of thanksgiving occupied most of the night. All the day following the feast was kept up for those who remained and for those who continued to come. During all this time Herman maintained a haughty indifference akin to Indian stoicism. He had forgotten his mother tongue and could not speak English. He sought every occasion to shun the company of others, and when assigned to a clean feather bed on which to sleep, he refused, preferring to sleep on the ground under a shed with only a blanket for covering. When the escort left, he refused to go with the soldiers and was with difficulty restrained. One of his brothers became his constant companion, teaching him his forgotten language, and to prevent his running away. He was given a few horses, cattle and sheep in order that a property ownership might serve to render him content to remain. It was a difficult matter to induce him to wear clothing, and oftimes he would doff the suit furnished him, paint himself, and with leggings, breech-clout and feathers, appear among the hotel guests in all the barbaric panoply of a Comanche warrior.

A few weeks after his return, a protracted meeting was being held under a brush arbor in Lyal Valley. Herman viewed the proceedings from a respectable distance, and his amazement was extreme. He finally concluded the whites were having a rain dance, and one day at the 11 o'clock service when religious feeling became intense, and singing and shouting was at its height, Herman dashed into the affair with his war club, he engaged in a war dance that had a startling effect. His brothers seized him and led him home, and the service closed with out the benediction.

Gradually, at first, later, speedily, his mother language came back to him, and he was soon speaking English in the course of a few years and went to school to the writer long enough to learn to read and write. The writer, in prison, he pined for the companionship of his Indian friends, and their manner of life. His stock was not a small one, for, of course, eight or ten years he found himself in fairly good circumstances, he in company with his brothers, G. A. Lehmann, visited his people at Fort Sill and he was received with every demonstration of joy and Indian fellowship. On his return he married Miss Lizzie Slayden, secured the passage of a resolution in congress, granting Herman a head right to the same as had been given each member of the Comanche tribe. This grant was based on the fact that Herman had been stolen when a child, had been adopted by the Comanche tribe, had been given an Indian name, and that by his long captivity he had been deprived of all the advantages of white schools and all other benefits accruing to American citizenship. At this writing, 1906, Herman is an Indian interpreter at Fort Sill, for he government, at a handsome salary, and his services are valuable, since he speaks the Comanche and Apache dialect, besides English, German, and some Spanish.

In closing this story of the captive German boy, I wish to say that I have "Told the tale as it was told to me."

I have made no attempt at rhetorical embellishment of high sounding flourishes but have rather chosen to relate facts in plain language. To have given a full and complete history of the captive's eventful life while in captivity would require a large volume hence I have attempted to give only a brief outline of his career.

Next week we will give Toni Gillespie's account of the Battle of the Plains, wherein Herman participated, being killed or captured by the rangers under Captain Roberts.

THE END.

Our Children

Mothers, and fathers, too, are we as interested to know where our children are when night comes as the parents of Jessup Bros. store? Then they missed him when night came and hunted for him until he was found. Many times children are out on the streets at night when they should be at home. We fail many times to instruct them as we should so that they will be in position to look after them when they grow from us. Last Tuesday, April 24, while coming from Dallas on the Interurban, I saw a young lady go up to the window of a young man. All eyes were turned toward them, wondering, of course what she wanted. After talking a few seconds she passed a cigarette with her companion. One heavy set man left the smoker and came back in the other end of the car and remarked that it was too tough for him. What will the young girls do next? I wonder if that girl's mother knew where she was and what she was doing, or if she knew would she care? Let us be companions to our children so as to help them to grow up right the right way. Mothers think more of their chickens at night until they their girls. They will not leave their chickens at night until they are safely protected from danger, but they let their girls go at night never thinking what will be the result. Girls, are you caring for you boy as you would one for your stock? Would you leave your cattle or stock out in the rain and bad weather? Do you know where you are at night? It is time for us to wake up and be on our guard. Young folks should know the dangers as the older ones and it is the duty of parents to teach all lead them out of the dangers.—Christian Helper.

A man took his wife to a doctor, who put a thermometer in her mouth and told her to keep it shut for two or three minutes. When departing, the husband said to the physician, "aside," "Doctor, what'll you take for that thing? I've never seen my wife keep her mouth shut that long before since we were married."

Steers Killed

Mr. D. W. Short will remember the electric storm of Tuesday night of last week for many a day, as ten of his big beef steers fell victims to one of the vivid flashes of lightning. The dead bodies were not found until the latter part of the succeeding day, as every one in the neighborhood was busy around the ranch. Mr. Short sent his son for a little observation ride out in his pasture, and to Howard fell the discovery of the mishap that had befallen them. Mr. Short said eight of the steers fell right together, so close that they were touching each other, while the other two were a few feet removed from the pile. Mr. Short estimates the loss at between $400 and $500. This is the first time lightning has struck in that part of the Short pasture where the bodies of these steers were found. A few years ago, during an electric storm a bolt of lightning struck the earth and tore out a trench some seventy-five yards in length. Mr. Short says everything the work of a middle buster more than any other way he could describe it. However, the electric storm mentioned above was the first to do him any real injury.—Hondo Anvil Herald.

Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Jureczki celebrated the fiftieth anniversary, of their wedding last Tuesday, and a great event it was. All of their ten children were present, being John L. Jureczki of Bandera, Mrs. Rose Pope of San Antonio, Miss Tillie Annis of South Bend, Indiana, Albert Jureczki of Bandera, Mrs. Lucy Weatherby of San Antonio, Mrs. Celia Cornelius of San Antonio, Mrs. Lucy Anderson of Bandera, and Mrs. Stella Allen of San Antonio. During the day about 200 guests assembled at the parental home and partook of a great feast which was spread in their honor, and at night dancing was enjoyed, the aged bride and groom taking part.

Fifty years—a half century—is a long time and but few couples are fortunate enough to spend that span in wedded happiness, and the New Era congratulates Mr. and Mrs. Jureczki upon the great privilege that has been theirs. They were married in Bandera May 8, 1873, and have lived here all of these years. They have raised a large family of children, all now grown and occupying positions of usefulness in the communities wherein they reside. At the gathering Tuesday four generations were represented, children, grand children and great grandchildren being present.

Mr. and Mrs. Jureczki received many useful and beautiful presents, and we all wish them many returns of the anniversary of their wedded life.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Bandera county, greeting:

Virgil Storms, Guardian of the Estate of Robert Henry Storms, Virgil Goodman and Charles Goodman, having filed in our County Court his Final Account of the condition of the Estate of said Robert Henry Storms, Virgil Goodman and Charles Goodman numbered 286 on the Probate Docket of Bandera county, together with an application to be discharged from said Guardianship.

You Are Hereby Commanded, That by publication of this Writ for twenty days in a Newspaper printed in the county of Bandera, you give due notice to all persons interested in the Account for Final Settlement of Said Estate, to appear and contest the same if they see proper to do so, on or before the July Term, 1923, of said County Court, commencing and to be holden at the Court House of said County, in the town of Bandera, Texas, on 2nd Monday in July, A. D., 1923, the same being the 16th day of July, A. D., 1923, when said Account and Application will be acted upon by said Court.

Given Under my Hand and seal of said Court, at my office in the town of Bandera, Texas, this 8th day of May A. D. 1923.

MARK McBRYDE
Clerk, County Court, Bandera Co.

Mrs. Amasa Clark left yesterday for San Antonio where she will spend several days with her daughters, Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Evans, and then she will go to Charlotte to visit her son, Alvin and Orange Clark. She will be absent about a week.

A. V. Pue is on the move all the time. When he is not moving back to the ranch he is moving to Bandera, and says it keeps him "on the jump." We move that Mr. Pue moves too often for when he moves his family moves, and we hope that the next time he will move he will move back to Bandera. He moved to the ranch this week.

Bids Wanted.

Bids will be received for barbecue stand, feed stand, refreshment stands, hamburger and restaurant stand at Bandera County Fair August 1, 2, 3. Bids will be received up to June 15, and right reserved to reject any or all bids. One half amount to be paid upon acceptance of bid, and balance payable on opening morning of the fair. Address bids to M. R. Thalmann, president.

J. A. Head is home from San Antonio for a few days.

O. F. Thallman was up from his ranch on Privilege last Saturday.

A. V. Pue was here Monday to move his family back to the ranch.

Fabian Garison and Everett Briggs were here from Medina Sunday.

Bays Atkins, Jake Short and Clarence Curl came up from San Antonio to spend Sunday.

Gordon Evans and Chas. Hanson were down from the Hanson ranch Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Luke Gray and children were over from Kerrville Sunday on a visit to relatives.

District court convenes in Bandera next Monday. The docket is not very heavy for the coming term.

Mrs. A. P. Kehoe came up from San Antonio to spend a day or two with her sister, Miss Laura Duffy.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Kelly, who have a nice ranch home near Medina, were visitors in the city Monday.

Mrs. J. R. Price spent a few days at the ranch home of Mr. Mrs. W. L. Fries on Winan's Creek this week.

Mother's Day will be fittingly observed in the Baptist church next Sunday. You are invited to attend the services.

Mrs. W. R. Thomasson and daughter, Miss Grace, of Pipe Creek, were here Monday with Mrs. Wiley Meadows at the ranch.

The Hansen Ranch interests have purchased the Mary Fellows survey of 320 acres and it has been blocked into the ranch proper.

Brian Montague, a prominent attorney of Alpine, was here Friday and Saturday on a visit to his mother, Mrs. Chas. Montague.

The covering is being put on James Cole's new building, and within a short time it will be ready for occupancy.

Privilege school will close Saturday night, May 19, instead of Friday. The high school girls will serve ice cream and cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pfeiffer and children, of Boerne, were here Sunday on a visit to Mrs. Pfeiffer's sister, Mrs. Rudolph Scheele.

Messrs. J. E. Browning, Bud Hoover and Joe Newcomer, representative citizens of the Medina province, were business visitors in Bandera Monday.

C. H. Brient, who is engaged in the construction of a large refinery at San Antonio, was up to spend a few days with his family on Privilege last week.

Mrs. M. Boyle, the well known optometrist and optician of Uvalde, is here this week fitting glasses for our people. He is accompanied by his family and they are here for the summer. Boyle's brother's, Mack and Tom Boyle.

Joe Villemain and Simon Schneider and little daughter, Violet Schneider, were up from Pipe Creek Monday. The latter's main says everything is lovely in his district and the "goose hangs high."

Mr. ad Mrs. J. W. Short went up to their ranch above Lima Tuesday to spend several days. Mr. Short has been buying year-ling steers for the past week, and is putting them on the good grass his ranch affords.

Prof. A. P. Carlton's violin class is very steadily increasing in numbers, which indicates that before a great while we will have lots of music in Bandera. Prof. Carlton is very thorough in his method of instruction, and all of his pupils are making advancement.

H. Burns, a bustling merchant of Tarpley, was in the city Monday, soliciting funds for the purpose of building a concrete bridge on Commissioner's Creek, a mile and a half from Tarpley. It's a good move, and should be encouraged. Every bridge built and every piece of road that is worked helps Bandera county just that much.

Miss Laura Duffy informs us that, owing to pressing business matters in San Antonio, the Misses Fuller, new owners of the Riverside Inn, will not be able to take possession and assume management of the Inn for several days yet, and that she will continue to manage the business until after district court here. When she relinquishes control, Miss Duffy will go to San Antonio for a much needed vacation. Her plans for the future are not yet made, she says.

Christadelphian Meeting

If it be the Lord's will there will be a Christadelphian fraternal meeting held in Bandera county, to begin at 7 p. m., August 25, and close Sunday night following. The place of meeting will be midway between the towns of Bandera and Medina, on Bro. Adolph Kutzer's place near the public road. All Christadelphians and all persons interested in their salvation are invited to attend. All will be made to feel welcome, and every effort will be made for the comfort of those who may wish to camp on the ground. This meeting will be conducted on the principles set forth in the Ecclesial Guide, viz: independent of all party lines and free from any partisan spirit. No Christadelphian will be denied fellowship on account of their preference to any particular statement of faith or on account of their private views on any non-essential doctrine. Come brethren, one and all, and enjoy with us a feast of love and good will, a season of refreshing in building each other up in our most holy faith. Fraternally and hopefully,

District Court

District Court convened in Bandera Monday morning, with Judge Burney on the bench. The grand jury was empaneled, received the judge's charge, and immediately got down to business. The grand jury is composed of Sam Smith, foreman; W. R. Thomason, W. L. Fries, E. Hicks, Fred Thalmann, L. Hicks, Tom McBryde, A. V. Pue, R. L. Duke, Oscar Clayton, E. A. Briggs and M. F. Smart. Judge Burney's charge, though brief, was rigid to the point, and covered all violations of the law.

Meet After 46 Years

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Mickle of Winston Salem, North Carolina, arrived Friday on a visit to Mr. Mickle's brother, J. N. Mickle of this place. The two brothers had not met in over forty-six years, and they are now putting in full time in recounting the joys and pleasures of their boyhood days. Mr. A. D. Mickle is head bookkeeper and director of the Wachovia National Bank of Winston Salem. They will spend several weeks here.

Sale of Mohair

Last week the Bandera County Ranchmen & Farmers Association sold to S. C. Murfitt of Boston 63,000 pounds of mohair at 55 cents per pound. Shipment of this large quantity of mohair has already been made from the Association's warehouses here and no danger and there was not a ripple of excitement.

Wilson Asks All to Save

President Woodrow Wilson says that this country is undergoing the greatest crisis in its history. He urges upon all the necessity of saving.

Are you on the tidal wave of prosperity? If you are, conserve some of your resources by depositing them in bank.

Save! Save! Save!

This applies to the business man as well as the laborer.

There is no greater way to save than planning to place a certain amount in the bank regularly.

Diamonds and Hearts."

The graduating class of Bandera High School presented their play, "Diamonds and Hearts," at the school auditorium last Friday night to a capacity house, and it was such a success the public has urged that the play be presented again soon. A new stage has been constructed in the auditorium, with curtains and dressing rooms. Everything was neatly and appropriately arranged for the play and each boy and girl participating carried out their part well under the direction of A. P. Carlton. Between acts music was furnished by Misses Edna Stevens at the piano, Myrn Jeonette Hunter, Pauline Ethridge, Eunice Price and Master Joe Frank Golihart with violins. Prof. A. P. Carlton rendered a violin solo, "Three O' Clock in the Morning," with piano accompaniment. The characters in the play were Misses Mazie Jureczki Edna Stevens, Annie Habenicht, Lora Thalman, Pauline Ethridge, Agatha Pyka, Myra Jennette Hunter, Mabel Thalmann, Messrs. Ellis Krause, Warren Hunter, Howard Eckhart, Claude Krause, and A. P. Carlton, latter appearing as a colored bell boy.

During the second act of the play a large hanging lamp suspended from the ceiling fell to the stage with a crash, but the flame was extinguished promptly before the audience realized the danger and there was not a ripple of excitement.

Have Something Left

Saving money is made easy, if you do the saving, before you do the spending. Make every day your banking day. Deposit a regular amount each week before you make your purchases. Make your deposit and forget it. Do not leave so important a matter to chance. What could be a better motto than just this: "Have Something Left." When you deposit your savings in the First National Bank it earns 4½ per cent interest. We invite you to bank with us.

During the cold weather last week the New Era publishing plant was brought up to a high temperature. It was a common occurrence to have inches long on the inside of the windows, and the mercury was frequently down to zero, and on one occasion it was 4 degrees below zero. Then beginning to cool off on May 24 it was down to 90 degrees, a good story from the pen of Warren Hunter, editor of the Christmas Number of Death." This is a very interesting and thrilling story and will be read with interest by all. In addition to the News Letter we urge you to read the story in order to be sure of getting the installment of it. Call at the Shadow of Death.

Bandera High School will open tomorrow, after a vacation of nine months. The opening was made possible by the re-establishment of the excellent corps of teachers, which is composed of Prof. C. T. Carrington, Principal; Goldsboro, Miss Hattie Fryekburg, Miss Hilda Bamburg and Miss Louise Crawford, and many of the pupils in the school should be present to see this faculty remain together another year, if they can be persuaded to accept the salaries they now hold.

This is the season of the year when road-drags commence to be ready for use in making the annual improvement. We receive her share. Only last week we passed a "show" engaged in dragging roads. There will be no county certificates issued after September 1, 1923.

GREAT BATTLE ON Dan CONCHO PLAINS IN 1875

Rangers Under Captain Roberts Engage in Fight in Which Herman Lehmann Participates

Thomas P. Gillespie, member of Captain Dan Roberts's company of Rangers, gives the following account of the fight on the Concho Plains west of Fort Concho, in which Herman Lehmann narrowly escaped capture by the Rangers:

In August, 1875, while scouting in the upper San Saba valley, we discovered an Indian trail on Scalp Creek, a tributary of the San Saba in Menard county. The trail was comparatively fresh, and indications were that it had been made by a band of twelve or fifteen Indians with a bunch of forty or fifty head of horses. Our command consisted of Captain Roberts, Jim Trout, Jim Hawkins, Ed Seiker, Jim Gillette, Andy Wilson, Henry Matamore, myself and one or two others whose names I have for to go on, but I think those mentioned were all that were present on this ghase. Our horses were in no bad condition for a long pursuit, but there was no alternative and we began the chase without delay. The trail led out across the head of Dry and Rocky creeks to the north part of Menard county and on in the direction of Kickapoo Springs, crossing the Rio Llano west of Ft. Concho and the road about nine miles south of Kickapoo Springs. It was nearly night when we reached this road and our horses being very badly jaded and suffering for water, we left the trail and went to the springs where we remained over night. As many of the Indians had flung their shoes and were lame in consequence, we went to a ranch the next morning and procured our stock after which we resumed the pursuit. Some twelve or fifteen miles above the head of the South Concho we again came upon the trail and, following it to the top of a mountain where the Indians had halted and had removed the [illegible] horses. Just why they should want to pull the shoes from their stock has always been a mystery. Several theories have been advanced by the rangers and frontiersmen but none hold good. These horse shoes were left where they had been pulled off and in addition the Indians had torn two long strips from a blanket and had placed these strips in the form of a cross on the ground, and in this condition we found them. It was about 2 p. m. when we discovered this sign on the mountain, the weather was dreadfully hot but we took up the trail and pushed on as fast as our jaded horses could carry us. We knew from those signs so familiar to a ranger that the Indians could not be far away and that they were moving leisurely along and we hoped to overhaul them before nightfall. We followed the trail, which led in a southwest course, until we came out on the plains after which the trail led due west. About half an hour by sun we came to a pond where the Indians had watered their stock. The water in the horses' tracks was yet muddy, and the grass on the margin where the horses had come out was still wet, showing that we were close at their heels. It being nearly night Captain Roberts said we had better cook supper here and give our horses a brief rest, which we proceeded to do, and after supper we remounted and followed the trail as long as we could see. It becoming too dark to distinguish the trail we lay by until dawn, giving our horses a good rest which they sorely needed. By the time it was light enough to see we were in the saddle and expecting every minute to come in sight of the enemy. We rode at a moderately brisk gait until about 7 o'clock, when Captain Roberts suddenly halted and said: "Boys, I believe I see them." Far ahead in the plain we could see a few dark objects just rising perceptibly, whether they were horsemen or other objects. Unslinging his field glass Roberts got a good view of them and said: "Boys, there they are. They are riding slowly. They have not discovered us yet. Now you fellows close up behind me in single file. The sun is at our backs and by following my directions we can get close on them before they see us."

We were all keen for the fight and the captain's orders were obeyed to a letter. We rode in the [illegible] and were within 600 yards of the Indians before they discovered us. There were eleven of them and as to numbers we were about equally matched. Besides the eleven, there were two riding along at a considerable distance to the left and these two were the first to see us and give the alarm. We broke rank and raised our yell, every man for himself, making full tilt for the savages. The Indians began rounding up the herd and mounting fresh horses and when we got near enough to do execution they scattered and each sought safety in tall running. However, when we got in about 150 yards of them they rallied on a small elevation and opened fire on us. This was evidently for the purpose of giving some of their number time to catch and mount fresh horses. We killed three or four horses and probably killed or wounded an Indian or two before this error broke and ran. We carried six chesters and needle guns and every man in the company was a crack shot. A running fight followed and our men, singly or in pairs, selected their game and put in after them. The Indians scattered in pairs and when our men killed a horse, the rider would hop up behind his comrade and continue the flight. After a run of 500 or 600 yards they brought down one of the horses and as quick as a flash the Indian was up behind his mate and the race continued, until the horse ridden by the two Indians began to lose his wind and began to circle, a maneuver often practiced by the Indians when cornered under like circumstances. The boys had fired at least a dozen shots at these two Indians during this run, but on account of their shields had failed to bring them down. Seeing this circling ruse, Jim Gillette dismounted and with his needle gun took deliberate aim and broke the horse's neck and then sprang back into his saddle and dashed forward alongside with Ed Seiker. When the horse fell, the Indian mounted on behind hit the ground a running, still holding the shield over his back, while the horse in his fall had pinned the other Indian to the ground. The boys dashed together with an imprecation to Gillette threw his pistol on the Indian lying pinned under the horse, and was in the act of shooting him when Ed Seiker shouted: "Don't shoot him! Don't you see that he is a white boy!" Gillette lowered his pistol and as a bare glance showed that the boy was closely held by the body of the horse and, even if foot loose, he could not escape, they hurried on after the fleeing Indian whom they overtook and killed after a race of about 300 yards. After having killed this Indian they carried a short scalp off to get his scalp and to gather up his bow, quiver, shield and other accoutrements worth carrying away as trophies and when they returned to where they had left the boy under the dead horse, he was gone! At this there were puzzled beyond expression. The scene of the fight and the chase was an open plain with nothing to obstruct the view for miles, and from the moment the boy was killed until their return to the spot they had been in full view of the surroundings and the boy could not have gotten away without having seen him start. There were a few scattering mesquites but none large enough to afford concealment. The grass was green and seven or eight inches high and into this he must have crawled off and secreted himself. The search began and in a short time the entire company came up and joined in the search. Every square rod for a mile around was gone over and every bunch and tuft of grass was examined but no boy was found and we gave up the search as hopeless and went away completely mystified as to what became of him.

Some years later I learned that this boy was the captive, Herman Lehmann, who when a child was stolen from his parents in Gillespie county and kept nine years, during which time he became thoroughly Indianized, joined his adopted people in their wars and horse stealing raids, but at length was restored to his mother and became, in the course of time, a good citizen.

In this fight we captured thirty head of horses which we drove to Mason county and delivered to their owners. At the first onset, we crowded the Indians so close that in mounting fresh horses they had to abandon their saddles which we captured, but being old and worthless we cast them aside.

Lenvol Akin and Gordon Knight, are visiting R. H. Lee in San Antonio this week.

Mrs. J. O. Gallant, Misses Vannie Shruptrine, Ida Stevens and Beulah Smith entertained their Sunday School classes Saturday with May Pole parties. The door games, were played until a late hour when each one went to the May Pole and formed a circle where they marched around the pole to music from the church. After this they were asked to each get a partner and play, "Follow the Leader." He took them around the church several times asking them to ring the dish rag and such stunts then let them to a table where cake and punch was served to about 35 children.

Dr. Fowler and family of Bandera, motored to Medina to attend the Church of Christ in Medina Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Trussel and little son, of Kingsville are visiting Mrs. Trussel's sister, Mrs. F. P. Layton.

Mr. and Mr. Henry Adams visited Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Taylor at Camp Verde Sunday.

Johnnie Johnson, Will King and Frank Moffet of Stockdale, are here on a camping and fishing trip.

Mr. Johnston, of Stockdale is here on a visit to his sons, George and J. R. Johnson.

Dr. Morgan, the dentist, will be in Medina Tuesday, May 29, to remain four days.

TUFF TOPICS.

Bob Wheeler and Alva Fuller of San Antonio, are guests of C. F. Wheeler and family.

Ned Adams has purchased a new Ford.

Gus Love of Vanderpool is the guest of Geo. Elam.

Cliff Freeman and Miss Mae Garnett visited Misses Donna and Mona Mayfield Sunday.

Mrs. A. Weed is visiting her sister who is very sick at Fredericksburg.

F. O. Watrous attended court at Bandera.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Clay visited Mrs. J. W. Zumwalt last Sunday.

Quite a crowd of young folks of Tuff attended the picnic at Lima and all reported a fine time and plenty of good things to eat.

Mrs. Bill Mitchell, of San Antonio, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. S. M. Manning.

Mrs. F. O. Watrous, spent Monday night with Mrs. Bill McMahon in Medina.

Mrs. Alfie Fuller who taught a very successful term of school here, will leave soon for Selma, California.

Boyle Bros.'s store has been given a neat coat of paint. Ben Jurczaki wielded the brush.

Mrs. Layton's Class Recital

Arrangements have been made for "presenting Mrs. F. P. Layton's "America for Music" class recital at the Methodist church in this city next Monday night, May 28. The same program presented at Medina a short time ago will be repeated here, with possibly one or two changes. This class, which is composed of Medina boys and girls, will render original compositions, words and music, demonstrating that we have talent that can create music as well as European countries. Mrs. F. P. Layton and Mrs. Henry Lewis, of Medina, "are the only members of the America for Music Society in this part of the country, and the purpose of the recital Monday night is to arouse an interest in the movement and encourage original composition. Everybody invited to attend the recital, which will be given free, and we guarantee you will be well entertained.

Entertainment at Winan's Creek.

Winan's Creek school will close Friday, June 1, and will give an entertainment on Saturday night following. "The Cabbage Hill School" will be presented by the pupils. Admission free. There will also be outdoor amusements in entertaining old and young. Refreshments will be sold and proceeds will go to the school. Everybody invited to come and enjoy themselves. Mrs. A. Meadows, the teacher, has taught a very successful term of school and given general satisfaction.

Mrs. Fannie Farrer Dead.

Mrs. Fannie Farrer died, in great agony at the Farrer ranch Monday afternoon, after swallowing a quantity of carbolic acid. Dr. Butler was hastily summoned, but the deadly acid had done its work before he could get there, and the unfortunate young woman soon passed away.

Before her marriage to Chas. L. Farrer December 28, 1922, deceased was Miss Fannie Clements of San Antonio. She was about twenty years of age, and during her residence here had made friends with many of our people.

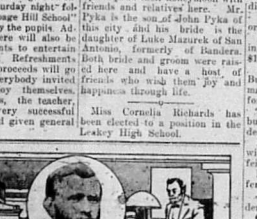
The body was taken to San Antonio for interment where the funeral was held yesterday.

Judge C. R. Corley went to the Farrer ranch Tuesday evening and viewed the remains, and will conduct inquest proceedings this afternoon.

Married Sunday.

P. J. Pyka and Miss Lucille Mazurek were married at San Antonio last Sunday and came up to spend their honeymoon with friends and relatives here. Mr. Pyka is the son of John Pyka of this city and his bride is the daughter of Luke Mazurek of San Antonio, formerly of Bandera. Both bride and groom were raised here and have a host of friends who wish them joy and happiness through life.

Miss Cornelia Richards has been elected to a position in the Leakey High School.



On Sound Basis After the War

Soon after the civil war President Grant put this country on a sound financial basis. On his recommendation congress passed an act "to strengthen public credit," and specie payments were later resumed.

These are prosperous days in this land, and wise people are banking their surplus cash.

Colored Couple Married

A colored couple of this community suddenly decided to get married Monday, being prompted in their decision by grand jury action. Just about the time the ceremony was to be performed Judge Corley was sought, but he was out somewhere, and then a desire was expressed that Judge Mansfield be prevailed upon to tie the knot, but he was out too, and there was need for haste for district court is still in session. Finally the anxious and excited couple found a preacher of their own race and were made man and wife, and the parentage of a little pickininny was legalized.

Installs a New Machine

Tom Gray aims to keep right abreast of the times. He has received a Kennedy burning in and running machine for all bearings for Ford motors, and it is now being installed in his garage in this city. Within a few days he will be enabled to take care of work that heretofore has gone to San Antonio for lack of proper facilities for doing it. Mr. Gray invites the general public to come in and see the new machinery.

Townsite Released.

Bandera townsite has been released from quarantine by Tick Inspector Jack Miles. Mr. Miles informs us that there are no herds in the county yet under the quarantine, but if active dipping is followed the county will soon be cleaned.

Violin Recital.

The pupils of A. P. Carlton, instructor of violin, will appear in recital at the Methodist church, Friday night, May 25th. Admission free. Everybody come.

"Diamonds and Hearts."

So many requests have been made for a repeated presentation of the school class play that it has been decided to again present "Diamonds and Hearts" Friday night, June 1. The play will be given at Wright's Hall.

Medina Graduating Exercises

Monday is the commencement exercises of Medina High School took place. Miss Mattie Mae Newcomer delivered the salutatory, Miss Inez Gilbert gave the valedictory. The graduates were Miss Fay Rees, Burfield Britt, Leslie LeSturgeon, Thomas Reese, Miss Bettye Forrest, Miss Inez Gilbert, Miss Mattie Mae Newcomer, and Miss Ethel Maude Newcomer. Judge A. L. Mansfield presented the diplomas. Rev. M. J. Scott of Bandera made an address to the class. The program was well arranged and carried out in a very pleasing manner. Many pupils rendered a nice program also. The class play at night, "When East Meets West" drew a large crowd. The play and exercises took place at Medina High School Auditorium.

Miss Zona Johnson, who has been teaching at Big Lake, has completed her school work there, and returned home this week.

Have Something Left

Saving money is made easy, if you do the saving before you do the spending. Make every day your banking day. Deposit a regular amount each week before you make your purchases. Make your deposit and forget it. Do not leave so important a matter to chance. What could be a better motto than just this: "Have Something Left." When you deposit your savings in the First National Bank it will earn 4½ per cent interest. We invite you to bank with us.

Henry Kalka vs. Henry Bausch, breach of contract; dismissed at plaintiff's cost.

Gus Bausch vs. G. H. Evans, suit on contract. Verdict for defendant.

John T. Bivins vs. P. O. Love, et al. Agreement.

Liquor Cases.

The past three days have been taken up in district court by getting ready and trying liquor cases. The first to be called for trial was the State vs. Chas. McGill, charged with manufacturing liquor. Every inch of ground was contested by the defense, but a continuance was asked for, then a change of venue was sought, all of which was overruled, and the trial got under way yesterday morning. The jury in this case returned a verdict of guilty. The case of Walter Crane will probably go to trial today.

Baseball Yesterday.

Bandera and Hondo ball teams crossed bats yesterday on the local diamond, and played a lively game. When the smoke of battle cleared away the score stood 16 to 3, in favor of Bandera.

The various committees of the County Fair are to meet in Bandera next Saturday. It is hoped that every committe member will be present, as well as all others who are interested in making the fair a success.

Graduating Exercises

The school auditorium was packed last Friday night by a great throng that came to witness the commencement exercises of Bandera High School. The stage was decorated with flowers and green foliage, and when the curtain was raised the audience beheld the class seated in a semi-circle with Prof. C. T. Carlton and Judge R. H. Burney in the center. A musical selection was rendered by Misses Pauline Ethridge and Myra Jennette Hunter and Messrs. Jimmie Hunter and Roscoe Hayes, after which Miss Edna Stevens, class prophet, accompanied by Miss Edna Stevens at the piano, Miss Johanna Noonan delivered the salutatory, followed by Miss Annie Habenicht, class history; Miss Pauline Ethridge, class statistics; Miss Myra Jennette Hunter, class will; Miss Edna Stevens, class prophecy, and Roscoe Hayes gave the valedictory, all of which was fine and delivered in a most pleasing manner. Judge Burney addressed the class, giving them advice that we feel sure will be followed by the young people now entering upon life's duties. Judge Burney was followed by Prof. C. T. Carlton, the principal, who made a few well received remarks and presented the diplomas to the graduates, after which many beautiful bouquets of flowers were given to each member of the class. The class was composed of Roscoe Hayes, Jimmie Hunter, Johanna Noonan, Annie Habenicht, Edna Stevens, Pauline Ethridge, Myra Jennette Hunter, Lora Thallman, Agatha Pyka, Mazie Jurecski, Mabel Thalmann, Claud Krause, Ellis Krause and Howard Eckhart.

County Buys Tractor

Frank Mansfield last week sold the county a Fordson tractor for a new Waterloo Boy tractor for use on county road work.

The New Era editor spent several hours in Boerne last Saturday on business. The rumor gained currency that we were there with a view to establishing a new paper in Boerne, but that was far from our intention. We would not mind owning the present newspaper there for it is in a good field, but we have a good business in Bandera and do not care to establish a new business in another town. While over there we went around and got acquainted with Judge W. G. Davis, who is editor and proprietor of the Boerne Star, and is assisted by his wife and two sons. We found them a congenial lot and they made us feel perfectly at home during our short stay in Boerne. We also met several of the Boerne business men while there, among them the Messrs. Rittiman, at the Rittiman Optical and Jewelry Co.'s establishment. Mr. Ed Herpel, who has just recently purchased the Jordan Motor Co.'s business; also Messrs. King & Davis real estate agents and several others. And while there we ran up against Tick Inspector Jack Miles, who, as soon as he heard we were from Bandera, insisted on inspecting us for ticks. Come to find out we were not exactly strangers, for we both used to stamp around about San Angelo, and Jack decided that any individual who had grazed on the Concho ranges was immune from ticks and so let us go.

Miss Lois Tobey is the New Era's correspondent at Medina. When our Medina friends have visitors or news items of any kind we would esteem it a favor if they would report the news to Miss Lois at Wm. Hatfield's store.

A wonderful serial story is now running in the Saturday Evening Post, under the title, of "North of 36," written by Emerson Hough. This story is based on data taken from the book, "The Trail Drivers of Texas," compiled and written by J. M. Hunter, editor of the New Era, under direction of Mr. George W. Saunders, president of the Old Time Trail Drivers Association. The first volume of "The Trail Drivers of Texas" was published three years ago, and the second volume is now being printed in this office. It will come from the press the latter part of June.

Donations continue to come in for the fund to be used for the erection of a monument to our soldier boys who gave their lives in the World War. If you have not made your donation yet, you are urged to do so at once in order to expedite matters. Just a dollar or two from every man woman in the county will provide a fund sufficient to purchase a suitable monument.

All matter intended for publication should be sent in not later than Wednesday noon. Items coming in later than that hour may be crowded out.

Reminded of Olden Days.

We are in receipt of the initial number of the La Pryor New Era, just established by Jack Stinebaugh. It is a newsy paper and starts out with a good advertising patronage. Mr. Stinebaugh at one time edited the Bandera Bulletin and has many friends here who wish him success in his new venture.—Bandera New Era.

While I was born in North Texas, my boyhood day were spent in dear old Bandera. It matters not where I may live now how long the period of time may be, Bandera will always be "Home, Swee Home," to me. My grandmother, Mrs. L. J. Welch, sleeps in the Bandera cemetery awaiting the call to come Home where there will be no temptations, no sorrows, and no heartaches! Our little boy, Ned (ten years old last June 20) was born in Bandera. Little wonder that I am a Methodist for the best friend I have ever had, Rev. H. L. Atkins a Methodist preacher from North Carolina, has lived in Bandera for a long number of years. Also in later years, I had the pleasure of working in the ad alley of the San Antonio Light with J. M. Hunter, now editor of the Bandera paper.—La Pryor New Era.

The above names represent the largest handlers of trail cattle and I believe it is safe to say those men handled 75 per cent of the cattle driven from Texas to Northern markets. There are as many more sketches and pictures of men who handled trail herds, but not extensively trail bosses, waddies and you men that took up the industry, stocked large ranches, shipped thousands of cattle to the Indian Territory to fatten; all being eligible to membership in The Old Time Trail Drivers' Association, being old trail drivers or the sons of trail drivers. The regular price of "The Trail Drivers of Texas" sell for $5, a single copy $3. Those who have bought the first book can get the second volume for $2.50. Those wishing one or both volumes please send me check. I will mail first volume at once and the other as soon as off the press. Have storage and help the Old Trail Drivers Association immensely, as they are running on one cylinder. These two books all a lost link in Texas history. The first volume has been used extensively by Emerson Hough in the Saturday Evening Post in a series of stories on account of its authenticity.

A LOST CHILD.

As Texans we cherish no proud-er boast than the purity of Texan womanhood. These were the virtues of the early pioneers, and no praise of Texas heroines would be complete without reference to the brave wives, mothers and daughters of those who erected homes along the borders of Texas and braved all the dangers incident to frontier life. During the early days in Texas there was always war and rumors of war—war that filled the breast of man with exultation, and woman's eyes with tears, and oh, the bitterness of it all for Texan mothers, wives and sweethearts—always the anguish at parting and seldom the joy of home-coming.

No trail of blood along the Texas border appeals more tauchingly to the soul than that left by the little child of Mr. and Mrs. William Spraggins near Comanche nearly forty years ago.

Mrs. Spraggins was a beautiful woman and was endowed with all those noble traits of character that were natural attributes of Texas womanhood forty years ago. The courage of the young wife and her devotion to her husband which prompted her to follow him to the extreme border of Texas in order that they might erect a home and enjoy the fruits of long years of toil and virtuous life among the commendable characteristics of Texas motherhood and will always excite the admiration of the world, while the intense sorrow of this brave woman will enlist the sympathies of mankind. Here is the story of her grief is told.

Mr. and Mrs. Spraggins settled in Comanche county, then a border region, early in the 70's and from a letter in the paper dated October 18, 1879, we copy the following pathetic story of the lost child.

"The most pitiful and heartrending affair that has occurred in this county took place just a few miles south of town on the Rising Star road on last Wednesday morning (October 15, 1879) Mrs. Spraggins went to the spring several hundred yards distant, leaving her little child, only 21 months old, at the house. Upon her return to the house she missed the child and could not find it. She searched everywhere but in vain. The neighborhood was aroused, and the fact was soon made evident by the little footprints in the path that the child had attempted to follow the mother to a spring and had become bewildered and lost. The whole neighborhood became aroused and a thorough search commenced. Again was the trail lost and found and every moment they expected to find the little fugitive but were doomed to disappointment. Night fell over the scene and the last sign of the child was found four miles from home. By this time the mother was almost frantic with grief, and her agony was heart rending. At night fires were built and early dawn the search was resumed with renewed vigor. The morning past and the sun hung low in the west, but no new signs of the child were discovered. A messenger was sent to town for reinforcements. Some fifty or sixty men hied to the scene. A search was kept up all night by means of numerous torches, but with the same fruitless result. But the next morning some three hundred resolute men had gathered and a single line was formed nearly a mile in length and all day long the country was scoured everywhere. It was in the bounds of reason to suppose that the child had wandered. 'Hope deferred maketh the heart sick,' and many gave up all hope of finding the child alive. Many supposed it had fallen prey to the numerous wolves, bears and cougers which abound in that country, and were about to give up the search when a piece of the dress was found hanging to a bush, far up the side of a rugged mountain, and fully five miles from home. This gave the weary hunters new encouragement and vigor. But again darkness interfered and the men camped in small groups all over the country. One man lay in twenty feet of the child's dead body, where early the next morning (Saturday) it was found dead on the mountain side. The body was found lying on its face, and a bush was caught in the back of its dress. Its little feet were swollen to twice their normal size. Thorns had pierced its body and its breast, face and legs were literally scratched to pieces. No one can know or even imagine the suffering and misery the little wanderer endured. The child had been walking but four days months and had not been gone from its mother's breast. It would appear impossible to the casual observer for a child to travel over the rough mountains and through thickets that this one did. Death, no doubt, was a sweet relief to the little wanderer's terrible suffering."

Upon a lone mountain side in Comanche county today stands a rude monument. It is almost hidden from view by the scrub brush and vine growth, and is free from the desecrating hand of vandalism. Long years ago, while in regard of the lost babe the heart-crushing anguish of the mother were the theme in every frontier cabin home, sympathizing hands fashioned the rude memorial and set over where—and at the little babe was found. It is a crude memorial, erected by hands whose sentiment is to weapons of war than the chisel or trowel, but it marks the place on that lone hillside where terminated a pathetic trail of blood—where perished a mother's joy and a father's hope.

Giving Good Service.

The report that is being circulated to the effect that we have discontinued our morning auto service to San Antonio is false and without foundation in fact. This car, as well as our mail car, makes regular schedule trips to San Antonio daily, except Sunday, and on that day it leaves Bandera at 3 p. m. and arrives at San Antonio at 5:30. Our patrons find this morning car very convenient, in that they are enabled to go to San Antonio, transact their business, and come back home on the return schedule. We have put comfortable Dodge cars on our line to San Antonio, and are striving to give the public only high class, obliging service, and on this basis we solicit your continued good will and patronage.

NEWS STORY.
Ford Motor Company
Detroit, Mich.

Daily production of Ford Cars and Trucks went over the 6,600 mark on Wednesday, May 9, it is just announced through Ford News.

The production on that day was 6,615, exceeding by 25 the last highest day, Friday May 4, when a record of 6,590 was established.

The twenty-eight assembly plants of the Ford Motor Company throughout the country operate on an eight-hour day basis, and the turning out of 6,615 completed Cars and trucks in a day means they were run off the assembly lines at the rate of one every four seconds.

To make this enormous output factoring facilities of the company, embracing the great Highland Par and River Rouge plants and other factory units, are operating on a twenty-four hour day of three eight-hour working shifts employing more than 100,000 men.

Ford high quality standards are consistently maintained in every operation entering into the construction of those popular cars.

Prof. Carlton's Class Recital.

The recital given by Prof. A. P. Carlton's violin class at the Methodist church last Friday night was an event that was most enjoyable and pleasing in every way. A large crowd was present to hear this recital, the musical numbers consisting of violin solos, duets, and selections played in concert by the class. Miss Donna Frychburg was the piano accompanist. Mrs. Hollie Frychburg gave an interesting reading. Musical numbers were given by Miss Eunice Price, Miss Myra Jo Price, Miss Mattie Hunter, Jr., Rhea Mansfield, Miss Pauline Ethridge, Miss Emily Ruth Rambie, Joe Frank Goldbart, A. P. Carlton, Jr.

The pupils participating have been receiving instruction less than six months, but everyone of them carried out their part satisfactorily and to the credit of their instructor. Mr. Carlton's class has greatly increased in the past few days and now numbers eighteen pupils.

Mrs. Layton's Class Recital

At the Methodist church last Monday night Mrs. F. P. Layton presented her pupils in recital for Music class in recital with a long and very interesting program of piano solos, duets, readings, and songs. Every number on the program was good, and every number with but one or two exceptions, was an original composition by Mrs. Layton or one of her pupils. Mrs. Layton was assisted in her work by Mrs. Henry Lewis of Medina. The class is composed of about twenty-five pupils some of them being quite small, but the expert manner in which they rendered their selections showed skillful training on the part of their teacher. In the musical numbers Bandera county was boosted right to the front, Mrs. Layton's Celebration was a very touching feature of the program, and was given here by request. The Smile Song, the Radio Song, The Farmer Man, the Mistakes of Pa and Ma, the Railroad Song, as well as all of the other numbers received a hearty applause, and Bandera folks voiced their appreciation of the pleasing entertainment by enthusiastically praising Mrs. Layton and her co-workers for the interest that is being aroused in the "America for Music" movement that is growing.

Bandera County Fair

Preparations are being made for the Bandera County Fair to be held in Bandera August 2, 3, 4 and 5. Reports are coming in from different communities that the people are planning to exhibit and many people are willing and ready to contribute in this way. It is hoped that everybody will be present and the price of which will be only fifty cents.

Among the features of the County Fair will be a basket dinner on Bandera County Fair. In view of the fact that no admission will be charged at the gate it is expected many people are willing and ready to contribute in this way. It is hoped that everybody will be present and the price of which will be only fifty cents.

Within a few days the premium list will be issued. Efforts are being made to raise sufficient funds to defray expenses of the Bandera County Fair. In view of the fact that no admission will be charged at the gate it is expected many people are willing and ready to contribute in this way. It is hoped that everybody will be present and the price of which will be only fifty cents.

"There is a Reason"

A CHRISTMAS IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH

LIFE STORY OF CARLOS DeFOE

Written By John Warren Hunter

I was born near Columbia, Tennessee, December 25, 1846. By inheritance on my mother's side, my parents were wealthy, owned a number of slaves and being an only child, I was the pet of the household. On Christmas Eve, 1859, the evening preceding my sixth birthday, a great tragedy, incited by the demon Drink, was enacted in our once happy home, by which I was deprived of the guardianship of a father and the sweet and tender care of a mother. On the following day, Christmas Day, I saw them laid to rest in the same grave, and two days later, I was torn from the arms of my only friend, the faithful old black mammy, and spirited away to St. Louis, Missouri, where I was placed in a school for boys and where I experienced only the kindest treatment at the hands of the Catholic Fathers and Sisters who had me in charge altho' during my entire stay I was never permitted to appear outside the walls that enclosed the grounds and buildings and on no occasion was I allowed to be present at any public function held in the school auditorium or elsewhere. Before leaving this school I was told by one of the Sisters to whom I had formed a strong attachment that those in whose care I had been placed, had been instructed to look after me with the utmost care and vigilance, and to see that my every reasonable want was supplied. When I asked her why they took such pains to do so and why they did not take me home she looked pityingly in my face and replied: "Alas poor child! Perhaps some day, you may be taken home."

I remained in this school two years at the end of which time, or thereabouts, a man came to the convent late one evening and called for me. He was a gentleman of pleasing address, stately bearing and adorned the utmost kindness and solicitude for my well-being. He represented himself as being my uncle, a brother to my father, one by the way, I had never before heard mentioned and stated that no had come to take me home. He further stated that he had to make a long journey to San Antonio, Texas, and probably to Santa Fe, and that I should accompany him and on his return he could take me to my home in Tennessee. I was accompanied by a fine appearing woman when I presented as his wife, and by whom I afterward became greatly attached. Arrangements were soon made and I was ready for the journey. My so-called Uncle had purchased a good stout ambulance and a pair of large mules, and had supplied himself with arms, ammunition and camp equippage, as if anticipating a long overland journey. It was late in the night when we drove away from the convent that had afforded me shelter and pitiless care so long, but hope and anticipation dried my childish tears on parting with my teachers; and we set forth, and as we drove through the gates I remember that the glow of the street lamps seemed never so brilliant as on that night.

I was put to bed in the rear of the ambulance and told to keep quiet, as we were to sleep, where-in I reluctantly obeyed as to quietude, but the night was far spent before drowsiness overcame my senses. We lay by next day during which I learned that I was not to ask questions about the folks at home, since I would receive all desired information when we reached Tennessee, and during our journey I must not have any conversation with strangers, nor allow unknown persons to question me, but I consoled myself with a thought that I was to go home. The first three days out we traveled only by night, and instead of going to San Antonio, we went to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, which place we reached after a long journey. I do not remember how long we remained in Leavenworth; I only remember that my self-styled uncle and aunt seldom went abroad and that I was kept under close surveillance. I recall the fact that one evening late we packed our belongings and after nightfall drove several miles out on a highway where early next morning we fell in with a large train of wagons laden with merchandise and bound for Santa Fe. The journey was long and according to my recollection we were on the road several weeks. When we reached Santa Fe, I was in a new world, I was allowed greater liberty and there were very few Americans there at that time, and I was permitted to play with the Mexican boys.

A few days after our arrival, a fine looking Mexican officer and his wife, a handsome woman, another than Senora Guadalupe Ortiz moved to be. They had a son, Pablo Ortiz, a youth of about my own age, and from the day of arrival in Hermosillo, we became as brothers and remained steadfast to each other's interests for many years. For the ensuing six years we attended the same school, engaged in the same sports and when not in school each day was rounded out with a full round of pleasures among the respectable youths of Hermosillo. Having finished the prescribed course of study in the city of Hermosillo, we were sent to a college in San Luis Potosi where we remained two years, after which we were admitted into the National Military College, City of Mexico, where owing to the war then raging between the Liberals and Conservadores, our stay was brief. My foster-father, Colonel Ortiz, was ever loyal to the best interest of Benito Juarez and a staunch supporter of the cause of the Liberals party. During the three years of strife between the Liberals and Conservatives he had been actively engaged in camp and field and when the decisive battle approached and in response to the call of Juarez, appealing to every patriotic Mexicans to rally to the bleeding country, in company with thirty-six cadets we left the College Militar and repaired to headquarters of the Liberal army. This was early in December, 1859, and on the 23rd of that month we arrived at Calpulpam the great battle in which the Conservative army under General Miramon was completely overthrown. Colonel Ortiz was borne from the field desperately wounded and was never again capable of rendering military service. Two days after the battle of Calpulpam, President Juarez in company with Generals Ortega and Zaragosa, visited my foster-father and expressed his regrets in that the nation could ill afford to lose the services of so good a soldier. "No serious loss" said Col. Ortiz I have yet two sons to give to my country," pointing to Pablo and myself. This was my first introduction to Benito Juarez, the Washington of Mexico.

We envoyed our afflicted parent to Tacubaya, near the City of Mexico, and remained by his side until the following February when he had recovered sufficiently to undertake the long journey to our home in Hermosillo, where we remained until January, 1862. Meantime rumors of a great war against Mexico had reached the people of that remote corner of Republic; England, France and Spain had formed an alliance, their combined fleets were approaching our shores, and the days of Juarez again rang out through the nations, calling the sons of Mexico to rally to the national defense. Although an American by birth, I was a Mexican in language, custom and religion, and fully imbibed my foster-father's spirit of patriotism; I had mastered the Spanish language, had formed the strongest attachments for the Mexicans and their customs; in fact I was a Mexican in every respect, save by birth. And as such I could not resist the call to arms.

Three of us, my foster-brother Pablo, and his cousin Juan Ortiz enlisted in Captain Antonio Villegas' company and marched to the City of Durango, where we remained on duty until the reorganization of the Liberal army the following November. Eleven thousand men had responded to their country's call and were impatient to meet the foreign invader.

In December Vera Cruz was occupied by the allied forces of [illegible] and [illegible] Spain withdrew from the unholy alliance, leaving Napoleon III. aided by Mexican traitors, to prosecute the war against the independence of Mexico. Our regiment was assigned to the Eastern Division and as far as I recall it was to the first point of attack. We were ordered to that locality with all dispatch. On arriving we found that the city was being strongly fortified and within its walls were gathered the flower of the Mexican army, twenty-five thousand strong under command of Gonzales Ortega. The French General Forey with 30,000 veterans soldiers of the French army aided by over 3,000 traitorous Mexicans under Marquez sat down before the city and began a siege which lasted 62 days during which time heavy firing never ceased day nor night. During a greater part of the siege, the command to which we belonged was placed under General Berrizobal who was assigned to the defense of Fort San Xavier, and in this division there was a regiment commanded by Colonel Hernando Smith, an American. I had met this American on divers occasions while in the line of duty, but for some cause I had no desire to cultivate his acquaintance; I had rather avoided him, as I did Colonel Foster, another American who commanded a regiment of Zapadores. The siege had reduced Ortega's army to the last stage of endurance and several troops were on the verge of starvation. One evening, some three or four days before the final surrender, Colonel Smith being an officer of the day, approached me during the lull in the firing from the bastion at which my company was stationed and after giving certain orders of minor importance, turned to me and asked; "Are you not an American?" "Yes," by birth, Sir," said I. Continuing he said: "I would be pleased to have you call at my quarters when you find it convenient to do so; from your captain I have learned something of your antecedents; I recognized you as one of my countrymen shortly after the beginning of the siege, and your bearing during the bayonet charge on the 4th at San Augustin, directly under the eyes of Colonel Foster, another of your countrymen, has been most favorably mentioned to Gen. Ortega. You are from Columbia, Tennessee, and your name is not DeFoe. Your people have hunted the world over for you. But enough for the present; report at my quarters as early as possible."

THIS IS ONE OF THE BEST OF THE BIG COMEDIES THAT WAS LATELY SHOWN AT THE EMPIRE THEATER. DO NOT MISS THIS, THE FIRST BIG PICTURE THIS YEAR.

BANDERA THEATER

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Weed were here from Medina Monday.

Bill McMahon was among the visitors in the city last week from Medina.

Mrs. Ed Hutto spent several days last week with friends and relatives in San Antonio.

Q. C. Hodges, of Pipe Creek, paid this office an appreciated visit on Thursday.

Mrs. Frank Billings and little son have returned from a visit to her parents at Beasley, Texas.

Jake Short has returned from San Antonio, where he graduated last week at Brackenridge High School.

Edward B. Posteff, who holds a position as cashier with Swift & Co., at San Antonio, spent last week with homefolks here.

Ed Baffo this week purchased a nice bunch of high grade sheep from Turner Bourne, paying $6.00 for ewes and $5 a head for wethers.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hayes left Monday for their home at Hondo, after a pleasant visit to Mr. and Mrs. Hayes' parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hayes.

The Bandera Theater will exhibit moving pictures regularly every Saturday night and every other Friday night. The usual Tuesday night program has been discontinued.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Fries have the thanks of the New Era family for a generous supply of excellent blackberries brought in last Saturday.

J. A. Head returned yesterday from Laredo, Texas, where he spent a week with his daughters, Mrs. Brice. He reports a delightful visit. Judge Black and Mrs. D. left on a trip.

James Cox will open his new hall Saturday night, June 9, with a grand ball. A negro jazz band will furnish the music. All are invited to the grand opening.

Veteran Amasa Clark and daughter, Mrs. Bessie Schmidtke, were visitors at this office Friday, and brought us some excellent blackberries from their patch.

Dr. Dixie B. Tucker, who is here in the interest of the Near East Relief work, will lecture at the Methodist church next Sunday morning. She brings a message which you should hear.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Postert have received word from their son, George Postert in Montana, stating that a baby girl arrived at his home recently. The young man has been christened Gladys Etta.

Mr. and Mrs. John McMahon and children were here from Medina Monday to attend Mrs. Dayton's class recital. Mr. and Mrs. McMahon paid the New Era office a visit while in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Walker and little son were here from San Antonio Tuesday, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stevens. They were on their way to Dallas on a visit.

Miss Margaret Montague has been seriously ill for several weeks and has been receiving medical treatment in San Antonio. She was brought home last week, and is somewhat improved. Her many friends hope she will soon recover.

Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Rappold, accompanied by Mrs. Julius Schurek, went to Eagle Pass Monday, returning Tuesday. They went on a visit to Dr. Rappold's daughter, who is in a convent there.

Friends in this city of Miss Ruby Lewis received invitations to attend the commencement exercises of Westmoorland College in San Antonio. Miss Ruby was among the graduates of that institution.

Messrs. Bob and Brice Mayfield, a brace of fiddling fiddlers who can yank more melody from a fiddle than Nero ever dreamed of, were among the Medina folks who came down to attend Mrs. Layton's class recital Monday night.

Buck Weaver, who failed to appear here when his case in district court was called last week, is reported to be in toils at San Antonio on a liquor charge. W. B. Crane, also under indictment in this county, and whose case was continued last Thursday, faces a like charge in Federal court at San Antonio.

The B. Y. P. U. had charge of the services at the Baptist church Sunday night, and rendered an interesting program along missionary lines. Miss Eunice Price gave a violin solo, Ernest Boultware sang a solo, and was accompanied by Mrs. Hattie Jones with violin and Miss Evelyn Price piano.

Mrs. M. D. Kelly, of Medina, attended the recital Monday night.

J. G. Richards, who lives near Medina, was a visitor Saturday.

Bays Atkins and Clarence Curl were here from San Antonio Sunday.

The building occupied by R. E. Hunt's vinshop has been neatly painted by Ben Jurecski.

Mrs. Nellie Charmichael, of Mooringsport, La., is here on a visit to friends and relatives.

Mrs. Stanley Lewis, of Sabinal, visited her mother, Mrs. H. H. Carmichael of this city this week.

Miss Clara Mansfield, who has been teaching in the High School at Pleasanton, has returned home.

E. T. Peters, who is drilling for oil in Medina county came home to spend Sunday with his family.

Miss Sonia Tobar, of Medina, was the guest of Miss Myra Jeanette Hunter Sunday and Monday.

Miss Jennie Kirkland, of Medina, was in the city Monday and attended the recital at the Methodist church that night.

Mrs. Abbey Leinweber and infant, of Hunt, is spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Harper.

Miss Tennessee Whitehead, of Medina, was a visitor in the city Monday. She informs us that she will teach the Wallace Creek school next term.

Miss Leo Price leaves Sunday for San Marcos to attend the summer normal there. Miss Leo has accepted a school in Jim Wells county.

J. H. Bruce has purchased a new Ford, the sale being made by Boys Atkins, of the Clifton George Motor Co., at San Antonio.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown, who live on North Prong of the Medina river, were visitors in the city Monday, and to attend Mrs. Layton's class recital.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rees and children were here from Medina Monday to attend Mrs. Layton's class recital. They visited New Era sanctum while in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Callaham were here Saturday from their home at Pipe Creek. They are interested in the success of the Bandera County Fair, and came up to attend the committee meeting.

M. R. Thalmann spent a day or wo at Tarpley last week in the interest of the Bandera County Fair. He found considerable enthusiasm there, and those Tarpley people are going to help make the fair all it should be by bringing a fine exhibit this year.

Wallace H. Brodie and Miss Helen Bering, of San Antonio, were married at the Methodist church last Thursday morning, Rev. E. A. Potts officiating. The young couple were accompanied by the bride's sister, Mrs. Pyne. After spending a while here the newly married pair will return to San Antonio, where they will make their home.

The play, "Diamonds and Hearts," presented by the graduating class just previous to the closing of Bandera High School term will be given again Friday night, June 1, at the Wright Hall. Admission 25c and 35c. This play met with such success before that quite a number have requested that it be given again and its presentation tomorrow night is in response to these requests.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Scheele and family went to Comfort last Friday to attend the funeral of Mr. Scheele's father, Mr. Henry Scheele, who died at his home there on Thursday. He leaves a wife and six sons, Albert and Otto of Bandera, Rudolph and Ernest of Bandera, Bruno and Maxwell and Hilmar, of San Raub. The New Era joins in extending condolence and sympathy to the bereaved family.

Miss Laura Duffy has given possession of the Riverside Inn to the Misses Fuller, who purchased the property a few weeks ago. Miss Duffy will spend a few days among friends here and then go to San Antonio for a protracted sojourn. Her plans are not fully made, but we are sure she will not get far away from her life-long friends and that she will often visit the old home town. The furniture and household effects of the Misses Fuller were moved up from San Antonio last week. They plan to make many improvements at the Riverside, refurnishing and renovating this popular hostelry and will build additional cottages for summer guests, we understand. The New Era welcomes them to Bandera.

John Saathoff Dead.

John Saathoff, a well known citizen of this county, died last Tuesday at Hondo after a few days illness, and was buried at Quihi yesterday afternoon. Deceased was born June 14, 1861, in Medina county, and had resided in Medina and Bandera counties all of his life. He was a man of good reputation and liked by all who knew him, honest and upright in all of his dealings, and in his passing the county loses a good citizen and loyal friend. Mr. Saathoff is survived by five brothers, M. L. Saathoff of Tarpley, Henry Saathoff of Bandera, Jacob Saathoff of Quihi, William Saathoff of Hondo, and Schweers Saathoff of Quihi. Our sympathies extended to the bereaved relatives.

Harvesting Oats.

The harvesting of the oat crop is well under way, and in a few days the hum of the thresher will be heard in the land. While the oat crop this season will not number as many bushels per acre as was at first promised, the grain is heavy and of excellent grade.

Getting Out Fair Catalogue.

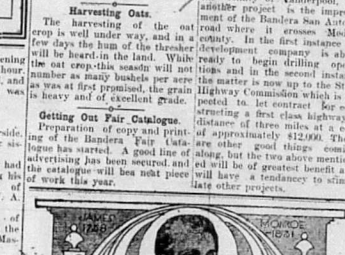
Preparation of copy and printing of the Bandera Fair Catalogue has begun. A good line of advertising has been secured, and the catalogue will be a neat piece of work this year.

Miss Ruby Lewis Married.

Miss Ruby Lewis, a former Bandera girl, was married to Pete Jones of Sabinal last Sunday night, the wedding taking place in San Antonio. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Lewis and was raised here where she has a host of friends who wish her much happiness. The groom is an energetic young business man of Sabinal. The New Era joins in congratulations and best wishes.

Good Things in Store.

The future holds several good things for Bandera, one or two of which are about to happen. We refer to the oil development project soon to be undertaken by the Humble Oil and Refining Co. in the vicinity of Vanderpool, and another project is the improvement of the Bandera San Antonio road where it crosses Medina county. In the first instance the development company is about ready to begin drilling operations and in the second instance the matter is now up to the State Highway commission which is expected to let contract for constructing a first class highway a distance of three miles at a cost of approximately $12,000. There are other good things coming along, but the two above mention will be of greatest benefit and will have a tendancy to stimulate other projects.



Monroe, Banker And Diplomat

Besides fathering the famous doctrine that bears his name, President James Monroe always preached conservation by banking. His keenness made the Louisiana purchase possible.

Every great man says that banking is the bulwark of this country.

Every business man, every man, every woman, should have a bank account.

In 1869 we started in business in a small way. Our business has increased with leaps and bounds and we are now probably the largest retail store in Texas. Nearly 50 years without a failure.

"There is a Reason"

Joe G. Montague leaves this week for Fort Stockton, where he will engage in the practice of law. It is with much regret that we chronicle this bit of news, for Joe has always been known and likes Joe Montague. He was born and raised in this town, and for several years has success-fully practiced law here. He is seeking a broader field in which to follow his chosen profession, and Fort Stockton offers that field. Some years ago his brother, Brian Montague, went to Alpine and has built up a good law practice and is now district attorney out there. While realizing our great loss and regretting the departure of this excellent citizen and model young man,everybody wishes Joe the best of success and a glorious career in West Texas.

Dr. Dixie B. Tucker, who working in the interest of the near East Relief, under direction of the United States Government, lectured at the Methodist church Sunday morning, at the St. Joseph's School auditorium Sunday afternoon, and at Medina Sunday night. Her mission is to solicit donations of cash, old clothing, corn, cotton, wool, and such lines as will provide food and raiment for the hungry, naked people of the Near East, where our government has taken charge of the relief work. In the undertaking, she says, the work is progressing satisfactorily but much is needed. A system of industrial education has been inaugurated and even young children are being taught to become self-supporting. Mrs. Tucker, informed us that she had recently secured eight carloads of supplies, which the railroads transport free, and that she is meeting with a generous response everywhere she goes.

All matter intended for publication should be sent in not later than Wednesday noon. Items coming in later than that hour may be crowded out.

J. H. Whitmore writes: "I am sending you $1.50 for which please send me the New Era for one year. I want to keep up with Bandera county news as my home is up there. My address is 1117 Capitol Avenue, San Antonio."

The San Marcos Record reports that Mr. George Harper and family, of Utopia, have moved to that city.

They Say Lloyd Deserves Place in Hall of Fame for "Grandma's Boy."

"Grandma's Boy" is Harold Lloyd's newest comedy in 5 parts, and his most ambitious attempt for Associational Exhibitors, comes to the Bandera Theater June 15. It is the comedy that Bob Sherwood in "Life," said should vote for Lloyd "a place in room and bath in the Hall of Fame."

The story, which is by Hal Roach, Sam Taylor and Ted Wilde, has for its theme a subject, as serious as the regeneration of a coward, but its seriousness adds to rather than detracts from the fun.

Lloyd is the Boy, who, all his One day, after his weakness has been grinned at by Ann Hamilton driven very forcibly home to him, and he is filled with shame, his little old-fashioned grandma tells him a marvellous story of how his grandfather, who had distinguished himself in the Civil War, overcame his cowardice with the aid of a charm given him by a gypsy.

Grandma gives the Boy the charm, and what he does then is too good to tell. Suffice to say the Boy finds that courage is a matter of self confidence and he comes out on top.

The cast in support of Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy" presents Mildred Davis as the Girl, Anna Townsend as the Grandmother, Mrs. Dickenson as the rival, Dick Sutherland as the Rolling Stone, and Noah Young as the Sheriff. Fred NewMeyer and Sam Taylor, the titles are by H. M. Walker.

Bandera Boy Died.

Clarence Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brown of this city died suddenly at his home Wednesday night of last week and was buried Thursday afternoon, the funeral being conducted by Rev. M. J. Scott. The young man had been in ill health for several months, but during the past few weeks seemed to be getting better. He was about 25 years of age and was well liked by all who knew him. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

"Diamonds and Hearts."

The play, "Diamonds and Hearts," presented by the Bandera High School graduates in a return engagement at the Wright last Friday and Friday night, drew a fair-sized crowd, and was enjoyed by all who attended. The girls and boys carried out their parts in a pleasing manner, and some say the play was better than the first time it was presented.

Protracted Meeting at Medina

Beginning Friday night, June 15, Evangelist Fry and Nobles will hold a protracted meeting at the Church of Christ in Medina to which everybody is invited. These brethren conducted a good meeting there last summer, so they are not strangers in the community. Everybody invited to attend the meeting.

PUBLIC HAULING.

I am now prepared to do your hauling to and from San Antonio or anywhere else. Let me figure with you.—Rudolph Scheele, Bandera.

Spend your cash at H. L. Mansfield's and get some of that genuine Aluminumware that is being given with cash purchases. Ask for tickets.

Sam H. Weaver, formerly of this county, died at London, a few days days ago. Mr. Weaver had lived in Kimble county many years and was a substantial ranchman and farmer near London.

L. Hicks was over from Tarpley Monday with wool for the warehouse.

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Hocker and little daughter, of San Antonio, were guests at the Riverside Inn Monday. Mr. Hocker informs us that he will bring his family here soon for a camping on the Medina river.

M. L. Saathoff, the progressive Tarpley merchant, was a visitor in the city last Thursday and favored the New Era with a call. Colonel Saathoff says the bridge on Commissioners Creek near Tarpley is finished except the approaches, and it is desired that the county aid in completing the work. The bridge was built by the people of that community and cost in the neighborhood of $600.

A CHRISTMAS IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH

LIFE STORY OF CARLOS DePOE

I felt somewhat alarmed at the Colonel's strange request; his words were indeed a revelation, and prompted more by curiosity than desire, I decided to comply but before I found opportunity to visit his quarters, the city was surrendered into the hands of the victorious French and when I next saw Colonel Smith he was a prisoner and with Colonel Foster and other officers of General Ortega's army, were being marched out of the fallen city on their way to Vera Cruz. Immediately after the fall of Puebla the French General issued his proclamation offering full pardon and release to all persons who would subscribe to an oath, binding themselves to take no further part in the war against the French and to this obligation many, subscribed and were set at liberty, but I am proud to say that not one of my regiment yielded to the tempter, and as a consequence, we were started under strong guard for Orizaba. The morning we left Puebla, I met Pablo Ortiz began planning for our escape. Juan Ortiz had been left behind on account of severe wounds received in action, but with our escape he would join us, as others of our comrades who were most reliable when placed under heavy difficulties. The second night and while in camp the opportunity came and we made a break for liberty. The guards fired upon us wounding Pablo, who with a number of others, while I and two of my comrades, succeeded in making our escape. This occurred near a little village known as Santa Rita, and although foot sore and weary from the long day's march on foot, we steered our course away from the line of main travel and a little before sunrise we came to a little rancho where we were given food and shelter. Here we were told that the French occupied all the principal towns in that region and commanded the public highways but seldom penetrated the remote districts. We also learned that there were no Mexican forces nearer than the City of Mexico, other than small bands of Guerrilleros that infested the mountain districts and kept up a predatory warfare against the invaders.

We remained in concealment at this ranchito three days enjoying the generous hospitality of these poor but patriotic Mexicans, and renewing our physical strength for the dangerous duties before us, and finding it impossible to reach the army at the national capital, we decided to join the Guerrilleros. We were told of a Captain Pechuca, a warrior whose name had become a terror to the French around Vera Cruz, Jalpa and Orizaba, and who with a mere handful of brave, fearless riders had inflicted great damage to the enemy by destroying provision trains and commissary stores. We were piloted to the lair of this patriot, whom we found to be like the nation's president, Benito Juarez, a full blood Indian, and endowed with all the high qualities for necessary leadership. He received us kindly, armed and mounted us, and we participated afterwards in many of his raids and a number of desperate engagements.

Nearly every town in the states of Vera Cruz and Tamaulipas boasted of its Guerrillero leader, and every road traveled by the French ranchman or patriot was by these ubiquitous warriors. The French cavalry were powerless to check their inroads and required an army to guard a supply train while passing from Vera Cruz to Puebla. "We will fight them after the manner of their instructors," said General Forey "We will make of it a case of diamond cut diamond; we will attend to those freebooters who seldom fight in the open but attack when least expected, destroying our trains, and ladening with booty his themselves to the mountains; we will organize the Contraguerilleros." Such was the reasoning, such was the conclusion of the French commander, and as a result, some nine hundred or one thousand men of all nationalities were enlisted in this band of thieves and murderers, Karatry a French officer, and chronicler of events during the war of the French Intervention, says of these recruits, "There was the sailor, weary of sea-faring life; the negro driver from Habana, ruined by destruction of his sugar crops; the gambler convicted, but recently escaped from Hogduras; the plainter from Louisiana, who had fled to Tankee; negroes, fillibuster refugees from Orlands, but the greater number were Mexicans, traitors to their own country and enemies to God These miserable dregs—poor humble Mexicans whose only offending was the love of country, and who, with arms in their hands were forced to the rigors and hardships of war, wandering through deserts, mountains and forest, garrisoned in hamlets, villages and cities, always fighting for the integrity and liberties of their country—these were the victims of Dupin."

Dupin was a soldier of fortune; he had served in China, Algeria, and other countries and when given the command, with the title of general of guerrilleros; his first act was the issuance of a proclamation announcing that all men of whatsoever nationality, who should be taken with arms in their hands, waging war against the Imperial forces of France, would be treated as pirates—in other words to be shot. The Guerrilleros accepted the challenge; there was no alternative, and from that date until the United States forced Napoleon to withdraw his troops from Mexico, and even up to the time when the Austrian Usurper paid the penalty of his usurpation, there was no quarter asked nor given on either side. With torch and dagger Dupin and his legion of adventurers carried death and desolation through the richest portion of southern Mexico, and their brutalities stand on record without a parallel in American history. On one occasion they attacked the town of Tlalisaya, and defeated the Juaristas, who retreated in the suburbs. Dupin established himself at the residence of Don Jose Villegas, a wealthy patriot, and Alcalde of the town. He was ordered to prepare a feast for four hundred men and to furnish forage for as many horses, and the order was complied with—this information that if these demands were not complied with within two hours the Senor would be taken out and shot. The Senor summoned the leading men of the village, explained the situation and in short time the requirements of the inhuman Dupin were met. A sumptuous feast was spread before the demon incarnate and his band and when the meal had been finished, and while regaling himself with cigars furnished by his unwilling host, Dupin pointed to a large tree in the front yard and said to Senor Villegas in a smiling and most suave manner, as if in jest: "I want to thank you, Senor, for your elegant hospitality, for your fine wine and cigars and as further expression of my profound gratitude, I shall have you hanged to that tree!" Senor Villegas begged for his life; his wife and little children prostrated themselves before the monster and with tears and lamentations pleaded for the life of the husband and father, but in vain. He pleaded with fiendish delight over the calamity he had brought upon them. Senor Villegas was pinioned and hanged, and his grief-stricken family could only stand helplessly by and witness his death struggle as he slowly suffocated. The home and forty others was then set on fire and burned; the only offence alleged against these people being that of having befriended Pechuca's Guerilleros.. Two days after this fatal occurrence, the twelve-year son of Senor Villegas escaped from camp in the mountains and in giving the details of the horrible outrage, he informed me that certain Alcalde Ramirez had taken an active part in the execution of his father and rejoiced exceedingly over his death.

What wonder that it was possible that Americans—my own country-men—could be as cruel and perfidious as Dupin, or his hirelings from Europe.

About a fortnight after the burning of Tlalisaya and while we were operating in the vicinity of Cuernavaca and while we were in the neighborhood of a little store kept by a patriot by the name of Molino. Being exceedingly hungry we called at the little store, secured our horses to the rear of the corral, placed a sentinel on duty, and called for food. Soon a liberal supply of broad and dried beef was placed before us, and while eating, the man on sentinel gave the alarm; the Contraguerilleros were upon us. We made a run for our horses and escaped to the mountainside, but Dupin, with more than one hundred of his men, surrounded the premises, and on searching the house found letters which he deemed of being significant of Molino's connection with the Liberals. Senor Molino was placed against the wall of his own house and shot. The wife of the doomed patriot implored mercy for her husband but her tears and prayers availed nothing, and a few moments later her liege was a corpse at her feet. Quarter was only give these as a few of the many instances of the brutalities as practiced on a patriotic, liberty-loving people by this Scourge of Mexico, General Dupin, and I now hasten to give an account of

THE SADDEST CHRISTMAS I EVER KNEW.

Shortly after the murder of Senor Molino, we were were joined by Captain Avalos, one of the most noted Guerilleros in northern Mexico, and some forty or forty of his daring followers. This leader ranked Captain Pechuca and had orders to unite the two companies and operate in the State of Tamaulipas and operate in the vicinity of Tampico. Avalos's company were several Americans among whom was a young man by name of Jasper. Under the leadership of Captain Avalos, we took up a line of march through the mountains and when we reached the borders of the territory in which for a season our operations were to be confined, we went into camp near the little town of Casas, and having knowledge that the Contraguerilleros were in the country, we sent out scouts and took other precautions for safety. About one miles from Casas, lived Senora Anita Flores, a widow whose husband and two sons had fallen in battle while in defense of their own country. This lady had a daughter as beautiful as patriotic, her name was Perpita, and she was betrothed to Captain Avalos, who, while we were encamped in the mountains, some

OBITARY

DIED—Another of Bandera county's best citizens has gone to his last reward. Mr. Joe F. Haby, aged 69 years, 3 months and 5 days, died suddenly of heart failure at his home on the Seco, Wednesday morn, May 16, 1923. He was laid to rest in the Seco cemetery the next afternoon. Deceased was born in Medina county, Texas, and came to Bandera county forty-one years ago. He was a successful business man and always kind and charitable to the poor and those in need. He leaves a widow, three daughters, Mrs. Marcus Boultinghouse, Misses Ada and Emma Haby, three grandchildren and many near and dear friends to mourn his death.

A FRIEND

Miss Laura Duffy has removed to San Antonio where she will reside. Miss Duffy has been a welcome her whenever she comes back to Bandera.

Weekly Payment Plan.

You can now own a Ford car. The new Ford Weekly Payment Plan makes it possible for every man to buy a Ford automobile. The Herpel Motor Company of Boerne, the regular Ford Agency for this district, has arranged with the First National Bank of Bandera and the First State Bank of Bandera, to act as depositories for establishment of this weekly plan, and you can get full information there. Read the big Ford ad on last page, and then consult the local salesmen, Lee Risinger in Bandera, or Earl Weed at Medina as to price and models of cars. You want a Ford, now is your chance to own one.

Harvey Scott, minister of the Church of Christ at Itasca, is the guest of the editor's family. Brother Scott closed a successful meeting at Floresville Sunday night and is en route to Junction to begin a meeting there tomorrow night. He leaves tomorrow for Kerrville from whence he will proceed to Junction. We have enjoyed the visit from this young man, whom we have known for several years. He is full of zeal in the Master's cause, and is doing a great work at Itasca and throughout Hill county, working with the congregations there "in the spirit of unity and the bond of peace." He is editor of the Christian Evangelist, a weekly that is growing in popularity every week.

Dr. and Mrs. E. S. Bell, of San Marcos, are the guests of Judge and Mrs. J. A. Eames for a few days. Mrs. Bell is Judge Eames' sister.

Messrs. J. Sandilands and H. H. Walker, of Dallas, and Capt. L. J. Haby of Medina Lake, were visitors at this office Tuesday. The first named gentlemen are here on a camping trip and are enjoying our wonderful climate and the beautiful scenery.

Wonderful Invention.

Dr. John H. Erwin, Herman Harper and Dock White have put their heads together and now claim to have perfected a wonderful invention for the catching of the biggest bass in the river. The big thing originated in the brain of Dr. Erwin, and the device consists of a toy balloon to which a live mouse is harnessed. The mouse is of such weight that the balloon cannot raise it, but when in operation the balloon cannot be sunk in water by the largest bass. When ready for use the mouse is harnessed up and put in the river, the balloon indicating developments. Mr. Bass comes along and swallows the mouse and wades away, but he can't get away from that balloon. Dock White is then in the river to get the bass and the balloon, while Dr. Erwin and Herman Harper remain on the bank to argue as to the probable size of the fish. It's bound to be a success. Dr. Erwin proposes to operate the aparatus. Herman Harper is to furnish the mice, and Dock White is to take the fish from the device. It's all a great secret, but one day next week the trio plan to hike away to a secluded spot on the Seco and give the scheme a try-out.

In the World War, twenty-one Bandera county boys gave up their lives in defense of their country. The names of those boys appear in this paper. They died for you. They made the supreme sacrifice. Do you appreciate what those boys did for you? Show that appreciation by helping to erect a monument in Bandera to them. Send in a donation to the monument fund. Don't put it off any longer. Your delay helps to delay the erection of the monument. One dollar from you added to the dollars that others will pay in will build that monument. Can we count on you to help build it?

The New Era editor is ready to buy another shirt to tear up boosting Bandera. Simply would not live in a place that he couldn't boost. Bandera is the greatest town on earth, and all it needs is boosting. Better times are coming.

Heard a fellow kicking the other day about the rocky streets of this town. Now, that's nothing to kick about. It makes us feel proud to know that Bandera is the only town in Texas that has rocky streets. It's something to be different.

The tag sale for the Bandera County Fair is now well under way, and the young ladies have been meeting with very good success in tagging folks. Everybody should buy one, for the proceeds from the sale of the little round tags goes into the fund to be used for the purpose of providing premiums in the junior department. Help the boys and girls, and at the same time help the fair.

For the Juniors.

The Bandera Fair is adding to its Junior Department very attractive cash prizes for best performance on piano, best rendered reading or expression, and for best violin performance, the prizes to be within the scholastic age. Premiums in the Junior Department alone will total $150. To provide these premiums the fair management is depending on the citizens of Bandera county to buy the fair tags, which are now on sale.

The community premiums are to be all cash, which will also be raised by the sale of tags. The community premiums will go to the schools of the communities that win them. The community booths are to be so arranged that each school precinct will get an allotted space in its community booth. This fair is being arranged for no other purpose than to advance and educate our children and advertise our livestock and agricultural resources, so when you buy a tag you are investing fifty cents in a good cause and one that will not only benefit you but every man, woman and child in the county as well.

The only thing that worries us is the appearance of our court house square. We want things different. And that public square bears a striking resemblance of a spot down at Potter's dump. The court house. Think what a neat enclosure wherein were shade trees, neatly mown lawns and spraying fountains could add to the looks of our court house square.

Bandera is going to have a fair August 1, 2 and 3. Everybody's coming to that fair. Now it's up to you to say just what kind of a fair we are going to have, and emphasize it by your co-operation and assistance. The New Era has steadfastly boosted for a fair ever since this editor came here, but it is somewhat discouraging to note the lack of co-operation in the matter. But we're still boosting.

Bandera county has the finest sheep and goats, hogs, horses, cattle, chickens - turkeys - and our farm products cannot be beaten. See these things at the fair.

We have a few copies of the "Pioneer History of Bandera County" on hand yet, and if you have not secured a copy we urge you to get one before it is too late. Price, postpaid, $1.00.

More Royal Clinchers for 1923

United States Tires are Good Tires

THE U. S. Tire people took plenty of time in developing the Royal Clincher Cord.

When it was finally placed on sale there were no mistakes in it.

Last year we couldn't make Royal Clinchers fast enough.

Production for 1923 has been more than doubled.

But whenever and wherever you can get a Royal Clincher—take it.

A CHRISTMAS IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH

LIFE STORY OF CARLOS DePOE

Written By John Warren Hunter.

The Catholic priesthood in Mexico were responsible for the War of Intervention and the clergy throughout the republic with a few exceptions were friendly to the cause of Napoleon and Maximilian. When in Senora Flores fell under the ban of suspicion as being an abettor to the Guerrilleros, an old Mexican appeared at her door and offered to engage as her major or servant. The offer was accepted and he became a trusted member of the household in the capacity indicated. He gave his name as Ygna Montez and at the time of which I write, had been in Senora Flores service some six or eight months. Apparently he was a mere animal, the embodiment of a stupidity abounding almost to imbecility, yet faithful in all simple duties assigned him, but as the sequel proved, always alert with eye and ear. He was a spy, sent out by a priest in Tampico.

In compliance with her promise, Pepita went to Casas on the day appointed and lingered there about a week, but Dupin, finding her surrounded, a prisoner. Montez, as we learned later, had secretly conveyed the word, touching her presence there, to Dupin. The inhuman brute led her into the dwelling, complacently seated himself as if entirely at home and told her that he was in possession of all the facts relatings to her dealings with the bandits—as we were called by the invaders—that he knew that Avalos was her lover, and that she knew of his hiding place. All of which she resolutely denied. Coolly taking out his watch and placing it on the table before her he said: "Wench, I have not time to trifle with you; you have just five minutes in which to tell me where this bandit Avalos is encamped. If at the expiration of five minutes you still refuse, you shall be disrobed and lashed, perfectly nude, in the presence of your family. A motion of the man's hand brought two ruffians forward who seized the frightened girl, placed the cruel rope about her graceful neck, and stood waiting further commands. At the expiration of the five minutes these demons began to tear off her clothing and the merciless lash began to thicken about her tender neck, when at length she yielded and confessed! She told where Avalos was encamped, told of his visits, and of her plans to meet him that night. In spite of the weakness, not the perfidy, of the girl that caused her to yield, he had the utmost confidence in the fact and unswerving loyalty of her betrothed, and with all the information he would be unable to capture Capt. Avalos. And he set another trap in her yielding to an adjoining room, peering through the partially drawn curtain, stood Pancho, the brave, observant boy, and near the door-way of his room lingered the mother. Before the five minutes had sped away on foot, unobserved by the brutal assassins, the mother had advanced and was throwing her arms about the girl, implored her in a loud tone not to be obdurate but to save her life and probably the home by telling the general all she knew, and told these pleadings, and lamentations she whispered in Pepita's ear, "Regulese ya se fue Pancho." (Verily Pancho is gone).

However, the boy's heroic effort was fruitless. Being unfamiliar with our mountains and on foot, he had his way in the darkness and failed to reach us before the enemy was upon us. Captain Avalos repaired shortly after nightfall to the place appointed to meet Pepita and her father, but it appear showed that all was not well and that danger was lurking in the darkness. He stealthily approached the premises and found the Contrarguerilleros had possession of the surroundings. He suspected treachery, somewhere, and made all haste back to camp reaching there just at the commencement of the attack.

Pancho giving the information demanded by Dupin, Dupin saved her life but lost her home. The day following, as we marched past the once pretty abode, only the smoking ruins remained to attest its former existence.

It is not my purpose to go in detail, describing the hand-to-hand struggle that ensued when Dupin and his men fell upon us—that fatal night of December 24, 1864. At the first onslaught I was lay pallet with pistol in hand; every moment expecting my assailant, and while Avalos and Pechuca did everything that lay in their power to rally their forces, their efforts proved unavailing. I and Jasper and another American whom we called Bill, fought our way to the side of Avalos, and a few others left early in the morning to be present at a grand fiesta given in his honor by the loyal citizens. He also informed me that we were en route to Chihuahua where we no doubtless be disposed of the next day. When I asked him if we were to be shot he shrugged his shoulders and replied with a delicious expression in Spanish: "Pues quien sabe!" then after a pause added: "But not today." General Avalos is very resourceful in his way; this is Christmas Day, and the General is under a vow never to execute a prisoner on this holy day." "Then, how about the shooting of my wounded comrades this morning?" I asked. "That was an act of mercy," he quickly replied. "They could not be removed, and it would have been an act of cruelty to have left them alone to perish by slow degrees."

In the advanced stage of exhaustion we reached Casas about 10 o'clock in the afternoon. On a balcony overlooking the square through which we were driven, stood Dupin and a number of officers to witness the evidence of his great victory—nine prisoners covered with wounds, bleeding, weary, and famishing for the want of food. A great shout of "Vive Dupin! Vive Mexico!" was raised by the populace as we passed along, and when opposite the balcony whereon stood the official group, Dupin, in a voice like that of a maddened bull, called to us: "Bienvenido, bandidos; bastu manana; al nacimiento del sol!" (Welcome, bandits; tomorrow morning at sunrise.) This was greeted with renewed cheers on the part of the rabble, but to us it meant the death sentence, and the morrow's sunrise would be the last we would ever behold.

We were thrust into a large, dark, dank, and filthy room, without furniture of any kind, in the rear of the village church. It was built of stone, with only two small heavily grated windows which gave insufficient light and ventilation. It was a low, flat-roof structure and contained an earthen floor where the dust lay in heaps. When with a dismal sound the door fell into its place we were completely ingnish objects bear us, and Soon received that some fifteen or twenty other unfortunates shared our appartment and were to be victims of the same fate that awaited us. Most of them were suspects, charged with being friendly to the cause for which their countrymen were battling. Weary, and racked with pain arising from my wounds, I threw myself on the dusty floor near one of the grated windows, and while pondering over my utterly helpless condition, I heard the guards on the outside utter a challenge and presently the door grated on its hinges and a young priest was admitted. He was quickly surrounded by the suspect prisoners, but he quickly motioned them away and asked to see the nine who had just arrived. We gathered about him only to learn that he had come to administer the last rites of the church to the dying. I withdrew in order that the more devout of my comrades might have precedence, and when they had received such spiritual consolation as in his power to bestow, he turned to me and asked me why I hesitated in view of certain death on the morrow. I thanked him for his solicitude, and in the kindest manner assured him that in a spiritual sense, I stood in no need of his services; that I was a protestant and that although a great sinner, and most unworthy, I had an Advocate with the Father to whom I could appeal and that He would not desert me in my extremity.

"But do you think He is going to deliver you from General Dupin? You, with these men, are to be executed tomorrow at sunrise!"

"That is your impression, Padre," said I, "but I am an American, and General Dupin will not have the nerve to shoot me." His only response was, "Oh, my poor deluded son!" and handing me a paper requested that I read it. I drew near the window where I could obtain sufficient light, and read:

"Every individual in the state of Tamaulipas, who, under whatsoever pretext, takes up arms without authority from the governor of the state or the general in chief, shall be considered as a bandit and shot."

DUPIN."

—Returning the paper, I said "Well that looks bad. Is this an official decree, and is there no hope for me and my American comrade here?"

"That is one of a number of decrees issued by Gen. Dupin, and he spares no one. Your only hope must rest in that salvation, which the blood of a Savior has purchased for you. I will speak on the Saints that they may make intercession for you" he urged.

"I never mind the intercession, Padre," I objected, "two of us are Americans and we claim our rights. Are there not men in Casas who interceds for us? Have the Americans no friends in your town?"

"Yes, the alcalde is a friend to the Americans," replied the padre, "but to interceed in your behalf he would probably be shot for his temerity."

"Will you carry a message for us to the alcalde? I will make a direct appeal to him."

He agreed to carry a message as desired and tearing out a blank leaf from a little note book he carried, he handed it and a short pencil to me, and in the dim uncertain light I wrote:

"Senor Alcalde: We are Americans in prison, sentenced to die early tomorrow morning. Help us.—Carl DePoe.

Miss Sue Carpenter, of Tuff, was the guest of Miss Hugh Mayfield this week.

Miss Annie Habenicht has gone to San Antonio to enter a business college.

T. A. Rose and Jas. Bush, of Laxson's Creek, were business visitors in the city Saturday.

R. E. Willis was over from Tarpley Monday. He had been to Kerrville on a business trip.

Col. C. H. Hansen, of Des Moines, Iowa, is here looking after his extensive ranch interests.

Fred Wissenbint, breeder of registered sheep and goats, was here from Medina Saturday.

Misses Florence Fries and Ida Pentecost, of Wiman's Creek, were pleasant visitors at the New Era sanctum Friday.

Pat Hay, who has been sojourning in the San Angelo region for some time, is spending awhile with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hay.

John P. Ross, and bride came in from Yoakum Thursday to spend their honeymoon at the home of the groom's father, John H. Ross.

Mrs. W. Y. Knight, of Medina, was in the city Saturday, a delegate to the county meeting of the Near East Relief work and reports satisfactory progress in that line.

Mrs. C. W. Harris, of Medina, was here Sunday on her way to San Antonio to spend a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Hess Culpepper returned from Kerrville last Thursday where they had their little three-year-old son's tonsils removed. The little fellow had been suffering for some time, but is now about recovered.

J. A. Head is a solid friend to the little old home paper. This week he renews the subscriptions for himself, daughters, Mrs. Ora Black and Mrs. J. E. Holt at Canado, and his son, Herbert R. Head, of Colcumbus, Kansas, and also orders the New Era sent to his other son, Homer L. Head of Woodward, Okla.

Leslie Short, who has been attending the A. & M. College at College Station, returned home last Thursday. He finished his course in animal husbandry with high honors, and holds a warm place in the hearts of the student body of that institution, having been the yell leader there last year. Leslie will devote his time now to ranch interests in this section.

Mrs. E. A. Potts and Shirley B left last Friday for an extended visit with Mrs. Potts' father at Caldwell, Texas. She was accompanied as far as San Marcos by her daughter, Miss Frances who is doing credit work at Southwest Texas Teacher's College, and by her son, Charles who was returning for summer work at A. & M. Frank M. Montague informs us that he lost several head of cattle during the past few days from poisoning. Among them was a fine red bull which he prized very highly, and naturally he is very poisoning. Among the lot was the bull. Mr. Montague says he can not object to dipping, in fact he is in favor of it, and is ready to do all reasonable demands to operate in cleaning up the county, but he thinks it unjust to require the stockmen to dip their stock every fourteen or eighteen days when they are still showing the effects of a previous dipping.

Goes to Grand Canyon.

Harry Davis and Robert Chadwick, of near Medina, left Monday for Grand Canyon, Arizona, where they will be connected with the U. S. Survey in work in the National Park there. Mr. Davis called and ordered the New Era sent him regularly while he is away.

Lively Baseball Game.

Jim Anderson brought up the Union Bus Company's baseball team from San Antonio yesterday and played a hot game of ball with the Bandera team. Bandera done her best, and so did the visitors, but the victory could not pass to both sides, so one had to go down in defeat, and that one was Bandera by a score of 6 to 7.

Bitten by a Spider.

Yesterday a spider bit John Pyka on the finger. The old pioneer calmly opened his jack knife and gashed the finger so that it would bleed freely, and after applying home remedies to the wound, went on about his business as if nothing had happened. Thus far he has felt no inconvenience from the bite.

Oat Crop Good.

The oat crop, which is now being threshed, is turning out better than at first anticipated. Some estimate that their yield will amount to 30 or 35 bushels per acre. Oats sold last week at Center Point at 41 cents per bushel.

Guy Rambie Resigns.

Guy S. Rambie has resigned his position with the First State Bank of Bandera and will move to Sabinal in a few days to accept a position with Roy Davenport. We regret to lose this young man and his estimable wife from our midst, but our best wishes go with them and we believe they will do well in their new home. They are excellent people and we commend them to the best people of Sabinal.

Barbecue at Vanderpool.

John Blakney was here from Vanderpool Monday and informed the New Era that the Vanderpool Modern Woodmen camp is arranging to pull off a big free barbecue there on Wednesday, the July 4th. A fine program is being arranged and the general public will be invited.

A Good Meeting.

The meeting at the Church of Christ in Medina, being conducted by Evangelists Hayes and Nobles, is being well attended and much interest is being manifested.

BILLINGS & SON

A Happy Family Reunion

Last week the children of Mrs. H. H. Carmichael began to come in from distant points to enjoy a great family reunion, and after a happy time for several days a big picnic dinner was arranged to be spread at Dripping Springs on Sunday. Over one hundred guests, most of them relatives, were present, and a great time was had. The Carmichael family was among the earliest settlers in Bandera. The children were born and raised here, and after growing to manhood and womanhood they became scattered to different parts of Texas and the United States. But the good old mother still maintains the family home here, a stately old colonial mansion, where the children come back to find the old home comforts waiting for them. The homecoming was not lacking in joy and happiness, because all of the children with their families, were present except one, Hal H. Carmichael, who could not get here on account of a heavy rain that made it impassable between here and Sabinal. Those from abroad were John E. Carmichael, wife and one child, of Tuscon, Arizona; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Lewis and two children, of Uvalde; Mrs. Tal Peters and three children, of Marion, La., and Joe G. Carmichael, of Houston. Among the relatives present at the big dinner on Sunday was Mrs. Carmichael's brother, Lee Risinger, with his family, children and grandchildren. Mr. Risinger has the distinction of being the youngest grandfather in the south, being fifty-nine years old and having several grandchildren and one great grandchild, of which Geo. Hay of Bandera is the great-great grandfather.

Tomorrow Mrs. Carmichael and her sons and daughters, with their families, will go to Sabinal and on Sunday a great feast will be spread at the home of Hal H. Carmichael there.

May Lose An Eye.

S. C. Fitzgerald is in a hospital at San Antonio, afflicted with some kind of eye trouble. It seems that he got a piece of steel or some foreign substance in one of his eyes a few days ago, and the optic became badly inflamed. It is said that an operation will be necessary and he may lose one of his eyes. His many friends are hoping that such a misfortune will not befall him, and that he will soon be able to return home completely recovered.

Puts on Big Car.

W. E. Ruge has purchased a seven-passenger Buick automobile for use on his daily service line to San Antonio. He says he is going to keep right up with his increasing business by giving his patrons the best service possible. The new car is a beauty and insures comfortable riding over the rough stretches of the road. Besides maintaining his regular schedule on the San Antonio line, Mr. Ruge's cars make special trips to other towns.

L. B. C. Buckelew.

L. B. C. Buckelew, a pioneer citizen of this county, died Monday night at his home near Lima. Death came suddenly while he was seated in a chair, and he peacefully passed away. "Uncle Berry," as he was called, was well known and highly respected in the upper part of the county, and his death has saddened many hearts. He was a consistent member of the Church of Christ, and there is comfort in the knowledge that he has gone to wear a crown with those that love the Lord and keep His commandments. He leaves a large family of sons and daughters who live in different parts of the country. A short time ago all of his children came home to attend a family reunion. His daughter, Mrs. Daisey O'Larnie, had been visiting him the past few days, and left Monday en route to her home at San Antonio, but was interrupted here by the message announcing his death. Another daughter, Mrs. H. A. Schramm, of San Antonio, arrived Tuesday to attend the funeral, which was held late Tuesday afternoon at the Goodman cemetery above Medina. W. Berry, minister of the Church of Christ, conducting the services. Besides being survived by his faithful wife and twelve children, Mr. Buckelew leaves one sister, Mrs. J. W. Holt of Bandera and one brother, Robert Buckelew, who lives in Wyoming.

The children are Mrs. Mollie Reed of Baton Rouge, La.; Berry Buckelew and Roy Buckelew of New Mexico; V. V. Buckelew of Paint Rock, Texas; Mrs. Daisey O'Larnie and Mrs. Davie Schramm of San Antonio; Mrs. Louis Sutherland, Mrs. Bud Hill, Celetia, Viola and Ansel Buckelew of Lima.

The New Era joins in extending condolence and sympathy to the bereaved ones in this hour of their affliction.

Class is Growing.

Prof. A. P. Carlton's violin class is steadily growing, new members constantly being added. The young man is a very efficient teacher and we are pleased to note that his talent is being appreciated here and his efforts are being crowned with success. His class is now composed of the following young folks: Miss Edna Stevens, Miss Myra Hunter, Miss Eunice Price, Miss Pauline Ethridge, Miss Rachel Hunter, Miss Lora Langford, Miss Glada Holloway, Miss Evelyn Mansfield, Miss Anna Mae Mansfield, Miss Amanda Lane, Rhea Mansfield, Joe Frank Gollihart, Marvin Hunter, Jr., Howard Chisum, Frank Hodges, Warren Hunter.

Fair Concessions.

Concessions for the Bandera County Fair that are yet to be let include exclusive rights to ice cream, lemonade, bottled drinks, and feed stand. Bids will be opened July 1. Right reserved to reject any or all bids.—M. H. Tahlmann, president.

McKinley a! Sound Money

It was the martyr President William McKinley who made the term "sound money" famous. President McKinley was a great believer in banks. He frequently advised his friends to put their money in banks.

Miss Montague Improving

Report comes from Boston that Miss Margaret Montague, who underwent a delicate surgical operation there a few days ago, had stood the operation well, and a speedy recovery is hoped for. She has been given the best of attention and care, and her sister, Mrs. Rose Gardiner and brother, Dr. L. J. Montague, are constantly with her. Her brother, John Montague and wife, of Waterbury, Mass., have also been with her a part of the time. Miss Montague's many friends in Bandera anxiously await tidings of her condition and all are praying that her recovery will be complete and she will soon be able to return home.

Up to Highway Commission.

We receive many inquiries from people abroad, who want to come to Bandera, in regard to the condition of the Bandera-San Antonio road where it crosses Medina county. The only answer that we can give is that the plans for improving this stretch of road are still in the hands of the State Highway Commission, and we believe the work of constructing a hard-surface road will begin within a very short time. The Highway Commission made an appropriation of $9,000 to supplement the Medina county's appropriation of $3,000, making $12,000 available for the work. Medina county has already transferred her portion of this money to the Highway Commission. Eventually Bandera will have a first class road to San Antonio. Tuesday.

Goes to California.

Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Dean and J. A. Gibbons of Tarpley, left Monday for Selma, California, to make their home there. Mrs. Jim Surber accompanied them as far as Clifton, Arizona, where she will spend a month with her brother, who is sheriff there. Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Burnes of Indian Creek. They may decide to locate here.

Goes to St. Louis.

Mrs. U. C. Burris left Monday for St. Louis, Mo., to take her little child to a nationally-known surgeon there. The little one has a deformed foot, and it is believed a surgical operation will remedy it. Mrs. Burris expects to be absent two or three months.

If you are in favor of a connected system of highways that are builded with State and Federal aid, permanently maintained and controlled by the State, thereby relieving the commissioners court, also relieving you of any further tax on account of bond issues to maintain the State Highways in our county then don't fail to vote for the Highway Amendment on July 28th.

We don't see how any man can live in this glorious land, where all nature is in tune, and still carry a grouch. Such a fellow must have had a chronic liver trouble when he came here. But there's none of this ilk here.

The New Era is strictly a Bandera county institution. We are building for the future, having already built for today on a solid foundation. And we rejoice to know that Bandera people, that is the great majority of them, appreciate the New Era's efforts along constructive lines.

During the past six months the New Era force has been printing a book, the second volume of "The Trail Drivers of Texas." It has taxed the capacity of our little office, and we have had to stay mighty close onto the job, but within the next two weeks the book will be finished and we hope to give more attention to making the New Era a better paper than ever. While we have not exactly neglected our news columns, we have been forced to curtail much important matter, and this we do not like to do. Local news is our hobby—that is why the New Era is the best paper in Southwest Texas. Send in your items, we'll print 'em;

We frequently receive requests for back issues of the New Era from somebody who has read an installment of the interesting frontier sketches we are now featuring. The best way to obtain the full publications of these stories is to subscribe for the New Era. We expect to make these stories a regular feature of the little old home paper. How's your subscription? We have been compelled to drop a few from our list recently, which we very much regret, but Uncle Sam says we can't send it unless paid for.

Another good story coming. Within a short time we will begin the publication of "The Schnively Expedition." Don't miss the opening chapter, for you will want to read it all. Coming soon.

House Joint Resolution No. 16

Proposing an amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, which relates to taxation and revenues, by adding thereto a new section to be known as Section 9a, directing the Legislature to provide for the construction, operation and maintenance, under State control, of a State system of public highways; providing for an election for the ratification or rejection of amendment herein proposed, and making an appropriation to defray expenses of said election.

Be is resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1. That there be submitted to the people of Texas, for ratification or rejection at a special election provided herein, an amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas by adding thereto a new section to be known as Section 9a, which shall read as follows:

Section 9a. The Legislature is authorized and directed to provide for the creation, establishment, construction and maintenance and repair of a system of improved highways throughout the state to be under the control of the State; and in order that the State may provide the means, revenues and instrumentalities thus established and maintenance of such system of highways, the Legislature is empowered to levy and cause to be collected a specific tax on the ad valorem taxes, in addition to those permitted for other purposes in the Constitution, but such an ad valorem tax shall be imposed for the sole purpose of retiring the bonds authorized by vote of the people of this State as provided for hereinafter in this Section.

When said system shall have been designated and taken over for the State as provided in Section 9, Article V, the Legislature is authorized to make provision for the equitable compensation to such counties for the value such improved roads have been theretoore constructed by the counties in the State.

Provided, also that save for the State highway system, in all other respects, Counties shall have the right to build, construct and maintain roads, turnpikes and bridges within their respective boundaries and the Constitutional provisions relating thereto are not qualified or repealed by reason hereof.

The Legislature, at any Regular or Special Session, is authorized and directed to pass and enact such appropriate legislation necessary to carry out and effectuate the purpose and intent of these Articles.

Sec. 2. The Governor of the State is hereby directed to cause to be issued his necessary proclamation for an election to be held on the fourth Saturday in July, 1923, at which election this amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors of this State for adoption or rejection and shall make the publication required by the Constitution and Laws of the State. Said election shall be held under and in accordance with the General Election Laws of the State, and the ballots for said election shall have printed or written thereon in plain letters the following words:

"OFFICIAL BALLOT", "For the amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a State system of highways." "Against the amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas providing for a State system of highways."

Those voters who avor such an amendment shall erase by marking a line through the words "Against the to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas providing for a State system of public highways." Those who oppose such an amendment to Article 8, shall erase by marking a line through them, the words, "For the amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the state of Texas, providing for a State system of public highways." And the result of the election shall be published and declared according to majority of votes cast in the election.

Sec. 3. The sum of Five Thousand Dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the treasury not otherwise appropriated for the purpose of the proclamation and publication of this amendment and the election to be held hereunder.

The Bible.

The Bible is shallow enough that the most timid swimmer may enjoy its waters without fear. It is deep enough for the most expert swimmer to find no bottom touching the bottom. Its cities have been legion; but it is still here; they are gone. It is the root of all good civil law and good practice. It has comforted millions, as no other book can comfort, and still continues to do so. When nations ignored its teachings, they fell. When nations embrace its teachings, they survive. It tells what was, what is and what will be—an epitome of life from the cradle to the grave, and then beyond. It is God's vital and inviolate word and can never be set aside.—John Watson.

In the game between the Bandera and Hondo teams, played on the local diamond last Friday, the visitors annexed the game by a score of 5 to 1. Of course, the Hondo boys could have taken the game, but courtesy to the visitors —and the team they brought along were dominating factors in deciding the contest.—Hondo Anvil Herald.

A CHRISTMAS IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH

LIFE STORY OF CARLOS DeFOE

Written By John Warren Hunter.

(Concluded)

He took the note and departed. It was now night, and an hour later he brought as word that the Alcalde could render us no assistance whatever, and renewed his pleading that I should prepare for death through the mediation of the Holy Catholic Church. In infancy I had been dedicated to God in baptism in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and during all these years I had been loyal to my mother's religion, and at this supreme hour I did not require the intercession of sinful men and mortal saints. I asked to be left alone. The padre also informed us that the wildest excitement prevailed in town; a drunken soldiery was parading the streets, shooting, yelling, looting stores, outraging women, and his little church was at that moment crowded with mothers and daughters who had sought protection in the sanctuary.

When the padre departed, I threw myself upon the dirt encumbered floor and gave away to a train of reflections that could not have been other than sad. It was Christmas night and my mind wandered back across the vista of years to the bright scenes of home and childhood, and I bewailed the cruel fate that had torn me from those I loved, without fault of mine led me into a distant land, a wanderer among a strange people, and while just upon the threshold of a joyous young manhood, I must die as a felon and fill an unmarked grave. As one who stood on the brink of Eternity, I looked out my soul to the Man of Sorrows, to Him, who travel-worn, hungry, weary, having not where to lay his sacred head, and who had tried as other men yet the custodian of Divine Victory by which every sorrow was ameliorated and every cross made endurable, who had extended the Divine Hand to every helpless heart, and the Healer of every sorrowing one, to Him out of the depths of my heart I cried, and a calm resignation, unspeakable, undefinable came upon my soul as a mantle of a holy benediction, and the "Master gave His beloved sleep."

I do not know how long I slept, probably an hour or longer, but the strident voice of the sentinel outside, calling the hour, awakened me. The hush of our prison room was broken only by the whispered prayers offered to the Virgin by my comrades in misfortune, and while trying to compose myself to sleep again I heard seemingly in the far distance, yet low, sweet voice chanting the National Hymn. Evidently it was a female voice but the words of her song were not distinguishable. As I listened intently the singing ceased only to be taken up again seemingly in the far distance, a fill the soul-stirring words, and melody fell upon our ears with a sad, yet inspiring effect. The voice could be no other than that of a young girl and why the guards allowed her to approach so near the carcel and engage in singing the Hymno Nacional, was more than we could conjecture, unless, possibly, the sentries were charmed with the melody of her enrapturing voice. The prayers of our comrades ceased for the time being and not a sound broke the stillness while the singer outside chanted:

"Antes Patria! que inermes tus hijos,
Bajo el yugo su cuello doblen,
Tus campinas con sangre riegan,
Sobre sangre se estampa su pie,
Y sus templos, palacios y torres,
Se derumben con horrido estruendo,
Y sus ruinas existen decididos,
Mas y no serán, la Patria aquí fue."

There came a pause, as if the singer would expect applause or some token of response, when several of my comrades took up the hymn where she had left off—

"Tornace sus lauras sangrientes,
En sguirnaldas, de mirtos y rosas,
Que el amor de las hijas ye esposas,
Tambien sabe á los bravos premiar."

An officer of the guard came to one of the grated windows and shouted a command of silence, evidently the singer had been ordered away, but as she vanished in the distance, faintly came her parting words:

"Un recuerdo para ellos de gloria!"
"Un laurel para de victoria!"

I sank upon the rude floor, and tried to fathom the meaning of that nocturnal singer, and could but conclude that her message was no other than that to inspire hope and coming relief, for it is Pepita's voice. She is a comrade who had often heard her sing, and she would have us know that reinforcements at hand.

My mind was exceedingly painful, my thigh was greatly inflamed and I was in a high fever and again into a sleep, a slumber that was restful, but a sleep but a state of semi-unconsciousness. The mind was most active under the awful tension, and in my partial delirium I was once more a little child in the old Tennessee home and it was Christmas Eve. I heard my father's voice and my mother's low, sweet lullaby thrilled me as the long ago. Oh, it all seemed so realistic! The merry shout, the interrogative query, the home-lit joy and the explosive laughter of the happy slaves as they gathered at the "big house" to receive the kindly Christmas greeting from the hands of "Mastah" and "Missus." Then was light and warmth, and joy in the dear old home, and mother's kind tender hands rested upon my head while at her knee I repeated:

"Now I lay me down to sleep . . ."

Suddenly I was aroused from this vision by Jasper, who laid his hand upon my arm and said: "Sit up and listen. I hear a great noise outside." I scarcely raised to a sitting posture when there came a crash of guns, followed by yells and a fusillade. Then succeeded by an intensity that indicated that the wildest scenes of pandemonium were being enacted in the devoted city of Casas. The hubbub of earthly yells and screams, with the sharp crack of revolver and carbine, filled the night with an awful din. It was a direct repeat of our place of incarceration, and our first impression was that the fears of the people were being realized, and the Dupin's men were engaged in a promiscuous slaughter. My Catholic comrades were upon their knees, devoutly commending themselves to the Holy Virgin of Guadalupe, and we all believed our last hour had arrived. Our prison guards fired their pieces, after which we heard no more of them. A cavalcade dashed by, and above the roar of battle we could hear the familiar cry of the Guerilleros. "Muerte á Dupin! Donde se halle, esa miserable, Dupin!"—Jo us the sweetest music, the gladdest Christmas tidings that ever fell upon a soldier's ears. Heavy blows, mid triumphant shouts, rained upon our prison door; it fell with a crash, and the old alcalde, followed by a troop of Guerilleros rushed in and told us we were rescued and saved!

Gen. Mendez, the Bedford Forest of Mexico, unknown to Captain Avalos, had moved his small force from the region of Monterry Pass, twenty miles from Casas, and was encamped near Labre On Christmas morning Pepita and her mother had been secretly informed of the presence of Gen. Mendez at the Pass, whereupon the girl, by a circuitous route, reached her uncle, the alcalde, and informed him of the disaster that had befallen Avalos and of the prisoners then being taken to Casas, and urged him to send a runner to Mendez notifying him of the situation. The alcalde himself went to the camp of Mendez, reaching there just before night. Knowing the velocity with which he moved, and "firmly believing that our rescue was sure, the girl resorted to the ruse of singing snatches of the National Hymn near our prison during the night to impress upon that sentor was at hand. It was her only means of communication.

On receiving word carried by the alcalde, Mendez rallied his men and with incredible speed these warriors of the Sierras covered the distance and like a thunderbolt of war, fell upon the drunken assassins under Dupin, and during the short but decisive action eighty-four of the enemy were killed and only six teniente reported. At sunrise, the Dupin fixed for our execution, these six were marched out and shot down in the public square, facing and when identified as being the spy who had been in communication with the enemy, he was taken to where the pretty home of Senora Flores once stood and hanged to a tree.

During the battle of Casas, Dupin had a number of his men escaped only to renew their crimes upon the hapless men and women of Mexico who chanced to fall into their hands.

I remained under the banner of Juarez until the close of the War of the French Intervention. I, with my command, was present at the capture of the last act in the bloodiest drama of American history—the execution of the so-called Emperor of Mexico Maximilian and his two Mexican generals, Mejia and Miramon, which occurred, June 19, 1867.

Forty years with their lights and shadows, joys and sorrows have come since that terrible day. That awful night at Casos, and from at this time interneceine strife—a strife that has held sway under and famine threatens. It is like the days of long ago, when it seemed the Republic was doomed. But from among the ruins there will yet arise another Benito Juarez, to rescue bleeding Mexico—beyond the horizon appears the light of a glorious day and peace and advancement will burst in magnificent splendor upon a now unhappy land. Through all these years there have been many dark days to sadden my life, but barring the bloody tragedy that sent me a child-waif, an orphan, an outcast in a foreign land, the saddest I ever knew was when called to consummate the Valley of the Shadow of Death on that Christmas Day, 1864.

A Ford As An Object of Thrift.

Taken from the Wall Street Journal of April 13th, 1923.

A weekly purchase payment plan for Ford cars increases the number of Ford sales made to purchasers by reaching down to the family savings in the home and at the bank. It does not secure delivery of a Ford car upon payment of a minimuf of $5 down and $5 or more weekly, as seems to be supposed.

In days of high wages, savings banks shoy some but not a corresponding increase. Thrift is as little universal as it ever was. As a result small sales are received in growing amounts, more ways are ound for spending them. Although automobile manufacturers generally have directed their efforts toward diverting these spendings toward purchases of their product, Ford seems to have devised a practical plan for this purpose. It appeals to people whose only reason for not owning a car was because they did not happen to have the first payment.

A broad application of the thrift movement to car purchase will be strongly supported by the banks because it tends to swell their savings accounts. The Ford plan rater ingeniously links the savings idea to the Ford car and virtually ties the prospective purchaser to the purchase as soon as he begins to save or the first payment. The position of the dealer and the Ford company aside from any increased sales resulting, will be strengthened because of cooperation of local banks will be sought in determining the credit risks of prospective purchasers.

In effect the family takes advantage of the plan and is merely starting a savings account pledged to the purchase of an automobile. Installment purchase upon the whole has not stimulated extravagance and has undoubtedly made thrift attractive with an object for saving.

Another good rain next week will insure a fine watermelon crop for Bandera.

Will Honor Road Commissioner.

Judge W. W. McCrory, retiring member of the Texas Highway Commission, will be the guest of honor at a celebration of public assurance of the completion of a State highway from Bandera to the Bexar county line to be given by the residents of Bandera Friday night. George D. Armistead, who is to succeed Judge McCrory on the commission, D. E. Colp and others have been invited from San Antonio.

The project that means so much to Bandera and which has been buffeted about several years has been financed and the contract is to be let within a few days. McCrory as highway commissioner persuaded his colleagues at Austin to allow the maximum allotment under law by giving three for one. Ever since the contract for carrying the mails into Bandera county was changed from Boerne to San Antonio, efforts have been made to obtain a good stacle and then another interher of Medina county. One obstacle and then the other interfered. Action by the highway commission however, cheered the Bandera folks so much that they did the rest. It is stated that every dollar of the necessary expense is in hand and that the construction work is to be hurried.

This road is Bandera's only open route to the rest of the world and its success is almost as

Good Roads Boosters Coming

Tomorrow (Friday) night Judge McCrory, retiring State Highway Commissioner, of San Antonio, will speak to our citizens at the court house on the subject of good roads. The general public is urged to attend the mass meeting and hear Judge McCrory. "Every citizen of the county is vitally interested in the matter of securing better roads and a full attendance is expected. Judge McCrory will be accompanied to Bandera my Messrs. D. E. Colp, of the Old Spanish Trail Association, and Mr. George D. Armistead, former postmaster at San Antonio.

Mr. Colp who has been instrumental in securing the appropriation from the State Commission for the building of a first class stretch of road through Medina county on the Bexar-San Antonio road, informs us that the contract will be let and construction of the road will begin within a very short time now. Bandera people will always be grateful to Mr. Colp for his efforts in the matter. Let everybody attend the meeting at the courthouse tomorrow night.

Team will meet the Hondo Color ed Team in a baseball game Everybody will enjoy seeing these colored boys play the game by their natural wits. These boys are not painted up, but will be as proficience willed them to be.

At noon barbecued goats, calves, and red hot hamburgers can be had at reasonable rates, as well as other refreshments will be at your disposal.

At 2 o'clock p. m. there will be rendered a patriotic address by the chairman of the Americanism Committee. The principal orator will dwell entirely on Americanism, and everyone will be benefitted, it being accidental that his views are very pronounced.

Promptly at 4 o'clock p. m. the Bandera baseball eam will meet the San Antonio Express-Evening News team in mortal combat.

Dinner and refreshments will be on hand at St. Joseph's School campus. The patriotic address will be given at the school auditorium where comfortable seats will be provided. Everybody invited.

COMMITTEE.

Tick Fever Claims Nine Fine Herefords . . .

Drs. W. L. Buckley and H. I. Darby, representatives of the bureau of animal industry, with headquarters in San Antonio, on Thursday visited the ranch of Frank Montague, located 10 miles beyond Bandera county, where deaths have occurred in the fine herd of Hereford cattle of Mr. Montague.

Inspections were made in the herd and two animals were found to have a fever temperature of 104, which was pronounced by the federal representatives to be caused by the Texas fever tick and the deaths in the herd were considered by the federal men to have been caused by the bite of the fever tick.

Mr. Montague has a herd of 175 Herefords, many of which are registered and the members of high grade. All of the deaths have occurred within the last one or six weeks.

The herd has been dipped for several years with the intention of keeping the tick menace to a minimum, but not to be entirely clean until the whole country is cleaned up the tick. Practically all last year no ticks showed on the herd, and few dippings were had, but it was dipped after November, 1922, and the theory of the Federal men is that the animals lost their immunity from the long absence of ticks on them and when a large crop of ticks hatched out in May from the eggs dropped last fall, the animals succumbed to the infection.

Mr. Montague has been an advocate of dipping all along, but this has discouraged him. However he says that dipping alone would not injure cattle unless when they were hot from driving, or were driven through the water immediately after dipping—San Antonio Express.

MRS. L. B. C. BUCKELEW AND FAMILY

There will be three days of entertainment and good fellowship at the Bandera County Fair August 1, 2 and 3. Have you bought a tag?

We were in error last week in stating that W. E. Ivy conducted the funeral of L. B. C. Buckeley, sgar Medina. Bro. Buckelew's friend, Val Click conducted the services, it having been a request made by deceased some time previous to his death that Mr. Click conduct the funeral. Bro. Buckelew died of heart failure while preparing to retire. An obituary will appear later.

"Bob Hampton of Placer," is to be presented at the Bandera Theater tomorrow night. This is one of the big pictures of the season, and was enacted amid the scenic grandeur of Glacier National Park. Custer's Last Stand is vividly portrayed, and hundreds of Indians and frontiersmen take part in the production. Remember the date, tomorrow (Friday) night. The picture for Saturday night is Long Chance.

The meeting conducted at Medina by Evangelists Fry and Nelson at the Church of Christ closed last Sunday night, after a ten days' series of good sermons. Much interest was manifested in the meeting, were two additions to the church much good was done, and the cause was established on firm ground.

Preparations are going steadily forward to make the Bandera County Fair the best ever. Just tell your friends to come.

We are indebted to Mrs. Rudolph Schreiber for some choice specimens of roses from her garden this week, and also to W. F. Schoenelt for some roasting ears.

THE STATE OF TEXAS—

To all persons interested in the Estate of L. B. C. Buckelew, deceased. Rachel A. E. Buckelew has filed in the County Court of Bandera County, an application for the Probate of the last Will and Testament of said L. B. C. Buckelew, deceased, filed with said application, and for Letters Testamentary of the estate of L. B. C. Buckelew, deceased, which will be heard at the next term of said court, commencing on the 3rd Monday in July A. D. 1923, the same being the 16th day of July A. D. 1923 at the Court House thereof, in Bandera, Texas, at which time all persons interested in said estate may appear and contest said application, should they desire to do so.

"Herein fail not, but have you before said Court on the said first day of the next term thereof this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court, at office in Bandera, Texas, this 22nd day of June A. D. 1923.

MARK McBRYDE, Clerk
County Court Bandera Co. Texas

House Joint Resolution No. 16

Proposing an amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, which relates to taxation and revenues, by adding thereto a new section to be known as Section 49a, directing the Legislature to provide for the construction, operation and maintenance, under State control, of a State system of public highways; providing for an election for the ratification or rejection of amendment herein proposed, and making an appropriation to defray expenses of said election.

Be is resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1. That there be submitted to the people of Texas, for ratification or rejection at a special election provided here in an amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas by adding thereto a new section to be known as Section 49a, which shall read as follows:

Section 49a. The Legislature is authorized and directed to provide for the creation, establishment, construction and maintenance and repair of a system of improved highways throughout the state to be under the control of the State; and, in order that the State may provide the means, revenues and instrumentalities, the establishment and maintenance of such system of highways, the Legislature is empowered to levy and cause to be collected specific excise and ad valorem taxes, inadition to those permitted for other purposes in the Constitution, but such an ad valorem tax shall be imposed only for the purpose of retiring the bonds authorized by vote of the people of this State as provided for hereinafter in this Section.

When said system shall have been designated and taken over for the State as provided in Section 3, hereof, the Legislature is authorized to make provision for the equitable compensation to such counties for the value of such improvements as have been heretofore constructed by the counties in the State.

Provided, also that save for the State highway system, in all other respects, counties shall have the right to build, construct and maintain roads, turnpikes, and bridges within their respective boundaries and the Constitutional provisions relating thereto are not qualified or repealed by this amendment.

The Legislature, at any Regular or Special Session, is authorized and directed to pass and enact all appropriate legislation necessary to carry out and effectuate the purpose and intent of these Articles.

Sec. 2. The Governor of the State is hereby directed to cause to be issued his necessary proclamation for an election to be held on the fourth Saturday in July, 1923, at which election this amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors of this State for adoption or rejection; and said election shall be held under and in accordance with the General Election Laws of the State, and the ballots for said election shall have printed or written thereon in plain letters, the following words:

"OFFICIAL BALLOT". "For the amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a State system of highways." "Against the amendment to Articles, of the Constitution of the State of Texas providing for a State system of highways."

Those voters who avor such an amendment shall erase by marking a line through the words "Against the to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas providing for a State system of public highways." Those who oppose such an amendment to Article 8, shall erase by marking a line through them, the words, "For the amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the state of Texas, providing for a State system of public highways." And the result of the election shall be published and declared according to majority of votes cast in the election.

Sec. 3. The sum of Five Thousand Dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the treasury not otherwise appropriated for the purpose of the proclamation and publication of this amendment and the election to be held hereunder.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA and DANGER

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most powerful and useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Yet it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that is all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. In the large family package, ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price on a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

A delightful social dance was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Batto last Friday night, Miss Cynthia Pafford, of Center Point, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. G. Johnson, for a few days.

Austin Carlton's friends gave him a surprise party Tuesday night. A most delightful time is reported.

Rev. B. L. Ray was over from Tarpley Saturday, and poked his head in at our door long enough to say "Howdy."

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dahse were here from Austin this week, guests of Mrs. Dahse's parents, Judge and Mrs. A. L. Mansfield.

F. J. Kindla, who holds a position in a bank at Mercedes, is spending his vacation here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Kindla.

Last week we inadvertently stated that a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Royce Risinger April 28. The young lady arrived June 18.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Bush, of near Medina, were in the city Tuesday and paid the News Era an appreciated visit. They were on their way to Port Arthur to visit their son who lives there, and expect to be absent about three weeks.

Pete Dugos and children came up from San Antonio to spend a few days with Mrs. Dugos. Mrs. Dugos returned home Sunday accompanied by him mother, Mrs. Kasper Dugos. His children, George and Josephine, remain here for the summer.

Send in your order for the second volume of "The Trail Drivers of Texas." Off the press next week. Price $3 per copy. Greatest history of early days ever published. Send in your order to George W. Saunders, Union Stock Yards, San Antonio, Texas.

S. C. Fitzgerald's many friends are pleased to know that he did not lose his eye, as was for a time thought probable. He returned from the hospital this week and is able to see to get about town, but his eye is still in bad shape. By careful treatment it is hoped that the optic will soon be all right.

Last week Judge Mansfield called on the State Livestock Sanitary Commission to have representatives here to look into the losses of stock which have been occurring in the Montague ranch, presumably from dipping. Drs. Darby and Emsly of the Bureau of Animal Industry came up, accompanied by H. H. Williams, editor of the Cattle Clatter column in the San Antonio Express. The doctors made an investigation of the cattle on the ranch and pronounced the losses due to tick fever.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Richardson and daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Adelaide, accompanied by Miss Dorothy Embry, all of San Antonio, are guests at the Riverside Inn. Mr. Richardson is connected with the Lockwood National Bank of San Antonio, and comes up to Bandera to spend his summer vacation. He informs us that he is planning the preparation of golf links on the Drop near the river, which would be an ideal place for such a course. Visitors from San Antonio and other places could bring their clubs and caddies and enjoy the game here on their vacation. We are sure that if Mr. Richardson will start "the ball to rolling" he will meet with local co-operation.

Ford Sales Pass the Half Million Mark in 120 Days.

More than half a million Ford cars and Trucks sold in 120 days. That is the astonishing record just established by the Ford Motor Company, eclipsing all previous sales figures and emphasizing more strongly than ever the worth of the Ford to the title of "The Universal Car."

From January 1 to May 1 sales of Ford Cars and Trucks in the United States reached the enormous total of 561,544, or twice the number sold during the same period a year ago when the total was 288,746.

Even with its huge production facilities, now operating on a schedule in excess of 6,500 Cars and Trucks a day, the company is unable to keep up with the unprecedented demand.

April set a new sales record for the month, just as has every other month this year, and was the thirteenth consecutive month in which sales have run over the 100,000 mark.

Sales during April totaled 163,262 Ford Cars and Trucks, 50,000 more than were delivered the same month last year when 1113,282 retail deliveries were made.

Good Roads Rally.

Last Friday evening Bandera entertained a number of distinguished visitors from San Antonio with a banquet, at the City Hotel. The speakers were Judge and Mrs. McCrory, Mr. and Mrs. Dean, George D. Armistead, D. E. Culp, Wm. H. Furlong, and Ed. Ward H. Peters, who came up to assure us that the three miles of road across the corner of Medina county, on the Bandera-San Antonio road, would be fixed within a very short time. A great banquet was spread and the visitors were royally entertained. Covers were laid for thirty-four and turkey, chicken, and many other good things were set before the guests. I. E. Adamietz was toastmaster, and J. M. Hunter made a brief address of welcome, which was responded to by Judge McCrory. Mr. D. E. Culp was called upon and made a few remarks as did Mr. W. H. Furlong.

After the banquet the visitors were taken for an auto drive over the city and into the country, and when they returned they were taken to the Opera House where a large crowd was awaited them and the speaking making began. Mr. Culp, the man who has so unselfishly interested himself in securing for Bandera the construction of a good road across the corner of Medina county on our road to San Antonio, was the first speaker. Mr. Culp told of some of the difficulties encountered in securing state help for the work. He also told how Bandera, by proper effort, could secure a part of the three thousand dollars which the Medina county had appropriated for the work. He also told the audience that Bandera, by proper effort, could secure a part of the right here under the provisions of the law recently passed providing for a system of State park sites.

Mr. Culp was followed by Mr. George D. Armistead, former postmaster at San Antonio. Mr. Armistead has been appointed a member of the State Highway Commission, and is naturally interested in the building of good roads. He takes the place of Judge McCrory, who has resigned to become Judge of the newly-created 94th District Court at San Antonio. Mr. Armistead stated that he had known of the condition of the road that leads across Medina county for a long time, and had been doing all in his power to remedy matters, but only until now had not been able to do much, but now that he is a highway commissioner he is going to speed up the work and carry out the plans of his predecessor and give us a first class road. The additions that are being made, the survey has been finished and the State Highway engineer will advertise for bids on the work within the next few days. Mr. Armistead's remarks were right to the point and left no room for doubt in the minds of his hearers but convinced all that the thing so long sought for was at last in Bandera's grasp.

Followed by W. P. Pat-ong of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, who assured Bandera folks that the organization was high he was identified is ready and willing to help Bandera in every way possible. He related how the people of the north and east are being told of the wonderful resources and climate of this region, how San Antonio is being advertised all over the country as the winter playground of America, and impressed all with the realization that Bandera will come in for a share of the tourist business that comes this way. Mr. Furlong is a booster of the real type and good roads are sort of a hobby with him. He was instrumental in the building of the Medina toll road out from San Antonio and made the Medina Lake a real resort. He is a great lover of golf and has been instrumental in bringing to San Antonio noted golf players for championship matches. Mr. Furlong has consented to return to Bandera on a few days notice and make an address in the interest of the State Highway Department to be voted upon on July 28.

Mr. Furlong was followed by Judge Mansfield, who spoke for a few minutes on home in the interest of State Highway Bonds. Judge Mansfield gave figures and facts concern-

BANDERA, TEXAS

Bandera's Fourth of July.

Bandera celebrated the glorious Fourth of July in a very appropriate manner yesterday, with a barbecue on the St. Joseph's School campus, where ice cream and lemonade stands dispensed delicious refreshments. Nearly a thousand people were in attendance throughout the day. In the morning the chief attraction was a hot game of baseball between the colored team of Kerrville and the colored team of Hondo, the Hondo darkies literally eating up the Kerrville Senegambians in the fray. The score stood 11 to 2, and as one of the players was heard to remark, "Dem Kerrville niggahs play ball all right, but dey was up sign Hondo."

At 2 o'clock p. m. the crowd assembled in the spacious school auditorium to listen to a patriotic address by Rev. F. J. Ledwig, the past State Chaplain of the American Legion, and also past State Historian of the American Legion, member of the National Speakers' Bureau, State Chairman of the Americanization Committee of the American Legion, and former chaplain in the United States Navy. Father Ledwig is a gifted orator and held his audience in rapt attention during the more than an hour he dwelt upon the subject of Americanism and patriotism and the duty each citizen owes to his country. It was one of the finest addresses ever delivered in Bandera, and was highly appreciated by every person present. Lack of space prevents us from giving a detailed report of the eloquent and soul stirring address. Those who failed to hear it missed a rare treat. We believe if more time was devoted to the making of such addresses, the people would be benefitted generally, and the love for country would be revived.

Seated on the platform with the speaker were Rev. E. A. Potts, pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. P. J. Boivin, pastor of the Catholic church; Veteran Amos Clark, who is a veteran of the Mexican War, and now 96 years old; Mr. J. W. Short and J. M. Hunter. The auditorium was packed to its full seating capacity.

Many people were here from Medina, Pipe Creek, Tarpley, San Antonio, Boerne, Comfort, Hondo, and Kerrville, for the big celebration.

In the afternoon a game of baseball was played between the San Antonio Express Evening News team and the Bandera Invincibles, and the visiting team got walloped to a frazzle. Score 2 to nothing.

The day's festivities wound up with a grand ball last night at the James Cox Opera House.

Dempsey Wins.

Austin Carlton's radio station picked up a full report of the Dempsey-Gibbons bout at Shelby, Montana, Yesterday. Fifteen round were fought, and Dempsey was given the referee's decision. No knock-out.

We saw Joe Villemain, of Pipe Creek, taking in the sights and sounds of the barbecue yesterday.

Report comes from Mrs. C. C. Burris, who is in St. Louis with her little child for treatment for a deformity of the foot, that the little fellow is doing nicely and the treatments being given are going to be successful in overcoming the defarmity. Mrs. Burris will remain in St. Louis about two months longer.

Good Roads Rally.

Last Friday evening Bandera entertained a number of distinguished visitors from San Antonio with a banquet at the Hotel. Among them were Judge and Mrs. McCrory, Mr. and Mrs. Dean, George D. Armistead, D. E. Colp, Wm. H. Furlong, and Edward H. Everett, who came up to assure us that the three miles of road across the corner of Medina county, on the Bandera-San Antonio road, would be fixed wide in a very short time. A great banquet was spread and the visitors were royally entertained. Covers were laid for thirty and fried turkey, chicken, and many other good things were set before the guests. I. E. Adamietz was toast-master, and A. M. Hunter made a brief address of welcome, which was responded to by Judge McCrory. Mr. D. E. Colp was called upon and made a few remarks as did Mr. W. H. Furlong.

After the banquet the visitors were taken for an auto drive over the city and into the country, and when they returned they were met at the James Cox Opera House where a large crowd awaited them and the speeches making began. Mr. Colp, the man who has so untiringly interested himself in securing for Bandera the construction of a first class road across the corner of Medina county, on our road to San Antonio, was followed by W. H. Furlong, who in a few words told us that the thing of long sought for was at last in Bandera's grasp. He was followed by W. H. Furlong of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, who assured Bandera folks that the organization with which he stands identified is ready and willing to help Bandera in every way possible. He told us how he sees the future of the north and east are being told to the wonderful resources and climate of this region, how San Antonio is being advertised all over the country as the winter playground of America, and impressed all with the realization that there will come in for a share of the tourist business that comes this way. Mr. Furlong is a booster of the real type and good roads are sort of a hobby with him. He was instrumental in the building of the Medina toll road out from San Antonio and made the Medina Lake a real resort. He is a great lover of golf and has been instrumental in bringing to San Antonio noted golfers for championship contests. Mr. Furlong has special interest in Bandera in as much as he is interested in State Highways. He gave us figures and facts concerning what the State Highway Commission is doing and how it is co-operating with counties and federal aid on the project and how finally he was successful in getting an appropriation of three thousand dollars to supplement the three thousand dollars the Medina county had appropriated for the work. He also told the audience that Bandera could by proper effort, could secure a state park right here under the provisions of the law recently passed providing for a system of state park sites.

Mr. Colp was followed by Mr. George D. Armistead, former postmaster at San Antonio. Mr. Armistead has been appointed a member of the State Highway Commission, and is naturally interested in the building of state roads. He takes the place of Judge McCrory, who has resigned to become a judge of the newly-created 94th District Court at San Antonio. Mr. Armistead stated that he had known of the condition of the road that leads across Medina county for some time, and had been doing all in his power to remedy matters, but only until now had not been able to do much, but now he is a highway commissioner he is going to speed up the work and carry out the plans of his predecessor and give us a first class road. The allotment has been made, the survey has been finished and the State Highway engineer will advertise for bids and the work within the next few days. Mr. Armistead's remarks were right to the point and left no room for doubt in the minds of his hearers but convinced all that the road would be built.

Judge McCrory was then called upon and made a few remarks as did Mr. Everett, who also assured

Mrs. F. A. Masters left Tuesday for Oakville, where she was called by a message announcing the serious illness of the little son of her sister, Mrs. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy S. Rambie moved this week to the ranch where Mr. Rambie will be connected with the firm of Roy Davenport & Co. We will miss them from Bandera, but wish them well in their new location.

From Pike's Peak Breeze, a little newspaper published on the summit of Pike's Peak, Colorado, we note that Miss Gladys Welch, of Bandera, was among the summer visitors there, and also Mrs. Ed Leach of San Antonio.

Rev. Father Gallagher, who was formerly pastor of the church here, but now located in San Antonio was greeting friends in Bandera this week. He came up on a brief vacation visit.

Bandera county collected and shipped to Dallas headquarters for the Near East Relief work, 1003 lbs. of old clothing, which is valued in that work as $750.00, and a cash donation of $131.50. Peoples, Medina and Bandera are the principal contributors.

Frank Nieschweitz and son-in-law, Peter Niffstroy and son, all of Falls City, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Gabe Anderwald last week. It had been thirty-five years since Mr. Anderwald and Mr. Nieschweitz had met. They were boys together during pioneer days.

Rev. E. A. Potts had for guests this week Rev. DuPree and son, Henry, of South San Antonio and Mr. Wood and son, Louis, of Mercedes, who spent several days in camp at R. B. Graham's place, fishing and hunting. Also Mr. and Mrs. Gilliam and children of Batesville, and Mr. Gilliam's mother, were their guests.

The second volume of "The Trail Drivers of Texas" is off the press and ready for distribution. The second volume will sell at $3, as does the first volume. However, anyone wishing both volumes may have them for $5. Also, anyone having the first volume may obtain the second for $2.50. Send all checks to George W. Saunders, Union Stock Yards, San Antonio. Books will be mailed, postpaid, immediately on receipt of order. The story of the old trail driving days as told in these books is authentic, reliable in the fullest degree. Each purchaser is helping swell the fund for the erection of a monument to the Old Trail Drivers.

On June 21st the counties of Texas as well as other states represented in the Southwest Texas State Teachers College at San Marcos met and organized. Bandera county was well represented by ten promising young people, Misses Sadie Hatfield, Irene Curl, Vivian Keesee, Lossie and Katherine Padgett, Donna Fryckburg, Emma Hodges and Frances Potts and Messrs. Everett and Isaac Briggs. Miss Sadie Hatfield was elected president and Everett Briggs, secretary and press reporter, and each one present a member of the social committee. The meeting adjourned with three hearty yells of "Yea Bandera."

Displaces Farming Methods in Vogue Since Bible Times.

Over in the Caucasus of Asia Minor is Armenia. There is more than a power plant—it is a land redeemer and a life saver, according to Ed Herpel of the Herpel Motor Co., of Boerne.

"There in the shadow of Mt. Ararat, famed resting place of Noah's Ark, it is the twentieth century missionary of the Near East Relief to the world and brings the most striking of all contrasts between modern power farming and the primitive methods in vogue for thousands of years.

"Introduced in the Caucasus little more than a year ago by the Near East Relief, the tractor has revolutionized agriculture and thanks to it, there is no famine this year.

"With the Tractor and modern farm machinery the fields, here before only scratched with the historic sticks and oxen teams, have been plowed deep and with less seed have yielded greater crops than ever before. Hundreds of natives too have been released from farm work to enter industrial pursuits.

"A recent note from Erivan, Armenia tells the story of tractor accomplishments in striking figures:

"Ten American tractors plowed a thousand acres of land in eleven days," the message said. "To accomplish the same work in the same time would have required 1,000 oxen and 500 men."

Under power farming the crops in the Caucasus have been 50 per cent larger and one-third less seed has been used. Where Armenia only a short time ago, with eighty percent of its population engaged in agriculture, was only producing one-third of its cereal requirements, it is today producing about one-half with far less men employed in the work.

The Near East Relief is now using eleven Fordson Tractors.

With gasoline power, fed by the rich oil fields of Baku on the Caspian Sea and with modern machinery, the Caucasus promises to accomplish one of the most interesting agricultural developments in the history of the world.

Mrs Mary E. Hudspeth.

After an illness of only a few days duration, Mrs. Mary E. Hudspeth died at the home of Miss Mary Wachter last Sunday afternoon, and was buried in the Bandera cemetery Monday evening.

"Aunt Mary," as she was affectionately called was born in Pickens county, Alabama, September 20, 1834, being therefore at the time of her death almost 89 years old. She was married to William Hudspeth in Arkansas in 1854, and came to Texas in 1864, and after the Civil War came to Bandera, where her husband engaged in the practice of law. He founded The Bandera Enterprise and was its editor a number of years. Mr. Hudspeth died in 1907.

Despite her extreme age "Aunt Mary" was able to get about to visit her friends in town occasionally. She was loved by everyone, and was of that sweet motherly disposition that won friends for her throughout her long life. It is with sadness that we chronicle her death for we know she will be missed from our community, but her influence still lives and will be felt for many years to come.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. A. Potts.

Tick Eradication.

About 200 ranchmen and farmers from all over the county gathered at the court house in Bandera Monday afternoon to discuss with the commissioners court the feasibility to abandon the tick eradication campaign that has been on in this county for the past two years. Much was said for and against the dipping of stock to eradicate the fever tick, and after hearing both sides the commissioners decided to continue dipping under regulations of the State Livestock Sanitary Board.

Inspector Jack Miles of Boerne and Inspector E. J. Murray of Hondo were present at the meeting and urged the people not to abandon the work that is being done at this stage as it would all have to be done over again and with greater expenses. It seems that the dipping proposition is proving burdensome and some of the ranchmen have lost cattle by complying with the provisions of the eradication law, while on the other hand it is asserted that if Bandera county ever again is to eradicate a quarantine will be established that will keep any of our cattle, horses or mules from leaving the county. Thus it looks as if we were suspended "between the devil and the deep blue sea."

Mrs. O. D. Keese and two children, and Mrs. T. H. Philips and children were visitors in Medina Saturday.

Miss Texas Fellers is visiting at Fredericksburg for a few days.

Ben Johnson and Lon Elam were business visitors in Bandera Tuesday.

Mrs. George Hinds and three children, Mrs. Leslie Hinds, Mrs. Andy Reed and baby, Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Moffat and Mrs. O. D. Keese and children were guests in the Seale home Thursday.

Mrs. Paul Jackson and baby, Mary Louise, of Port Arthur, are spending a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Philips.

Mrs. J. E. Kirkland and little granddaughter Peggy Louise Bittle, and Miss Jennie Kirkland left last Wednesday for Port Arthur where they will visit for a few weeks.

Miss Jewell Wilson was the guest of Miss Sylva Keese Sunday.

PEACH SEEDS WANTED.

We will pay four cents per pound for good fresh peach seeds delivered at Davenport & Co.'s store in Bandera, H. E. Picken's store at Pipe Creek, G. W. Blanta's at Medina, and John Burns at Tarpley. No cooked seeds wanted.—Manss Bros. Nurseries, Kerrville and Center Point, Texas. 6t

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Newton of San Antonio and Mrs. Newton's sister, Miss Emma Clere, of St. Louis were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Leighton, near Tarpley last week-end and were accompanied back to San Antonio by little Miss Enlouise Leighton.

No Election

There will be no special election held on the fourth Saturday in July to vote on the proposed highway amendment to the constitution, Attorney General Keeling having held that failure to publish the proposed amendment within the required time is fatal to its adoption, and that an election on the 28th would be null and void. "Attorney General Keeling held that the provision of the constitution requiring that proposed amendments to the constitution shall be duly published once a week for four weeks commencing at least three months before an election, is mandatory and can not be waived, and the required notice can not be dispensed with.

It is also pointed out that the time can not be extended because the date for the election is fixed in the proposed amendment.

COMMITTEE.

Bandera and Quihi baseball teams crossed bats here yesterday and there was dust in the air. When it cleared it found that Bandera was victorious by a score of 9 to 6.

The following young folks took dinner last Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gabe Anderwald: Miss Agatha Mazurek of Bandera, Matty Cleveland, Courtney Evans, Louis Fougerat, Joe Cleveland, Louis Cleveland, all of Gonzales.

Miss Augustina Anderwald has gone to San Antonio.

James Boyle is now delivering the San Antonio Daily and Sunday Light at 15c per week or $1.00 for three months. Latest news. In Bandera three hours after publication. tf

Mrs. Paul Jackson and Mrs. John Phillips came in from Port Arthur Saturday to visit relatives at Lima.

J. Y. Miller, who lives above Medina, returned Saturday from a business trip to Williams Arizona. He says old Bandera county is good enough for him.

WINAN'S CREEK

Miss Hortense Thomas spent last week-end with homefolks at Center Point.

Winan's Creek Sunday School will organize July 15th.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Sulpy have as their guest Mrs. Sulpy's mother, Mrs. Ruby Hester Self.

Mr. and Mrs. S. spent last week with homefolks at Bandera.

Good Roads Rally.

There will be a good roads rally at Medina Saturday, July 14, at 3 p. m., when speakers will take place and plans will be made for the bridge. Everybody urged to be present.

The fair catalogues have been issued and you should get some from M. R. Thalmann and send to your friends abroad.

We are pleased to note that more interest is being taken in the Bandera county fair as the time approaches for the big event to take place. Do not lose sight of the fact that the annual show and sale of the United Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association takes place simultaneously with the fair and that will be a big attraction within itself. Bandera should unite unite in making this the best fair ever held. A free rodeo and other free amusements will be among the features of the fair.

We're moving this week. Hence we have no apologies to offer for the shortcomings of the little old home paper. Fact is we consider we are lucky to get out a paper at all.

Donations to the Bandera county soldier monument fund continue to come in slowly. We will announce the names of all contributors in next week's issue of the New Era.

Among the visitors at the home of Paul Moravietz last week were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Moravietz, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Kolodziej of San Antonio, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kohler and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar George, Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Degen and son, all of San Antonio, and Col. To the Sheriff or any Constable of Bandera County, Greeting:

You are Hereby Commanded to cause to be published once each week for a period of ten days before the return day here of, in a newspaper of general circulation which has been continuously and regularly published for a period of not less than one year in said Bandera County, a copy of the following notice:

THE STATE OF TEXAS

To all persons interested in the Estate of L. B. C. Buckelew, deceased. Rachel A. E. Buckelew has filed in the County Court of Bandera County, an application for the Probate of the last Will and Testament of said L. B. C. Buckelew, deceased filed with said application, and for Letters Testamentary of the estate of L. B. C. Buckelew, deceased, which will be heard at the next term of said court commencing on the 23rd Monday in July A. D. 1923, the same being the 16th day of July A. D. 1923 at the Court House thereof, in Bandera, Texas, at which time all persons interested in said estate may appear and contest said application, should they desire to do so.

Herein fail not, but have you before said Court on the said first day of the next term thereof this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court, at office in Bandera, Texas, this 22nd day of June A. D. 1923.

MARK McBRYDE, Clerk

House Joint Resolution No. 16

Proposing an amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, which relates to taxation and revenues, by adding thereto a new section to be known as Section 9a, directing the Legislature to provide for the construction, operation and maintenance, under State control, of a State system of public highways, providing for an election for the ratification or rejection of amendment herein proposed, and making an appropriation to defray expenses of said election.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1. That there be submitted to the people of Texas, for ratification or rejection at a special election provided herein an amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, by adding thereto a new section to be known as Section 9a, which shall read as follows:

Section 9a. The Legislature is hereby authorized and directed to provide for the creation, establishment, construction and maintenance and repair of a system of improved highways throughout the state to be under the control of the State; and in order that the State may provide the means, resources and instrumentalities for the establishment and maintenance of such system of highways, the Legislature is empowered to levy and cause to be collected special excise and ad valorem taxes, in addition to those permitted for other purposes in the Constitution, but such an ad valorem tax shall be imposed only for the purpose of retiring the bonds authorized by vote of the people of this State as provided for hereinafter in this Section.

When said system shall have been designated and taken over for the State as provided in Section A hereof, the Legislature is authorized to make provision for the equitable compensation to counties for the value of such improvements as have been theretoore constructed by the counties in the State.

Provided, also that save for the State highway system, in all other respects, Counties shall have the right to build, construct and maintain roads, turnpikes and bridges within their respective boundaries and the Constitutional provisions relating thereto are not qualified or repealed by reason hereof.

The Legislature, at any Regular or Special Session, is authorized and directed to pass and enact all appropriate legislation necessary to carry out and effectuate the purpose and intent of these Articles.

Sec. 2. The Governor of the State is hereby directed to cause to be issued his necessary proclamation for an election to be held on the fourth Saturday in July, 1923, at which election this amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors of this State for adoption or rejection and shall make the publication required by the Constitution and Laws of the State. Said election shall be held under and in accordance with the General Election Laws of the State, and the ballots for said election shall have printed or written thereon in plain letters the following words:

"OFFICIAL BALLOT". "For the amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a State system of highways."

"Against the amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas providing for a State system of highways."

Those voters who favor such an amendment shall erase by marking a line through the words "Against the to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas providing for a State system of public highways." Those who oppose such an amendment to Article 8, shall erase by marking a line through them, the words, "For the amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the state of Texas, providing for a State system of public highways." And the result of the election shall be published and declared according to majority of votes cast in the election.

Sec. 3. The sum of Five Thousand Dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the treasury not otherwise appropriated for the purpose of the proclamation and publication of this amendment and the election to be held hereunder.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA and DANGER

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the handy trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

CERTIFICATE OF COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

COUNTY OF BANDERA) In the Commissioners' Court:

WE CERTIFY that we have examined the Collector's report of lands and town lots assessed on the Tax Rolls of Bandera County, for the year 1922, which are delinquent for the taxes of 1922, and find the same correct, and that Henry Stevens, Tax Collector, is entitled to credit for the taxes shown thereon.

Given in open Court this 14th day of May, A. D. 1923.

A. L. MANSFIELD, County Judge.
J. B. HOLT,
J. L. EDWARDS.
R. L. MORRIS.
B. F. O'BRYANT,
County Commissioners of said County.

Attest: MARK McBRYDE, County Clerk.
By R. I. RISINGER, Deputy.

ILLINGS & SON

The suggestion of William F. Buckner of Paris, Mo., that the 32 surviving veterans of the Mexican War assemble in reunion, has caused San Antonio friends of Amasa Clark of Bandera county, to start a movement to send Mr. Clark to the convention if it is held, says the San Antonio Light in its Sunday issue, which contained the old veteran's picture along with a two column write up. Mr. Buckner's proposal was made July 7, when press dispatches said that he wanted to assemble the men who risked their lives in '46 for one last meeting. Whether this will be done is a question. Most of these are around ninety-five years of age, and they would find it difficult to travel. Friends of Mr. Clark claim that he is physically able to make the trip, although he looks back upon almost 100 years of life. They also say they will raise a fund to send him in the best style if he will go. Mr. Clark was born on Socharrie Creek in New York, September 3, 1828. J. M. Hunter's Pioneer History of Bandera County, issued in 1922, tells a most interesting history of Mr. Clark's life.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Cleophas Dugos, July 17, a boy.

A grand barbecue will be given at Medina, Wednesday, July 25, and there's going to be a big time for all who attend. Goat roping, calf roping, baseball game and other amusements will be provided, and twenty-five cents will admit to all of them as well as pay for the big dinner. The barbecue is being given for the benefit of the school, and it is expected that a big crowd will be in attendance. Make your arrangements to go for those Medina folks are royal entertainers.

Buys Meat Market

Fred Mansfield has purchased the Stevens' meat market and will take possession next Monday. Fred is an all around live business man and will keep the market up to its excellent standard. Mr. Stevens will open a barbecue and hamburger stand in a building now being erected.

Buy a Fair Tag

The sale of tags for the county fair is not as encouraging as it should be. The money raised from the sale of these tags will be used in purchasing premiums in the junior department, and every citizen should buy at least one of the little red tags. Help the boys and girls.

Tapped His Till

Some sneak thief entered S. Adamson's little store one night this week and extracted several checks from the money till. Mr. Adamson discovered his loss yesterday morning when several of the checks were found scattered about the streets. No currency or silver was taken as the till contained only checks. It is supposed the intruder entered while Mr. Adamson was in a rear room of the building. About $20 in checks were taken.

Neal Coulter, one of Medina's popular young men, was a visitor in the city Sunday.

A small building is to be erected adjoining J. F. Tait's shop to be used as a hamburger stand.

Mrs. R. A. Masters, of Globe, Arizona, will arrive today on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Smith of Medina.

Little Miss Eloise Warren, of San Antonio, is the guest this week of her friends, Misses Evelyn and Selma Mansfield.

Carl F. Wheeler will lecture at Crockett school house near Tuff next Sunday, July 22, at 11 o'clock. The subject will be "The Price We Pay."

Joe Holt, Jr., and Miss Ida Marquis were married at Tarpley yesterday, Rev. B. L. Ray officiating. They left immediately for Arizona to reside. They are worthy young people and have a host of friends who wish them much joy and happiness through life.

A big barbecue was pulled off at Harper yesterday, and a number of our people went over to attend it. The Bandera baseball team played a game at Harper with the Fredericksburg team, losing by a score of 6 to 3.

In New Quarters.

The New Era's plant was moved last Friday to new quarters in the Opera House Basement. Frank G. Anderwald, Ernest Haby, Rudolph Scheidt, directed by M. F. Johnston, moved the heavy machinery without a break or mishap, although it was Friday, the thirteenth. The black cat failed to show up until the next day, when it came strolling into the new sanctum as an omen of good luck.

Mrs. Ben Baker, Mrs. Judith Baker, and Mrs. George Tait, all of Medina were at the Woodmen Circle meeting.

Raymond Hicks spent a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Fee and also at the Garison Ranch near Medina last week.

Mrs. Jim Surber returned Tuesda from a very enjoyable trip to Clifton, Arizona. She has promised to write up her trip for publication in the next issue of the New Era.

Mr. and Mrs. U. C. Hester and children of Fort Worth, are visiting Mrs. Hester's father, H. L. Jackson at Tarpley for a week. Mr. Hester will try his luck at fishing in the Medina.

A delegation composed of the following persons came down from Lima Monday to attend probate court: W. S. Hinds, and wife, Mrs. L. B. C. Buckelew, Jim Buckelew, George Hinds, Bud Hill and family, Wat Fellers and wife.

P. A. Pue was down from Medina and brought a neat sign which he painted for the New Era. Mr. Pue weilds an artistic brush and the work he executed for the New Era is about the neatest that is to be seen in Bandera.

PREPARE FOR EMERGENCIES

The wise individual is he who so regulates his income and outgo that emergencies are provided for automatically. He knows the meaning of peace of mind, because he has money laid by. His chin is up, his step is brisk, he is master—not slave—of circumstances.

VANDERPOOL

The Fourth of July was a big occasion in Vanderpool. In fact it is doubtful if the day was ever celebrated here in a more fitting manner or with a larger crowd. The number of people here is a matter of guess work, so we will guess about 3,000. They came from most every community of the county, and a nice attendance was had from Houston San Antonio, Dondo, D'Hanis, Uvalde, Barksdale, Sabinal, Seguin, Comstock, Knippa, Leakey, Rio Frio, Imperial and Selma, California. The Modern Woodmen had made all preparation for the comfort of the vast crowd and the barbecued meat was delicious, as well as all the other eats and drinks. All the amusements for the day were successfully carried out.

Mrs. Kelpie Hughes and children departed for their home in El Paso, after a five weeks stay with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Rainey and her sister, Mrs. G. E. Clayton.

N. L. Mayes, a former citizen of this community, but now of Selma, California, came in this week to look after his ranches here and visit his son, Leonard, Mayes and family and his daughters, Mrs. Frank Weed and Mrs. Arthur Bridges.

G. M. Foster has just purchased a new Maxwell car.

Mrs. O. B. Johnson and three little daughters of Imperial, California, came to Comstock last of June and accompanied her parents, S. L. Humphries and family of that city to Vanderpool. She will visit her sister, Mrs. Bon O'Bryant and her many friends here before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Rainey have returned from their extended trip over North Central Texas.

Mrs. Travis Alley of Selma California, came in the latter part of June. She had quite a pleasant trip, having come the northern route and visited relatives in the different states. She is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Woodward of Sabinal.

Dr. A. J. Copass, of Ft. Worth, a Missionary Baptist evangelist, who is an exceptionally able minister that has been preaching over most of the United States, began a protracted meeting at Utopia Sunday. Hal Miller, a great singer and musician is with him as he has been at numbers of other places. They will be assisted by our pastor, Rev. O. J. Cole. A great meeting is anticipated.

Woodmen Circle Entertain

Bandera Grove Woodmen Circle entertained the degree team of Myrtle Grove Circle of San Antonio last Sunday with a picnic dinner on the river. In the afternoon degree work was exemplified by the visiting team when a number of candidates were initiated at the Cox Opera House. Afterward the doors were thrown open and a public exhibition of drill work was given. Members of the order were present from Medina, Tarpley, Comfort and other places. The local grove has a membership of nineteen, but is expected to increase from time to time.

Pete Anderwald has leased the L. H. Hayes meat market. Will Hayes, who has had charge of the market for some time, has moved to the Melville Fitzgerald ranch where he has accepted a position.

Orville Keese and W. D. Keese, of Medina, were transacting business in Bandera Tuesday.

GRAND BALL, Saturday night July 21, at the James Cox Opera House. Negro Jazz Band. Big Time. Come.

HENRY HOOD

The passing of Mrs. Mary Hud-speth, mention of whose death was made in last week's New Era, leaves a vacancy that can never be filled. She was, of the true type of Southern womanhood. Eulosie Leighton which appeared in the Evening News bears a strong resemblance to the bright, shortly after her marriage to lovely little girl we knew in the William Hudspeth. Although she days gone by. We would like to was childless she "mothered" publish the Evening News article a number of orphan children, among them being Hon. Claude Hudspeth, now Congressman from this district. She was loyal and faithful to her friends and all the weather was never too stormy or the night too dark for her to heed the call of distress. Ever ready to respond when sickness invaded the home of her neighbors, her tender ministrations were given in kindness all over this town and in the surrounding communities. Gentle, Kind and cheerful always, Aunt Mary's influence was a blessing to all with whom she came in contact. She fondled the babe that came oozing from its mother's arms to be fondled and cared its growth to a healthy, robust youngster and saw it enter upon man-hood's or womanhood's estate; she was there when the marriage ceremony was performed, heard it assume the responsibilities of fatherhood and motherhood, and when the next offspring came to bring happiness to the new father or mother. Aunt Mary has tened right over to bless the new arrival and hear its coo as she had heard its father or its mother coo in the first days of infancy, and she mothered it as she had done in other instances. Her long life was well spent in the service of others, her mission seeming to be to bring sunshine into the homes of this town. She was eighty-nine years of age when the summons came for her to leave us —eighty-nine years of blessing to humankind. Her presence was a benediction; her passing fills us with sorrow and woe.

Boerne is out to secure the location of the new West Texas Technological College. The "Tech" board paid Boerne a visit last Saturday, and were greatly impressed with the site offered. The location of the college there will benefit Bandera, so we're wishing our neighbor success in securing it.

All of the old time fiddlers of the county are urged to send us their names and to enter the Old Fiddlers' Contest, that will be pulled off on Old Settlers' Day at the county fair. After the contest the boys and girls of forty years ago will be permitted to "swing corners and promenade." Get your partner for the next square.

Don't worry. Our road to San Antonio will soon be put in first class shape.

"There is a Reason"

Little Girl Gets Publicity.

Last Thursday's San Antonio Evening News contained a two column write-up of Little Miss Eulosie Leighton, the eight-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe J. Leighton of Tarpley. The little girl's picture was printed in connection with the write-up. Now, Eulosie has not performed some great stunt to get into print, but just merely made her first trip to the barber's and the wonderment and surprise that she encountered when she caught the eye of a news-paper reporter who took her in hand and showed her the sights of the city, and gained an interesting interview. Eulosie found many wonderful things in the city and will talk about them for many years to come. Her visit there brings to mind, that her mother, Mrs. Eula Willis Leigh-ton, when a little girl about eight years old, was a guest in the New Era editor's home in Mason dur-ing one Christmas, time, and the happiness of the little miss of that day to the joy of the little miss of the present was very much the same. We have an old faded photograph of Eula Willis taken at the time she was eight years old, and the picture of type of Southern womanhood. Eulosie Leighton which appeared strong resemblance to the bright-ness of her mother. A few days ago we would like to publish the Evening News article about the little miss of the present.

Baby Chicks Saved From Death.

Death by starvation and lack of attention to 600 baby chicks was averted by the efforts of em-ployes of the San Antonio post office Saturday, when an S. O. S. message was sent to the consignee a woman living at Pipe Creek, about nine miles from here.

In eight cartons, 600 baby chicks of the ancona type had been shipped from a poultry farm at Kansas City. Due to the fact that the train bearing the baby chicks did not make connec-tions with the Bandera stage line Saturday morning, the chicks would have been compelled to have remained in the San Antonio postoffice until Monday if the pos-tal employes had not taken im-mediate steps to rescue the chicks from their predicament.

A long distance was put in to Pipe Creek, and the consignee of the chickens notified. An auto-mobile was sent to San Antonio Saturday afternoon to carry the baby chickens to their future home in Pipe Creek. A small number of the chicks had died en route as a result of the tremendous heat generated in the close quarters.

Postal employes are forbidden by regulations to either feed or water chickens in transit. One postal employe suggested that if the chickens had not been rescued that a postal regulation would have been broken Sunday morn-ing.—San Antonio Light.

We understand the chicks men-tioned belonged to Calvin Calla-ham of Pipe Creek.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

County if, Bander i

Whereas, on the 3rd day of July, 1923, the undersigned by our instrument in writing of that date was appointed substitute trustee in a certain deed of trust, recorded in Vol. 2 on Page 633 and 634, Deed of Trust Records of said Bandera county, Texas, said deed of trust executed and delivered to E. H. Borell, Sheriff on the 27th day of January, 1922 by Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen for better securing the payment of a certain promis-sory note for the principal sum of $640.00, more fully described in said deed of trust, executed by the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen, said note being payable to the order of R. D. McCrum, at San Antonio, Texas, of even date with said deed of trust, bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum from its date, interest payable semi-annually, the principal sum of said note being payable eighteen months after its date, said note providing that in event of de-fault in failure to pay any installment of principal or interest, when due, the payee or holder may at op-tion declare the entire indebted-ness evidenced thereby at once due and payable and also providing for the payment of ten per cent additional on the amount of principal and interest then due as attorney's fees, if placed in the hands of attorneys for collection; and,

Whereas, the said R. D. Mc-Crum is the holder and owner of said note, and the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen have wholly failed to pay any interest whatsoever on said note, although two semi-annual install-ments of interest have become due and payable since its execu-tion and delivery to said R. D. McCrum, and the said R. D. Mc-Crum has exercised the option in said note so provided, and has declared the entire indebtedness evidenced thereby at once due and payable and has hereto-fore notified the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen in writing, and there is now due on said note the principal sum of $640.00, interest in the sum of $78.22, and attorney's fees in the sum of $71.82, making the aggre-gate amount due $790.04; and

Whereas, the undersigned has been requested by the said R. D. McCrum to enforce said trust, I will offer for sale between the legal hours thereof, to-wit, be-tween the hours if 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. at public auction, to the highest bidder, on the first Tuesday in August, 1923, the same being the 7th day of said month, at the courthouse door in the town of Bandera, in Bandera county, Texas, the following described property, to-wit: The West one-fourth of Sec. 330.1, Cert. 1687, in Bandera county, Texas, contain-ing 320 acres of land, as per field notes in Vol. B. No. 1, page 342, Bandera county Surveyor's Re-cords; with all rights, members and appurtenances thereto in any-wise belonging.

Witness my hand the 3rd day of July 1923

Trustee.

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved — Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Protected Tablet Called "Calo-tabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calo-mel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified from those objection-able qualities which have here-tofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, bad breath and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on ac-count of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in 'ori-ginal, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the small trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calo-tabs.—(Adv.)

Now is the time to get that good milk cooler and get ready for hot weather. For it is coming.—Ban-dera Plumbing and Tin Shop.

Livergard—The New Laxative.

Mothers: Livergard is the new Laxative we cannot improve. Safe and best for the Baby, Father, Mother, grandparents and strong. When the bowels are sluggish, LIVER GARD makes laughing babies out of puny ones; keeps old folks young. A bottle today keeps ills away. Children are eager for it, grown-ups praise it. At good drug stores. Writes us for free samples. Lungardia Company, Dallas, Texas. For Sale by Bil-lings & Son.

STOP THAT ITCHING

Use Blue Star Remedy for Eczema, Itch, Tetter or Cracked Hands, Ring Worms, Chapped Face, Poison Oak, Sunburn, Old Sores or Sores on Chil-dren. It relieves all forms of Sore Feet. For sale by Billings & Son, Druggists.

NO TRESPASSING.

No hunting, trapping, cutting of bee trees, or trespassing allowed on my land. I will pay a liberal reward for information that will lead to the conviction of any party or parties tearing down and going over my fences.—Hansen Ranch. H. C. Hansen, prop. Mar 1-12mp

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condi-tion will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE con-tains an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine which assists in Purifying the Blood. Both are Needed. Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.

When you come to the fair to be held in Bandera August 1, 2, and 3, bring along an extra dol-lar for the fund now being raised to erect a monument to the Ban-dera county boys who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War. This fund should be grow-ing faster than it is. We want to raise the money and provide a monument to be unveiled on next Armistice Day. Will you help?

Few Bandera people realize that a big undertaking has been successfully accomplished right here in this town. We refer to the printing and binding of the book, "The Trail Drivers of the South-west," the second volume of the old trail driver's book, which was turned out in the New Era office. This book was compiled and written by J. M. Hunter, under direction of Mr. George W. Saunders, presi-dent of the Old Time Trail Drivers' Association. It's publi-lation will be nation-wide. Orders are coming in for the book from all parts of the United States. It has been quite a task to print this 500-page book in our little office, but we're proud of it, and every Bandera citizen should also be proud of it. The book can be obtained at this office for $3.00, or from Mr. Geo. W. Saunders, care Union Stock Yards, San Antonio, Texas.

The County Fair.

The county fair is only two weeks off. A big crowd is com-ing and it is up to Bandera to get ready to entertain the visi-tors. Medina, Tarpley, Pipe Creek and Bandera are coming strong. All sorts of entertain-ment will be provided the three days and nights of the fair. Among the features will be a free rodeo managed by Ed Mansfield. The first night of the fair, will be known as Medina night, at which time a fine program will be pre-sented by the people of that town. The next night will be Bandera Night and another fine program will be presented by the Bandera folks. The last day of the fair will be Old Settler's Day, the program for which is being prepared. On this day every man and woman who came to Bandera before 1910 will be expected to register their names in a book furnished for the purpose, and it will be the aim of the committee in charge of the day's program to bring old friends together in a great reunion. The exhibits at the fair will be as good this year as usual and perhaps better.

During the three days of the fair, August 1, 2 and 3, the United Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association will hold their annu-al show and sale, and it is expect-ed that sheep and goat men from all over West and Southwest Texas will be here. Let's make them feel that they are in the house of friends and give them a real taste of Bandera hospitality. Now everybody get ready and make the fair all it should be.

The devastation of crops by grasshoppers in Mason, McCul-loch, and other counties to the north of us is complete. Only a few of the hoppers have appeared in this county so far and but lit-tle damage has been done. We're hoping for a severe winter which will destroy the pest and prevent them from appearing next year. Some people seem to think that the turkeys and chickens on the farms have will eradicate the hoppers, but will be too numerous if they get started and there won't be enough turkeys and chickens to noticeably depopulate them.

The Cattle-Tick Blues.

God made farmers To hoe and plow,
God made ticks But put them on the cow.
And they'll be there too As sure as you are born If we dip cows Till the resurrection morn.

Grass gets the cotton, Weeds gets the corn, But fuss old sooky, Apl grab her by the horn. Take her to the dipping vat And jump her in Yo satisfy the law You'll commit a sin.

Dip your cattle Is all you hear From January first Till the end of the year, I dipped on the first And on the fifteenth too And you had better dip cattle, Doggone your soul.

The vets come around And the agent too, They climb into our pastures, And ramble through. And then they'll say, If it rains or shines You must dip those cattle, Or you'll pay a fine.

There are some kinds of folks That I can't stand A yankee trick doctor And a dipping man. They cut out my whiskey And make me dip too The whiskey don't bother But the dippin' do.

Preacher in the pulpit, Bible in hand Trying to get the people To understand The path of right From the path of wrong But it ain't no use For to sing a song. This dipping law is going From bad to worse It makes a deacon tell lies And a preacher cuss.

If you dip your cow And leave your calf They'll make you go back, If it's a mile and a half If you dip ninety-nine And let one go loose They'll put ye in the calaboose.

Old Squire Brown Wouldn't dip his cow He got into court An ha's sorry now. The judge said tap bucks And fifteen days And the squire said He'd change his ways.

Inspector told me I had two years Then he'd set me free. I dipped two years And several more And there's an inspector Standing at my door. He's got a dipping notice In his hand.

I wish I'd never seen A dipping man Taint no use in your Singing your song We'll be here dipping Till we're dead and gone. How do you expect To ever get through If you don't dip the rabbits An the gophers too?

—Boerne Star.

Quite a number of our readers have asked what has become of Gandertone, the local prognosti-cator. The old fellow got peeved a short time ago because the New Era reported a rain that came contrary to his prediction and he absolutely refuses to "prophesy" for publication. However, he says the ticks will be here a thousand years after they are eradicated."

Other counties are building good roads and putting in con-crete bridges, why not Bandera?

The suggestion made some time ago that Bandera provide a golf course on the Loop here for our visitors should not be relegated to the realms of innocuous desue-tude. Steps should be taken looking to the preparation of an 18-hole course, for it would mean that many people would be at-tracted here who would not come otherwise.

The New Era one year and a copy of the Pioneer History of Bandera County for $2.00.

MEDINA NEWS ITEMS.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Smith and daughters, Misses Dovie and Lela Mae, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Harpers visited Mrs. Smith's brother, Mervin Akin last week.

Miss Inez Moore and Frances Gilbert, of San Antonio, were guests of Miss Tennessee Whitehead last Sunday. Miss Whitehead accompanied hem back to San Antonio and returned Wednesday.

The Sunday School and B. Y. P. U. Training School was recently held at the Medina Baptist church. Miss Ruth E. Davis, of Galveston, assisted by local workers, held classes daily in the Sunday school work, and senior, intermediate and junior B. Y. P. U. methods. The interest and attendance was splendid through out the week, and a goodly number of awards are soon to be issued to those completing the courses.

The Methodist meeting closed last Sunday night with several additions to the Methodist church.

H. Chaffin, mother and family of Nixon, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Richards last week. They had a splendid time fishing and enjoying excursions in the river. Mr. Chaffin reports crop conditions in his region promising and stock of all kinds doing fine.

The New Era was favored with a visit Tuesday by Veteran W. J. Wheeler, who dropped in to give us some data, regarding his frontier experiences. He served as a ranger in Capt. Tom Harrison's company, which was organized in 1874 and for a time was stationed at old Fort Belknap, in Young county. He engaged in a number of fights with the Indians, and promised to write up some of his experiences for publication in the New Era. Besides serving his state as a ranger Mr. Wheeler served in the Confederate army, and saw hard service in the ranks as a private.

Colonel and Mrs. G. B. Place and little son, who were guests for two weeks at the Riverside Inn, returned to San Antonio last Friday.

Larger Paper Next Week.

Next week the New Era will appear in its present size, coming out as a Fair Edition. A few extra copies will be on sale at five cents per copy. It will contain a valuable reading and you should secure several copies to send to your friends.

TUFF TOPICS.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Smartt, of California, spent a few days here last week with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Adams and family, of Onona, visited relatives in this vicinity last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Brown and sons returned to their home in San Antonio Saturday. Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. O. L. Adams, and daughter, Kathleen, accompanied them.

Bernard Grubbs of Portland, Oregon, is visiting his sister, Mrs. O. W. Livingston.

Mrs. Eda Weed returned home Sunday from a visit to Little Creek.

Miss Addie Adams left Saturday for Onona where she expects to attend school this year.

Mrs. Ella Phillips and little son left Saturday for their home at Port Arthur, after spending a week with her mother, Mrs. C. P. Sutherland.

Walter Kneese, of Fredericksburg, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Bauerlein this week.

Last Friday night a party of young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Livingston for a coon hunt. Lots of excitement occurred when the dogs located a big fat 22 pound coon calmly feeding on Mr. Livingston's corn crop; but what chance had one little coon among three dogs and twelve people? After the fight Mrs. Livingston finished the evening's entertaining by serving cake and coffee.

Mrs. E. E. Coughran and children of Tarpley, are spending a few weeks in town while Mr. Coughran is undergoing medical treatment.

When you come to the fair next week call at the New Era's new quarters and make yourself at home.

Mrs. Cahill and son, Roscoe, accompanied by Mrs. Cahill's mother Mrs. Boren, all of San Antonio, are at the Riverside Inn.

Next week the New Era will publish a sketch of Mrs. J. M. Witt, one of the pioneer mothers of the Hill country written several years ago by N. G. Sument. Sometime ago the New Era published a sketch written by Mrs. Witt, but the one we will publish next week will also be interesting to our readers, and you are requested to look for it.

The County Fair.

Next Wednesday the third annual Bandera County Fair begins. Owing to the fact that the commodous warehouse of the Bandera County Ranchmen and Farmer's Association, which has heretofore been used for an exhibit hall, is still full of wool which has not yet been sold and shipped, the building known as the old saloon building adjacent to the big warehouse will be used for the fair's purposes, and the exhibits will be placed therein, while the stock pens will be placed where they were last year. The following annual show and sale of the United Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association will be held in conjunction with the fair this year, which insures that there will be plenty of high class sheep and goats on hand, as well as other livestock for exhibition and sale.

A big free rodeo is to be pulled off during the fair, entertainments by Medina and Bandera communities, carnival attractions, and other forms of amusements will be here to entertain the big crowds that are expected to be in attendance each day of the fair, and the old settlers' day program on the last day to wind up with an old fiddler's contest and old fashioned ball at night.

On Sound Basis After the War

Soon after the civil war President Grant put this country on a sound financial basis. On his recommendation congress passed an act "to strengthen public credit," and specie payments were later resumed.

These are prosperous days in this land, and wise people are banking their surplus cash.

Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Click and children visited Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Keese Sunday.

Married.

Mr. Roy Buckelew and Miss Lorena Swinney were married at Medina last Saturday, Rev. P. M. Buckelew officiating. They are worthy young people of the Wallace Creek community and the New Era joins their many friends in congratulations and best wishes.

Andy Jones and other pioneers. After a few reminiscent talks and greetings, covering a session of two hours, the meeting will adjourn after singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Friday night at the Opera House, an Old Fiddlers' Contest will be pulled off. Volunteers for this contest are solicited. Only old time fiddlers will be permitted to enter, and only the old time tunes will be played. The Judges in this contest will be C. Y. Billings, Ed Mansfield, and Arthur Pue. See list of tunes from which selections may be made by the fiddlers in another column.

After the old fiddlers' contest the benches in the spacious hall will be cleared and the old folks only will enjoy some of the old fashioned dances that were in vogue forty years ago. Squares, quadrilles, polkas, waltzes, schottisches and clogs will be danced and the old timers can trip the light fantastic toe with their partners of bygone days. This dance is for the folks over 45 only and no modern jazzing will be permitted. No charges made. John H. Rose and Hendrie Rawlings will "call" as they used to call sets many years ago.

Old Settlers' Attention.

Badges will be provided for all of the old settlers who attend the fair on Friday, August 3, that is, all settlers who came to Bandera county previous to 1910, and who are now over fifty years old. Get your badge when you register at the exhibit hall. The reception committee for Old Settler's Day is composed of J. M. Hunter, Lee Risinger, W. S. Partridge, Mrs. Mattie Jones and Mrs. Harriet Chipman.

The Old Settlers' Day.

The Old Settlers' Day at the Bandera County Fair, on Friday of next week, will be one of the chief attractions of the Fair. Every citizen of the county who came here prior to 1910, will be considered an old settler, but those who came here in the early sixties, seventies, eighties and nineties will be considered as belonging to the pioneer settlers, and it is desired that each one who attends the fair will get a badge and register their names in a book provided for the purpose at the exhibit hall. The following program has been arranged for the old settlers:

Friday morning, August 3, will be given over to registration and renewing acquaintances.

Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, all of the old settlers are requested to assemble at James Cox's Opera House, where short addresses will be made, and a general reunion will be held. On the platform seats will be provided for Amasa Clark, George Hay, Seco Smith, John Pyka, Mrs. John Adamietz, Mrs. Chas. Monague, Mrs. Moravietz, Mrs. F. L. Hicks, C. W. Fagan, Gabe Andrewald, Chas. de Montel, Mrs. Annie E. Brown, Tom Laxson, J. A. Head, John A. Miller, Mrs. Lordsburg is 72 miles from Deming. We camped there on the sixth night, and ate dinner at Duncan, Arizona next day. Arrived at Clifton June 27, after traveling 900 miles. We spent three weeks in Clifton with my brother, who is sheriff of Greenlee county, Arizona. He came as far as El Paso with me and I returned. Clifton is a copper mining town, as is also Morenci, five miles from there. I had a fine trip and arrived home July 18. The Deans are delighted with California.

Barbecue at Medina.

Many of our people went to the barbecue at Medina yesterday and all report a fine time. A pulled apart when it came on showed 6 to 8 in. of fat. The barbecue left no stone unturned to make everything enjoyable for the vast crowd, and the general verdict is that the barbecue was a great success in every way. A prize was given for the purpose of raising funds for the Medina school.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Allen and Misses Annie Allen, and Miss Mary Allen, of San Antonio, are here for a two months' stay at the Riverside Inn.

Next week will be Home Coming Week in Bandera. Let every former citizen come to the fair and be on hand at the Old Settler's Reunion Friday, August 3.

WHY NOT BE INDEPENDENT?

Abraham Lincoln is one of the most outstanding examples of what a man may make of himself if his desire to succeed is great enough. It is within the power of any person who earns to have financial independence — in time. One doesn't need to be so much schooled to save as he needs to teach himself how to spend. It is seems so easy to treat one's self to that temporary, tingling exhilaration of spending five dollars for something he thinks he wants, than to feel that permanent, solid feeling of independence that comes with its denial and saving that five spot. Future comfort and prosperity will live and grow in the savings account if you start now.

We pay 4½ per cent interest on savings.

My Trip to Arizona.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dean, their little son, Harold, J. A. Gibbons and George Dean, left Center Point June 21 for Selma, California, accompanied by the writer as far as Clifton, Arizona. The first day we nooned on Johnson Fork of the Llano, and that evening reached Roosevelt where we spent the night with my brother-in-law, W. A. Surber, and family. Next day we ate dinner twelve miles west of Sonora, and went on to Onona, a nice town with free camp house equipped with water, shower baths, electric lights, etc., an ideal place to camp. Everybody was nice to us there. Little Harold was sick and we remained over a day. We left Onona on June 23rd, crossed Live Oak Creek and went to the Pecos, camped five miles west of Sheffield. Seventy-three miles of good road brought us to the irrigated alfalfa farms at Fort Stockton. We traveled all day Sunday through a valley of alfalfa and honey. Balmorhea is a beautiful little town with canals on each side, along which grow cottonwood trees. A half mile from the town is a sulphur springs and Phantom Lake, a bathing pool with rocks about twenty feet high, the water in the lake being around fourteen feet deep. We caught fish in the canal below the lake. We traveled the Old Spanish trail, and struck the State Highway near Kent. Van Horn has a camp yard with water and lights. From there it is thirty-three miles to Sierra Blanca. Fabens is a nice town on the Rio Grande, with a forty-mile driveway into El Paso and twenty-five miles west. The Rio Grande is picturesque, with a park at Mesilla Dam. After leaving there it is a barren desert all the way to Deming, New Mexico, 83 miles. Lordsburg is 72 miles from Deming. We camped there on the sixth night, and ate dinner at Duncan, Arizona next day. Arrived at Clifton June 27, after traveling 900 miles. We spent three weeks in Clifton with my brother, who is sheriff of Greenlee county, Arizona. He came as far as El Paso with me and I returned. Next week will be Home-Coming Week at Bandera. Let every former citizen come to the fair and be on hand at the Old Settler's Reunion Friday, August 3.

Every old settler who comes to the fair is requested to register his or her name in a book which will be provided for the purpose. This list will be published in the New Era at a later date.

Next week is fair week. Put on your glad clothes and greet the visitors to our town with a hearty grip. Make them feel that Bandera is the most hospitable town on earth.

Bandera, old as she is, continues to grow. Improvements continue to be added. We honestly believe that within another hundred years Bandera will be one of the most up-to-date towns in West Texas.

The fair next week will draw people from all of the adjoining counties, as well as from distant points. It is expected that the daily attendance will be about four thousand.

With a free fair and other free amusements, Bandera ought to be able to entertain the visitors the next week. Are you sitting down on the stool of Do-Nothing and whittling on the stick of Do-Less? Get busy and help make the fair all it should be.

It does a fellow good to have somebody slap him on the back and say, "You're getting out the best paper Bandera ever had. I appreciate your efforts, and in proof of my appreciation here's a dollar and a half to keep the little old home paper coming." That's just what two different citizens of this town told the presiding elder of this great religious weekly last week. Made us feel mighty good for only a short time before a friend told us that somebody else had told him that somebody else had said the New Era was getting to be a "mighty sorry paper," and we were worth about a "dime" after all it seems the people all read it and most of them appreciate it.

Bandera has the most picturesque scenery of any region in the San Antonio trade territory, and there is no reason why we should not reach out and induce tourists to come here to enjoy our wonderful outing and camping facilities. Our region has the natural charm, superior to all others, that will delight all visitors. With the completion of a first class road all the way to San Antonio it behooves us to advertise and tell people abroad of the attractions here. Every tourist or camping party that comes to our town leaves a little money at our stores, garages, filling stations, our hotels, or with our farmers. That's outside money coming in. Every merchant and every resident and hotel keeper, and every garage man should be alive to the possibilities along this line.

The commissioners court gave the Bandera County Fair management the right to control or close the streets leading to the fair property used by the fair, and the thoroughfare that leads to the main entrance will be used as a parking place for automobiles. Kasper Dugos and Henry Adamietz have been engaged to see that autos are parked properly and to direct traffic.

Our services can't be beat—Geo. W. Saunders Livestock Commission Co., San Antonio and Fort Worth, Texas. (adv.)

Prayer of a Knocker.

Lord, please don't let this town grow! Don't let more folks move here and during that time I have fought every public movement. I've knocked everything and everybody. I have done all I can to keep this town from growing and never have spoken a good word for it. I have knocked hard and often. Whenever I saw anything progressing and enjoying himself, I have started a movement to kill the business or stop the fun. I do not want the people to stay in this town and I will do all I can by rule, law and ordinance to drive them away. It pains me, O Lord, to see that in spite of my knocking this town is beginning to grow. Some day I may be called on to put down sidewalks in front of my property and I know how but that I may have to keep up the streets that run by my premises. This, Lord, would be more than I could bear. It would cost me money, though all I have made has been right here in this town. Then, too, more people might come if this town keeps on to grow, which would cause me to lose some of my pull. I ask, therefore, to keep this town at a standstill. Amen.—Stephenville Tribune.

And about the time he uttered that "Amen" somebody hit him with a brick and when he regained consciousness he was in jail and now prays the Lord to make him a factor in the upbuilding of his town.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

County of Bandera.

Whereas, on the 3rd day of July, 1923, the undersigned by an instrument in writing of that date was appointed substitute trustee in a certain deed of trust executed by Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton on 633 and 634, Deed of Trust Records of said Bandera county, Texas, said deed of trust executed and delivered to H. Powell, trustee, on the 27th day of January, 1922 by Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen for better securing the payment of a certain promissory note for the principal sum of $6400.00, more fully described in said deed of trust, executed by the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen, said note being payable to the order of R. D. McCrum, at San Antonio, Texas, of date with said deed of trust, bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum from its date, interest payable semi-annually, the principal sum of said note being payable eighteen months after its date, said note providing that in event of the failure to pay any installment of of principal or interest, when due, the payee or holder may at option declare the entire indebtedness evidenced thereby at once due and payable and also providing for the payment of ten per cent additional on the amount of principal and interest then due as attorney's fees, if placed in the hands of attorneys for collection; and,

Whereas, the said R. D. McCrum is the holder and owner of said note, and the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen have wholly failed to pay any interest whatsoever on said note, although two semi-annual installments of interest have become due and payable since its execution and delivery to said R. D. McCrum, and the said R. D. McCrum has exercised the option in said note so provided, and has declared the entire indebtedness evidenced thereby to be now due and payable and has hereto-fore so notified the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen in writing, and there is now due on said note the principal sum of $6400.00, interest in the sum of $78.22, and attorney's fees in the sum of $71.82, making the aggregate amount due $7later.04; and;

Whereas, the undersigned has been requested by the said R. D. McCrum to enforce said trust, I will offer for sale between the legal hours thereof, towit, between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m., at public auction, to the highest bidder, on the first Tuesday in August, 1923, the same being the 7th day of said month, at the courthouse door in the town of Bandera, in Bandera county, Texas, the following described property, towit: The West one-fourth of Sec. 330.1, Cert. 1687, in Bandera county, Texas, containing 223 acres of land, as per field notes in Vol. B. No. 1, page 342, Bandera county Surveyor's Records; with all rights, members and appurtenances thereto in anywise belonging.

Witness my hand the 2rd day of July 1923.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA and DANGER

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel has been generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from these objection-able qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening, nauseating effect. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water, costs but 10c, is tasteless, so griping, so nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine with a thorough cleansing of system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger. Calotabs are sold only in original packages, full directions, price thirty-five cents for the large family package, ten cents for the small trial size. Your druggist is authorized to sell them with the guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

There are many who visit Bandera who doubtless have preferred to go via Boerne, which is several miles longer than the regular Bandera Road, mainly owing to the three-miles stretch of exceedingly rough road through that portion of Medina county that separates Bexar and Bandera counties.

But that bugaboo will very shortly be a thing of the past, for, thanks to the efforts of Bandera citizens, with the co-operation of members of the State Highway Commission, D. E. Colp and other highway boosters, a Federal standard road will within the next few weeks replace that three-mile stretch that has racked the nerves of motorists for many a long day.

Bids for this new work have already been advertised for, and as soon as the contract is let, construction will start in earnest, and, if no delay is encountered visitors to Bandera will have a fine smooth road all the way from San Antonio before the summer is over.

With this improvement completed, Bandera citizens have formulated plans to put their section on the tourist map in a manner that will be sure to attract a large number of visitors to that haven of rest and recreation among the hills.

There are many beautiful camping spots along the Medina River, all the way down from Bandera to the headwaters of Medina Lake at Leibold's Camp.

For those tourists who have a little time to spare, follow the route taken by the Express car, after leaving Bandera on the return trip and see if you don t think it worth while.

A little more than nine miles from Bandera—on the main road to San Antonio, there is a little settlement called Pipe Creek. At a point 9.8 miles, speedometer reading, from Bandera, turn right for a store on a road where the sign reads: "This Road to Warren's Camp."

At 13.4 you pass through a gate. A few rods beyond this point, one road goes to the right and the other to the left. The road to the right leads to English Crossing on the Medina, a little more than a mile from the first gate. The second road, to the left here, there is a nice camp ground, good fishing and a low-water bridge or dip for those who wish to cross to the other side of the river.

The road to the left, after passing through the first gate, will take you to either Warren's Camp or Leibold's camp, both at the headwaters of Medina Lake. These camps are well known to fishermen and offer good accommodations to fishing parties. You will have to pass through seven more gates and over a rough, hilly road, sharp and steep in places, before reaching these camps, but the trip is worth the while. There is no chance to get lost, as signs tell the traveler every quarter of a mile just where he is going. Note the red and white marks on posts and trees. They lead to the camp.

This is referred to more in the nature of a side trip for those who plan a visit to Bandera, and at this season of the year you will not be lonesome, for visitors to this section are frequent.

There is hardly a trip within easy riding distance of San Antonio that offers so great a variety of scenery, especially to strangers of this section of the state, and it is well worth anyone taking a day off from the cares of business, spend the time out in the open and commune with nature in all her glorious and gorgeous settings.

The generosity of James Cox in offering the use of his opera house free of charge for the old settlers day program during the fair is greatly appreciated, not only by the fair management, but by the old settlers as well. This hall is amply large enough to accommodate the big crowd that will be present.

C. Y. Billings and J. E. Chisum went down in the rough region of Medina county last Thursday to look into matters pertaining to the Bandera-San Antonio road where it crosses the corner of Medina county. Everything is in shape to begin construction of the standard road and only awaits action of the State Highway Commission in letting the contract.

Spend your cash at H. L. Mansfield's and get some of that genuine Aluminumware that is being given with cash purchases. Ask for tickets.

Among those old time fiddlers who will be prevailed upon to enter the old Fiddlers' contest here during the fair will be Andy Jones, Tom Gray, Will Walker, Bill Mayfield, Charlie Schmidtke, Will Maass, Brice Mayfield, and others who woke the echoes with their fiddling for the pioneers of Bandera and Medina. If Bill Holland has entered the contest also, and if B. F. Denton can be persuaded to come along, we want to hear from him.

James Boyle is now delivering the San Antonio Daily and Sunday Light at 15c per week or $1.00 for three months. Latest news. In Bandera three hours after publication. tf

LOOP TRIP TO BANDERA OFFERS MUCH IN SCENERY

Fine Fishing and Camping Spots Attract Hundreds of Visitors

The following article was taken from a recent Sunday issue of the San Antonio Express:

For the benefit of those motorists who desire a trip a little off the beaten path of travel and one that passes through a beautiful scenic section, the Express motorlogue car, for this occasion one of those easy riding Rickenbacker's with the Rndem fly-wheel, conveyed the Express party on a loop trip to Bandera via Boerne and returned via the regular Bandera road, a total distance, speedometer reading, of a little more than 100 miles, on a recent Sunday.

Bandera is rapidly becoming known as a delightful resort what with its picturesque scenery, the many beautiful spots along the Medina River that offer many inviting locations for camping and picnic parties, the clear country air and the inviting hills, together with the whole-hearted hospitality of its citizens make it a section well worth visiting. The trip out the Fredericksburg Road, through Leon Springs and on up toward Boerne, with hills rising majestically on either side of the road to here and there a pretty lowland scene, and with the country-side dotted with prosperous farm homes, is a sight that gladdens many an eye tired of the sameness of the city scenes.

At a point 31.4 miles from San Antonio, where the road approaches the foot of Kronkosky's Hill, take the left-hand road by a store for Bandera, as the right-hand roads goes down the hill and into Boerne proper.

The ride from this point to where the road leads into the main highway from San Antonio to Bandera, a little more than 12 miles, is for the most part smooth and good, with beautiful scenery stretching away for miles in many directions. There are some sharp and steep curves, however, on which the driver should handle his car with care, and a few places where skillful driving is necessary.

The road from Boerne comes into the main road about 12 miles out of Bandera, and from the intersection into Bandera the road is good for the most part and there is no chance for those tourists not familiar with that section losing their way.

There are several hotels in Bandera that offer good accommodations, especially in the way of excellent meals, and anyone visiting that section will be cordially greeted and made to feel thoroughly at home. Points of interest along the immediate vicinity of Bandera are too numerous to mention.

There are many who visit Bandera who doubtless have preferred to go via Boerne, which is several miles longer than the regular Bandera Road, mainly owing to the three-miles stretch of exceedingly rough road through that portion of Medina county that separates Bexar and Bandera counties.

But that bugaboo will very shortly be a thing of the past, for, thanks to the efforts of Bandera citizens, with the co-operation of members of the State Highway Commission, D. E. Colp and other highway boosters, a Federal standard road will within the next few weeks replace that three-mile stretch that has racked the nerves of motorists for many a long day.

Bids for this new work have already been advertised for, and as soon as the contract is let, construction will start in earnest, and, if no delay is encountered visitors to Bandera will have a fine smooth road all the way from San Antonio before the summer is over.

With this improvement completed, Bandera citizens have formulated plans to put their section on the tourist map in a manner that will be sure to attract a large number of visitors to that haven of rest and recreation among the hills.

There are many beautiful camping spots along the Medina River, all the way down from Bandera to the headwaters of Medina Lake at Leibold's Camp.

For those tourists who have a little time to spare, follow the route taken by the Express car, after leaving Bandera on the return trip and see if you don t think it worth while.

A little more than nine miles from Bandera—on the main road to San Antonio, there is a little settlement called Pipe Creek. At a point 9.8 miles, speedometer reading, from Bandera, turn right for a store on a road where the sign reads: "This Road to Warren's Camp."

At 13.4 you pass through a gate. A few rods beyond this point, one road goes to the right and the other to the left. The road to the right leads to English Crossing on the Medina, a little more than a mile from the first gate. The second road, to the left here, there is a nice camp ground, good fishing and a low-water bridge or dip for those who wish to cross to the other side of the river.

The road to the left, after passing through the first gate, will take you to either Warren's Camps or Leibold's camp, both at the headwaters of Medina Lake. These camps are well known to fishermen and offer good accommodations to fishing parties. You will have to pass through seven more gates and over a rough, hilly road, sharp and steep in places, before reaching these camps, but the trip is worth the while. There is no chance to get lost, as signs tell the traveler every quarter of a mile just where he is going. Note the red and white marks on posts and trees. They lead to the camp.

This is referred to more in the nature of a side trip for those who plan a visit to Bandera, and at this season of the year you will not be lonesome, for visitors to this section are frequent.

There is hardly a trip within easy riding distance of San Antonio that offers so great a variety of scenery, especially to strangers of this section of the state, and it is well worth anyone taking a day off from the cares of business, spend the time out in the open and commune with nature in all her glorious and gorgeous settings.

The generosity of James Cox in offering the use of his opera house free of charge for the old settlers day program during the fair is greatly appreciated, not only by the fair management, but by the old settlers as well. This hall is amply large enough to accommodate the big crowd that will be present.

C. Y. Billings and J. E. Chisum went down in the rough region of Medina county last Thursday to look into matters pertaining to the Bandera-San Antonio road where it crosses the corner of Medina county. Everything is in shape to begin construction of the standard road and only awaits action of the State Highway Commission in letting the contract.

Spend your cash at H. L. Mansfield's and get some of that genuine Aluminumware that is being given with cash purchases. Ask for tickets.

Among those old time fiddlers who will be prevailed upon to enter the old Fiddlers' contest here during the fair will be Andy Jones, Tom Gray, Will Walker, Bill Mayfield, Charlie Schmidtke, Will Maass, Brice Mayfield, and others who woke the echoes with their fiddling for the pioneers of Bandera and Medina. If Bill Holland has entered the contest also, and if B. F. Denton can be persuaded to come along, we want to hear from him.

James Boyle is now delivering the San Antonio Daily and Sunday Light at 15c per week or $1.00 for three months. Latest news. In Bandera three hours after publication. tf

The Medina Entertainment for the fair, to be given here next Wednesday night, in charge of Mrs. Fletcher P. Layton and Mrs. Henry Lewis, is going to be one of the most unique entertainments given in Bandera. Thirty-four young folks will participate in the concert representing every line of business in Medina. The whole program is original work, and carries effective suggestions throughout.

Messrs. Atlee B. Ayres of the Old Spanish Trail Association and Percy Tyrell, manager of the Gunter and Robert E. Lee hotels of San Antonio, were in the city Sunday, returning over Trail Loop No. 10 from a visit to Kerrville. Mr. Ayres says there will be thousands of visitors to that region when we have improved our road for tourist traffic over the established and improved highways is steadily increasing, and the Old Spanish Tarl is coming in for its full share of this traffic.

Last Friday evening a heavy rain fell in Winan's Creek and Indian Creek communities, and the Medina river came down on a six-foot rise. A party of campers on the Medina decided to move their camp and, as they were crossing the low water bridge near the Cox place the rice wagon sank them and "killed" their engine, leaving the car stranded in about three feet of water. Several little children were in the car, and the grown people carried them to safety and help was secured to pull the car out, but fortunately the crest was soon passed and the river fell rapidly.

Production Only Limiting Factory to Deliveries So Great Is The Demand.

Detroit, Mich.—Sales of Ford Cars and Trucks in the United States for the month of May totaled 172,306 according to a report just issued by the Ford Motor Company.

The May sales were more than 2500 greater than those of April, due to increased output.

This Production has been the only limiting factor in the sales of Ford Cars and Trucks since January, for at all times orders on hand have been in excess of the manufacturing capacity of t he company, great as it is.

The high production schedule which has been in effect the last few months however, permitted May to show a gain of 44,243 retail deliveries over the corresponding month last year, and it marks the fourteenth consecutive month in which sales have gone above 100,000.

May deliveries bring the total of Ford sales in this country up to 732,850 Cars and Trucks for the five months from January 1, to June 1, an increase of 320,000 over the same months a year ago and presenting a record breaking sales figure.

Under the constantly growing demand, Ford sales for the present year will pass the million mark in duly, a figure which would already have been attained had it been possible for the company to bring production up to orders.

Misses Ruth Hicks and Eratha Garison spent several days in town the past week attending the meeting.

H. B. Smith, a prominent insurance man of San Antonio, spent several days at the Riverside Inn.

A big crowd attended the grand ball at the Opera House Saturday night, and a delightful time is reported.

Prof. A. P. Carlton and his violin class will give a free recital next Thursday night for the fair. A select program is being arranged.

Mrs. Allie Tomlinson, nee Miss Allie Langford, came up from San Antonio this week to spend awhile with friends and relatives in Bandera.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Hind s and children, Fritz and Miss Lillie, were here from Lima last Thursday on route to Gonzales to visit relatives a few days.

Mrs. Mary Fly, secretary to Arthur Moore of Travis Park church, San Antonio, returned home last Thursday after an enjoyable vacation at the Riverside Inn.

The meeting which has been in progress at the Baptist church the past ten days closed last night. Fifteen additions resulted. The new converts will be baptized next Sunday. Rev. W. W. Lee of San Antonio did the preaching, and Gordon Bird of Morris Ranch directed the singing.

Little Miss Jean Walters, a charming little cinderella artist and entertainer of San Antonio, spent several days last week at the Riverside Inn. On last Saturday evening, assisted by little Anna Mae Dankberg, who is an accomplished dancer she gave a delightful program at the hotel, winning unstinted applause and praise from t hose present. These child artists are looking forward to a brilliant professional career.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Adams and little daughter were here from Orona Friday and paid the New Era a very pleasant visit. They had been on a visit to Mr. Adams' brother, O. L. Adams, at Tuff, and were on their way home. Mr. Adams lived in Bandera county some twenty years ago, and found quite a number of his old friends here. He is now a leading merchant in Orona and is doing a big business in the general merchandise line.

Production Only Limiting Factory to Deliveries So Great Is The Demand.
Detroit, Mich.—Sales of Ford Cars and Trucks in the United States for the month of May totaled 172,306 according to a report just issued by the Ford Motor Company.
The May sales were more than 5,500 greater than those of April, due to increased output.
Production has been the only limiting factor in the sales of Ford Cars and Trucks since January, for month after month, orders on hand have been in excess of the manufactoring capacity of t he company, great as it is.
The high production schedule which has been in effect the last few months however, permitted May to show a gain of 44,243 re- ail deliveries over the corresponding month last year, and it marks the fourteenth consecutive month in which sales have gone above 100,000.
May deliveries bring the total of Ford sales in this country up to 732,850 Cars and Trucks since January, for the months from January 1 to June 1, an increase of 322,005 over the same months a year ago and presenting a record-breaking sales figure.
Under the constantly growing demand, Ford sales for the present year will pass the million mark in July, a figure which would already have been attained had it been possible for the company to bring production up to orders.

BANDERA COUNTY FAIR.

Third Annual Event Starts Off in a Very Favorable Way.

The third annual Bandera County Fair opened yesterday morning. Large crowds are in attendance, and despite the many handicaps the fair promises to be one of the most successful ever held here. Owing to the fact that the big warehouse which is usually used as an exhibit hall is still full of the last wool clip, the exhibits had to be placed in the old saloon building adjacent to the warehouse, but these exhibits have been neatly arranged and make a very good showing. Farm products, canned products, fancy work, junior work, etc., are among the displays. In the live-stock department are to be found many fine sheep and goats on hand, the annual show and sale of the United Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association being held here at this time in conjunction with the fair. E. C. Evans, of the State Agricultural Department, will judge the sheep and goats today and tomorrow. Among the sheep and goat exhibitors are J. M. Slater of Brackettville, John R. Liles of Ohio, Gulley & Son of Uvalde, H. H. Rawlings of Leakey, Smith Bros. of Rio Frio, Hal Peterson of Kerrville, Bob Davis of Rio Frio, M. D. Taylor of Vance, Tom Reed of Laguna, R. L. Ward, of Sonora, John McBryde of Kerrville, George A. Hay of Tuff, R. N. Padgett & Sons of Tarpley, A. V. Pue, E. Hicks, Robt. Brown, Fred Whisenhunt of Medina and many others.

The entertainments that have been arranged for the visitors are among the best local talent can produce, and the program is as follows:

Last night was Medina Night, and a fine entertainment was given at the High School Auditorium. A grand ball and picture show at the Opera House.

Big rodeo every day at the fair grounds, directed by Ed Mansfield. Bronco busting, steer riding and roping are among the features of the rodeo.

Tomorrow is Old Settlers' Day at the fair. In the afternoon a reunion of the old settlers will be held at the Cox Opera House, and at night the old fiddlers' contest and old folks' ball will take place.

Bandera is doing herself proud this week.

Family Reunion.

A happy reunion took place at the Davenport ranch last Saturday, where Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Davenport, Sr., entertained with a feast for their guests. Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Zook, of San Antonio, were here last week for a few days camping on the river, and on Saturday they went to the ranch for the day. Mr. Davenport killed the fatted calf and a great feast was prepared. Those present to enjoy it were: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Davenport Mrs. Mabel Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Zook, and children Glayda Ellen and Herbert Davenport Zook, and Mr. and Mrs. Booker Davenport and children.

Protracted Meeting at Rocky.

A protracted meeting will begin at Rocky Creek August 23rd, for the Church of Christ. Lonnie Hayhurst will do the preaching.

Celebrates Birthday.

C. C. Miller, of the Lima region celebrated his 69th birthday anniversary on Thursday, July 26th. It was also the birthday anniversary of his daughter, Mrs. John McHaney. Quite a feast was spread, and a large crowd was present to help the old veteran enjoy the occasion. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Hankison and three children of Cain City, Mr. and Mrs. John McHaney and two daughters of Cain City, Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Miller and children of Fredericksburg. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Miller of Fredericksburg. Mrs. McHaney of Medina. Miss Pearl Miller of Lima. Mack Kneese of Fredericksburg. Misses Mamie and Lena Fellers. Misses Myrtle and Alma Carver of Cain City, and Mr. and Mrs. Val Chick of Lima. All had a most enjoyable time and wished Mr. Miller many more happy birthdays. He has resided in Bandera county twenty-eight years, has always enjoyed good health and says he intends to spend the rest of his life in good old Bandera county.

Mr. and Mrs. W. V. S. MacLane and little daughter, Jean, late of Portland, Maine, but now of San Antonio, were registered at the Riverside Inn last week. Mr. MacLane has a fine tenor voice and gave much pleasure to the hotel guests Saturday evening in a program of songs. Mrs. MacLane and Jean will return next week for a longer stay.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Mallory and Miss Mallory, of San Antonio, were week-end guests at the Riverside Inn.

Revival Meeting.

The revival meeting will begin at the Methodist church Sunday, August 12. Rev. C. C. Evans of Kerrville, will assist the pastor, Rev. E. A. Potts in conducting the meeting, and Rev. A. M. Foster of Hondo will lead the singing.

Charles Radcliff and wife, of Antonio, were enjoying the breezes on the gallery of the Riverside Inn last Sunday.

Misses Jackie Terry and Lois Blackburn, of San Antonio, are registered at the Riverside Inn. They are on their return from a trip to Medina where they visited relatives.

C. S. Oatman, of Camp Verde, is attending the fair, and will enter the Old Fiddlers' Contest tomorrow night.

Matinee at the picture show this afternoon at 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harper are here from Big Springs on a visit to Mr. Harper's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Harper.

Al Masters, the hustling Utopia merchant, and Ben O'Bryant, county commissioner, were here yesterday. Mr. Masters says the Baptist meeting closed Sunday night at Utopia with 43 additions, 27 by baptism.

Entertainment Tonight.

Bandera Night at the Fair will be observed tonight with a highly interesting musical entertainment at the Methodist church to be given by Prof. A. P. Carlton and his violin pupils. Admission will be free. Prof. Carlton is justly proud of the progress that has been made by his class, and volunteers this recital to help the fair. The following program will be rendered:

1. Beautiful Ohio Waltz—Bandera String Quartette.
2. Violin Solo, "Juanita"—Miss Myra Jennette Hunter; second violin, Pauline Ethridge.
3. Violin Solo, "Melody of Love,"—Miss Lora Langford.
4. Vocal Solo, Selected—Miss Edna Barrett of San Antonio.
5. Violin Solo, "Berceuse," from Jocelyn (by request)—Miss Pauline Ethridge.
6. "One Fleeting Hour"—Bandera String Quartette.
7. 'Cello Solo, "Last Rose of Summer,"—Marvin Hunter, Jr.
8. Violin Solo, "Melody of Love,"—Miss Lora Langford.
9. Violin Solo, "The Love Ship,"—Miss Myra Jennette Hunter.
10. Violin Solo, Selected—A. P. Carlton.

WHY NOT BE INDEPENDENT?
Abraham Lincoln is one of the most outstanding examples of what a man may make of himself if his desire to succeed s great enough. It is within the power of any person who earns to have financial independence — in time. One doesn't need to be so much schooled, to save as he needs to teach himself how to spend. It is seems so easy to treat one's self to that temporary, tingling exhilaration of spending five dollars for something he thinks he wants, than to feel that permanent, solid feeling of independence that comes with its denial and saving that five spot. Future comfort and prosperity will live and grow in the savings account if you start now.
We pay 4½ per cent interest on savings.

Community Awards.

Judges from the A. & M. College issued the following awards in community exhibits at the fair yesterday afternoon.:

Medina—Needlework 20 points; Canned Goods, 33 1-3 points; Garden and Field Products, 24 point. Total, 77 1-3 points.

Bandera — Needlework, 33 1-3 points; Canned Goods, 20 points; Garden and Field Products 33 1-3 points. Total, 86 2-3 points.

The New Era will publish the awards in the other departments next week, as they are not available as we go to press.

Register at the Fair.

All of the old settlers are urged to register at the exhibit hall at the Fair. Those pretty young ladies of forty years ago, Harriet Chipman and Mattie Jones, will give you an old settlers' badge when you register, if you came to Bandera county before 1873. Every settler is urged to register, but badges will be given to only those who came here more than fifty years ago.

One of the prettiest and most attractive displays at the fair is Leroy Eckhart's apiary products, strained honey, comb honey and the bees. It's an exhibit worth while.

VANDERPOOL.

This portion of the Lone Star is rejoicing over the fine rains of recent date, which wrought a wonderful and beautiful change in the entire country around here.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rogers of Laguna are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bridges.

Mrs. O. B. Johnson and three little daughters left this week for Comstock to be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Humphries, of that place.

Mrs. Jessie Thompson departed Thursday for Taft, California to spend several months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Laforce.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Ward of Utopia are very proud of the little daughter that arrived July 19th. Also Mr. and Mrs. Glass of Upper Brushy are rejoicing over the arrival of an 11lb boy on the 22nd of July.

Joe and Ben O'Bryant, Mrs. Lon Weinford, motored out to New Mexico first of June to visit with their father, Joe O'Bryant of that place, returning July 23.

W. L. Mayes and Lou Leonard and family left for Brady to visit relatives there.

Messrs. Orion and Alvin Cooley, Hub Thompson and sister-in-law Miss Lila, attend the Medina barbecue.

The Utopia revival is still in progress, conducted by Rev A. J. Copass and singers, Mr. and Mrs. and Mrs. Hal Miller, and will close Sunday night. It has been a glorious meeting, so many have enrolled with the church, quite a number will be baptized Sunday afternoon.

Miss Gracie Love and little brothers visited friends over at Tuff this week and attended the Medina barbecue.

Bandera is keeping open house this week. Enter.

Welcome to the Fair visitors. Bandera's doors are wide open to you.

Many people are in attendance at the fair this week who have never visited Bandera before. They are delighted with our wonderful scenery and picturesque surroundings. They will come again.

Bandera county has wonderful resources which only lack development to bring them forth. The essential thing just now, and which we must have before any great development is done, is good roads.

While you are attending the fair take the opportunity to make a donation to the fund now being raised to erect a monument to the Bandera county boys who gave their lives in the World War. A dollar will help. Leave your donation at either bank or end it to the New Era office.

A fish hatchery which is connected to restock Medina Lake to the extent of 175,000 or 200,000 black bass annually is to be constructed at once. The site is just below the dam and adjacent to it. When completed the plant will be turned over to the United States Bureau of Fisheries which will maintain it.

We are in receipt of the initial number of the Melvin Enterprise, published by J. H. Kavanaugh. It is a neat five-column folio, and chuck full of local news. We labored at Melvin for sometime, publishing the Melvin Advocate, but were forced to suspend on account of dull business conditions due to the World War. We know those Melvin people, and they are a fine lot, and we are sure Editor Kavanaugh will give the town the paper it has needed for so long.

When you're feelin' sorter grumpy, and everything goes wrong, jest cast aside that feelin' and sing a little song. No use settin' 'round a-mopin an' wearin' that face so long, friends are settin' 'round awaitin' to hear you sing that song. You may feel that all 's against you, friends to you seem mighty cold, when in fact it's your own presence that the ice seems to enfold. Get the feelin', get the habit; for to you it should belong—friends are yours jest for the askin' if you'll ask 'em with a song.

Don't forget the musical entertainment tonight at the Methodist church to be given by A. P. Carlton's music class.

Make Me a Man.

Onward, roll onward, oh time in your flight, make me a woman that is clear out of sight; give me the bloomers and hoochee and shirts, let me out of these horrible skirts. A whisker produser invent if you can give me a head that grows bald like a man; grow a tobacco that won't make me sick, and learn me to chew like a man very quick. Let me, oh let me, drink whiskey and swear, bet on the chickens and back the fleet mare, stay out at night, hold office and vote—take in the town and a six shooter tote; sit in the lazzard roost jest if I choose, play baseball and football and wear those spiked shoes. Onward roll onward, oh time quickly fly, make me a man or else help me die. This world as it is fairly fills me woe, but were I a man 'twould be heaven below.—Sandwich.

Today and tomorrow tags will be on sale at 25c each. It is necessary that a certain number of these tags be sold in order to meet the expenses incident to buying the premiums in the Junior Department. A final drive will be made today and tomorrow, and we hope every citizen will contribute as much as a quarter to this department.

Printh Paper With Lithp.

The oldest newspaper ever printed in southern California is a recent issue of the Sawtelle Sentinel, which makes its appearance without the letter "s" except in the advertising and a few leading articles. Henry Schultz, county statician and editor and publisher of the paper makes the following explanation:

"At the time the Thentinel wath about half thet up at evil-dithpothed thief entered hith office and carried off all our etheth and for thith reathon our thubthcribers will have to do the very betht they can in reading thome of the articleth which are thpelled in the manner which they may have noticed in thith announcement.

A rival newspaper, commenting on Editor Schultz' predicament, comes out with large-headlines announcing that "The Thawtelle Thentinel cometh with a lithp."

Matinee at the picture show this afternoon. Don't miss it.

Barbecue at Rocky Creek.

A big barbecue is to be given at the mouth of Rocky Creek on Wednesday, August 15, for the benefit of the Rocky Creek school. A portion of the funds raised will be used in the construction of a concrete bridge at the Bauerlein Crossing. Committees are now at work making arrangements for the big barbecue, and it is announced that a fine program will be give to include a rodeo, roping, baseball game, public speaking, etc. An admission charge of 25c will be made, which pays for the big dinner and all of you are urged to get yourself ready for a big time.

G. W. Edwards and family, of Pipe Creek, left Monday for California where they will probably locate for awhile. They expect to return to Bandera within a year or two.

Ethridge Real Estate Co.
Bandera, Texas.

The Medina barbecue committee reports that after all of the expenses of the grand barbecue given there on Wednesday of last week have been paid, they still have a balance of $500 cash which will go to the Medina school. It is estimated that nearly two thousand people were in attendance at the barbecue. The committee request the New Era to extend their thanks to the public for the liberal patronage and to all who in any way assisted in making the barbecue a great success.

Dr. Erwin and Doc White gave their "balloon and mouse" fishing devise several try-outs during the past month, but have met with no success. The scheme simply fails to attract the big mouthed bass. Now Dr. Erwin has become interested in the plan of trying a Chinese cormorant for luck. He has a friend in Hong Kong, China, who has promised to send him one of these remarkable birds that will go out and catch and bring in the fish without any sort of effort on the owner's part. These cormorants are highly trained and will do all that is claimed for them. When the bird arrives Doc White and Herman Harper intend to cross him with an Indian Runner duck and getting a setting of eggs so as to produce Chinese cormorants of a new breed for their own use.

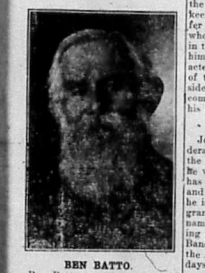
OLD SETTLERS DAY TOMORROW

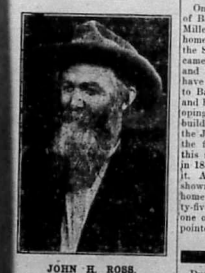
AMASA CLARK.

The only remaining original settler. Mr. Clark was born in New York State in 1828. Moved under General Scott in the Mexican War in 1846. Came to Bandera in 1852, and when he arrived on the spot where Bandera now stands three families were living here in tents and engaged in making cypress shingles. He has been here all of these years, raised his family here, and is the father of nineteen children, sixteen of whom are living. Father Clark will be ninety-six years old next month, but despite the burden of years he is active and able to attend to his personal affairs. He will be in attendance at the Old Settlers' Day Reunion tomorrow, and may be prevailed upon to say a few words from the platform.



BEN BATTO.

Ben Batto was two years old when his parents came to America from Germany with the Castro Colonists. That was in 1844. He was raised in Medina county, and grew up during a time when the Indians often made raids through this country. When but a lad he learned to handle the rifle, and at one time was a member of the ranger company in a campaign against the Indians. Mr. Batto is now eighty-two years old, and very active for his years. He and his good wife recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.



JOHN H. ROSS.

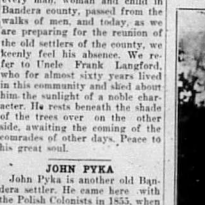
This is none other than John H. Ross, born and raised right here in old Bandera county. His father, Judge Ross, was one of the pioneers of Bandera land. The old fellow, whose likeness appears above, was a bronco-buster in his boyhood days, and he can still "ride 'em." He will call sets at the Old Folks Ball tomorrow night in the same roaring voice that he used to call them forty years ago. Get your partners for the next set.

W. D. (SECO) SMITH.

Among the Indian fighters and rangers of the early days none were better than Seco Smith. He was a lieutenant to Big Foot Wallace, he trailed the redskins who raided this picturesque valley, and then he came upon them he fought them with a fury that drove terror to their savage hearts. He was born in 1836, in Mississippi, but came to this section in the fifties, and now lives on his farm near Medina. Despite his eighty-seven years, he retains his youthful vigor and gets about as well as a man of sixty summers. He will be on hand at the Old Settlers Reunion tomorrow to greet all his old friends.

JUDGE GEORGE HAY.

Here's another one of Bandera's earliest settlers. George Hay was born in Scotland in 1836, and he first beheld the glorious possibilities of Bandera land in the spring of 1854, when he arrived here with Elder Lyman Wight's colony. He was just a lad then, but he stuck here, and "grew up with the country." For many years he was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Bandera, held various public offices, and raised a large family of children. He will soon be eighty-eight years old, but he is still able to get about actively and will be at the Old Settlers' Reunion tomorrow.

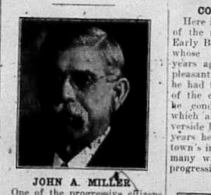


B. F. LANGFORD, SR.

Only a few months ago one of the leaders of men, a friend to every man, woman and child in Bandera county, passed from the walks of men, and today, as we are preparing for the reunion of the old settlers of the county, we keenly feel his absence. We refer to Uncle Frank Langford, who for almost sixty years lived in this community and shed about him the sunlight of a noble character. He rests beneath the shade of the trees over on the other side, awaiting the coming of the comrades of other days. Peace to his great soul.

JOHN PYKA

John Pyka is another old Bandera settler. He came here with the Polish Colonists in 1855, when he was just a boy. Right here he has stayed and raised his family and now in his declining years he is surrounded by children and grandchildren who honor his name. He can tell many interesting narratives about early life of Bandera, for he has experienced the ups and downs of the early days.



JOHN A. MILLER.

One of the progressive citizens of Bandera county is John A. Miller, who has a beautiful ranch home four miles from Bandera on the San Antonio road. Mr. Miller came here over forty years ago, and has succeeded where others have failed. There was not much to Bandera when he came here, and he has been a factor in developing the resources that helped to build the county. He purchased the James ranch property, one of the first established ranches in this section, when he came here in 1881, and has highly improved it. A picture of his ranch home is shown in another column. This home was built more than twenty-five years ago, but today it is one of the most modernly appointed homes in all this region.

During the past year quite a number of our pioneer citizens have crossed over the Great Divide, among them being W. F. Surber, Henry Rackow, J. P. Heinen, Sr., Orlando Thallman, Sr., W. S. Hinds, Sr., Grandma Newcomer, L. B. C. Buckelew, B. F. Langford, Sr., Baker, John A. Currie, William H. Davenport, Mrs. M. M. Johnson, W. T. Buttram, Mrs. Jonathan Sanders, Mrs. Mary E. Hudspeth.

OTHER PIONEERS.

There are many other pioneers yet living in this county whose lives have been spent right here. It would be impossible to give even a brief sketch of each of them. But most of them will be present at the Old Settlers' Reunion tomorrow, and they are going to have a big time. Among them will be Wilson Clark, John Cosgrove, Jim Walker, George Elam, Franklin Hodges, Chas. Harris, Jack Olliff, Allen Graham, W. J. Davenport, Sr., Tom Lawson, Philip Mazurek, Frank Buckelew, Gabe Andewald, Cuistian Dugos, Andy Jones, Charles de Montel, Tom Stevens, Charles Schmidtke, W. J. Maass, George A. Hay and a host of others.

Old Fiddlers' Contest.

The Old Fiddlers' Contest at James Cox Opera House, Friday night, August 3, will be free and open to all old time fiddlers to enter. Prizes will be given to each fiddler, but as the prize list has not yet been completed we are not in position to announce just what the prizes will be. Tenth Prize Package of Apple Flakes, donated by J. A. Brown & Son.

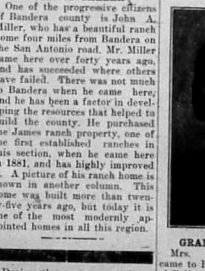
"Booby" Prize for Clog dancer, donated by Mrs. Henry White.

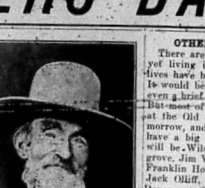
All who enter the old fiddler's contest must be over 45 years old, and must play three old time tunes.

Do you believe in your own county? Then patronize home industry. The Bandera saddle stirrups, $3 pair. Only four pairs left. Harness for sale. Shoes repaired.—C. W. Davis' Shoe Shop.



GRANDMA ADAMIETZ.

Mrs. Constantina Adamietz came to Bandera with the original Polish colony in 1855. She was a little girl, nine years old, at the time and came with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pyka. She grew to womanhood here, married John Adamietz, and raised a large family of sons and daughters. Despite her extreme age of seventy-seven years, Grandma Adamietz is well preserved and does all of her own housework. She is a true type of the pioneer mother, and can relate many thrilling incidents of early days in Bandera.



COL. HUGH DUFFY

Here is shown a likeness of one of the most honored citizens of Early Bandera. Col. Hugh Duffy, whose death occurred several years ago, was one of the most pleasant of all gentlemen, and he had friends all over this part of the country. For many years he conducted the Duffy Hotel, which afterward became the Riverside Inn. For more than sixty years he was identified with the town's interests, and he helped in many ways in building up this progressive community.

Old Settlers, Attention.

Badges will be provided for all of the old settlers who attend the fair on Friday, August 3, that is all settlers who came to Bandera county previous to 1910, and who are now over fifty years old. Get your badges when you register at the exhibit hall. The reception committee for Old Settler's Day is composed of J. M. Hunter, Leo Risinger, W. S. Ethridge, Mrs. Mattie Jones and Mrs. Harriet Chipman.

The Old Virginia Reel.

The old time dance, the Old Virginia Reel, will be seen at the Old Settlers' ball next Friday night, if present plans are carried out. It has been many years since the old Virginia Reel was danced in Bandera, but all of the old timers have not forgotten how to go through the figures, when it takes place it will recall the happy times of bygone days.

The rumor that gained currency to the effect that Gray Brothers had discontinued their morning service car to San Antonio is without foundation. Tom Gray informs us that this car leaves Bandera every morning, except Sunday, at 8 o'clock and reaches San Antonio at 10:30. Passengers wishing to go to San Antonio are requested to telephone Gray's Garage or Tom Gray's residence.

PEACH SEEDS WANTED.

We will pay four cents per pound for good fresh peach seeds delivered at Davenport & Co.'s store in Bandera, at R. Picken's store at Pipe Creek, G. W. Banta's at Medina, and John Burns at Tarpley. No cooked seeds wanted.—Monty Bros. Nurseries, Kerrville and Center Point, Texas. 6t

Mrs. Witt learned from her mother in what a unique way her grandfather won a place in Washington's command. Washington desired that his men be of a certain height. David Denton was low of stature, which threatened to deprive him of a coveted place under thiscommand. Young Denton said to Washington, "I can out-wrestle or outrun any man in your command." Washington jumped to his feet, threw off his coat and advanced toward the young man, saying, "We will see." David Denton got in position to meet his opponent. The crowd was now so in fest to witness the contest. By this time the two men had grappled and the first struggle ended in Washington being pinned to the ground. Three times this occurred, and when Washington arose from the ground he said, "I will take you." Thus did David Denton win his way into Washington's command.

In the year 1852, Mrs. Elizabeth Denton, then a widow, moved to Texas, and stopped near San Antonio, where she rented a small farm and made a crop. In the fall she moved up into the mountains about sixty miles from San Antonio and began to settle a place which at that time was several miles above where any others had settled. Speaking of ...ing into this sec... ...ays: "We came ...ded on Cherry ...

Guadalupe river, our nearest neighbors, six miles away, being the Weidenfeld and Schladner families, who lived about where Comfort now is. My mother had five children, two boys (Joseph and David) and three girls; she also owned four negroes, two men, one woman and a boy.

"At this time N. A. McFarlane, father's uncle, lived with us. You can understand the hardships when I tell you that when mother settled out here with this large family she had only 50 cents in money and 75 bushels of corn. We had no home at first but lived in a tent. Mother had to pay $20 a barrel for flour; $2 a bushel for corn; from 25c to 50c a pound for bacon. We had no lard at first except bear's oil. We went in ox wagons to San Antonio for mail and mill, also had to go there for a doctor when needed. Mother bought 300 acres of land on credit at $1 per acre. At first her only resource for a living was to have the negro men make shingles by hand from cypress trees. We hauled these singles t o San Antonio; then did not get a very good price for them. I have seen the time when biscuits were a greater variety than cake now is. We had biscuits only on Sunday morning for breakfast. My mother sowed the first wheat ever sown in Kerr county. I remember that one fall brother Joe and I gathered 300 bushels of pecans and sold them at 50 cents a bushel."

These severe trials mentioned above were not all that was in store for these hardy settlers, for not long were they to rest from the pioneer's worst foe—the Indian. By day and by night a ceaseless vigil was kept. Early in life Mrs. Witt learned the many tricks to which these dusky denizens of the forrest resorted to in their attempts to deceive the whites. Speaking of this she says: "Many times at night have I heard the Indians making almost all kinds of noise; sometimes they would bark like dogs and howl like wolves; then they would gobble like a turkey or a crow like a rooster. For several years we could not have a light at night, for they would slip up close to the house and shoot at us through an opening. A number of persons were killed in this way."

When a little girl she got a scare from the Indians she never forgot. It came about in this manner: One of the brothers—David —went out in the woods after the cows one afternoon. The girls went to the owpen to wait for the brother to bring the cows. While out in the woods the boy saw one of the work steers dashing along as if something was pursuing him, and soon there came in sight an Indian in hot pursuit of the steer. The boy at once thought of the danger of the girls at the cowpen and ran to tell them of the presence of the Indians, and they escaped to the house. The men got their guns and made a search for the Indians but they had concealed themselves. The Indians were hungry and lay around until night, when one of them stole into the yard and cut down and carried off a quarter of beef which was hanging in a tree in the yard. In getting the beef the Indian passed within fifteen feet of where Dr. Witt Burney and Captain McFaddin were lying asleep in a wagon.

On one other occasion the Indians tried to slip up close to the house to steal a gentle horse to drive off the rest of the horses, but were not so successful. Captain McFaddin and one of the negro men became aware that Indians were near and trying to slip up and steal the horse that was hitched near the house, so the two men set about to foil the efforts of the Indians. They kept a close watch in the dark. The negro saw an object which he believed to be an Indian not far away; he raised his old muzzle-loaded shotgun and blazed away. The two men then went for the horses which were not far away, and guarded them all night. After daybreak they went to the spot where the supposed Indian had been dimly seen, and they found a shield and nearby was a pool of blood on the ground. That same day two boys, returning from Bandera, saw nine Indians, one of whom was covered with a blanket and dragging himself slowly along. This was supposed to be the Indian shot by the negro.

Sometimes the Indians would murdering a person it would endanger their chances to steal a horse. One example of this in this section where Mrs. Witt lives was late one afternoon. Mrs. Will Pafford was coming from the cowpen and passed within ten feet of a concealed Indian. Soon down the path came a horse and rider. The rider was a nephew of Mrs. Pafford's. As the horseman approached the spot where the Indian was hidden, a shot rang out and he fell dead from his horse. Quick as a flash the redskin mounted the horse and was gone with him. It is strongly believed that the Indian was there when Mrs. Pafford passed, but refused to kill her, thinking no doubt, it might interfere with his chance to get the horse. The young man survived the wound.

Speaking of severe losses sustained by the settlers, Mrs. Witt says: "My mother and brother Joe had as much as $3000 worth of horses stolen or killed by the Indians. Not only were these early settlers deprived of thousands of dollars worth of stock by the Indians, but wild animals levied heavy tribute on their sheep, hogs, turkeys and chickens. When a girl Mrs. Witt came to know every wild animal that infested this region. She was familiar with the shrill scream of the panther, the angry growl of the bear, the howl of the wolf, and the piereing, childlike cry of the bobcat. Despite these terrors, she, with the other children of the home, many times traveled for miles alone. Before she was 10 years of age she went with her brothers six miles to school.

Here is what she says of her school days: 'I well remember the first school I attended. It was where the town of Comfort is now located, and was taught in a little log cabin with a ground floor. My first teacher was a Yankee by the name of Glass. This was in 1856. We had to go six miles and rode horseback. My brothers rode on a long packsaddle and I rode behind them on the same horse. The second school I attended was in a little school house west of the big bluff, south of the present town of Center Point. This was the first school house built in Kerr county, and the first school was taught in 1858 my Mr. Sidney Rees, now deceased. After six weeks the school closed on account of the Indians raiding in this section. I attended this school a second time. It was then taught by a young man named Wardell. When the Indians stole all of our gentle horses, ten in number, we had to walk and wade the river. My neices, nephew and I went together to this school from mother's place at the mouth of Cherry Creek."

The year 1860 brought to this home one of its greatest sorrows. Alfred McFaddin, Mrs. Witt's uncle, and her brother David, a boy in his teens, started on what proved to be a fatal expedition to Mexico. Day after day the man and boy journeyed without incident. They had gotten down into the Rio Grande country when the trouble came up, but as they neared Brownsville they were attacked by Mexicans and Mr. McFaddin was killed outright. His body was found and buried in Brownsville. The boy was never heard from.

In speaking of her early life Mrs. Witt says: "I can remember the first preacher who ever preached a sermon in this section outside my mother's old home. The meeting place was across the river, and mother had the negroes to build an arbor and cut logs and roll them under the arbor for seats. In going to church all waded the river except mother, who rode behind the preacher, who was old Brother Meyers, a Methodist. Then afterward came old Brother Ralls and Andrew Jackson Potter, "the fighting parson." After these came a Baptist preacher. I remember his first sermon was about the crown of thorns that was placed on Christ's head. When I was 12 years old I would help milk 25 cows, then saddle up my horse and ride down to old Brownsboro, ten miles away, and hear a sermon, then come home for dinner. Some folks complain if a sermon is more than thirey minutes long. Why, we used to sit on a rough log and listen to a sermon an hour long, and never think of getting tired."

On August 22, 1867, Miss Callie Denton was married to J. M. Witt. Young Witt was a West Tennessean, who came to Texas more than half a century ago. He became an honored minister in the Baptist church. Five children are living to comfort their grand old people in the evening of their life.

Just below where the old log cabin stood, in which Mrs. Witt was reared, there stands today what in some respects is the most remarkable tree in Texas. It is an immense cypress. Five feet from the ground this tree is exactly 33 feet in circumference, higher up the tree is thought to be at least 50 feet in girt. It is about 150 feet in height. Some thirty feet above the ground there is a huckleberry tree 8 inches in diameter growing out on of the folks of this big tree has been a home for the honey bee, for every year during this ong period the bees have made honey in the hollows of this giant cypress. Some times there have been seen as many as seven swarms in it at one time.

Not far from this monarch of the woods there rests the sleeping dust of Mrs. Elizabeth Denton, that intrepid, invincible woman who dared to blaze the way for civilization in the territory of what is now Kerr county. May all young Texans ever hold as sacredly dear the memory of this good woman and the many others whose struggles, self-denials and courage have won for us the state we love so well.

Editor's Note.—This pleasing sketch was written by Rev. N. G. Ozment and published in the San Antonio Express, December 5, 1915. A friend sent it to us and we are very glad to reproduce it. That region mentioned in the sketch has much unpublished history of the depredations of the cruel red men. It required the loftiest courage to endure the hardships those old pioneers encountered. Many of those same pioneers are still living there, beholding their work well done, and in the ripeness of years, honored and reverenced by the present generation which they fostered.

BIG FOOT WALLACE

Big Foot Wallace, the best known frontier character, was never a citizen of Bandera county, although at one time he owned land in the upper part of the county, and Wallace Creek is named after him. But he often visited Bandera in early days, and there are yet living in this vicinity many of the older people who knew him and entertained him in their houses. He lived in Medina county many years and was a terror to the Indians, having slain and scalped many of the redskins. He lived to a ripe old age and died a number of years ago, his remains now resting in the State Cemetery at Austin.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA AND DANGER

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed.

Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

James Hoyle is now delivering the San Antonio Daily and Sunday Light at 15c per week or $1.60 for three months. Latest news, in Bandera three hours after publication. tf

Raleigh Davenport and family and Robert Blunt left Thursday for California where they will reside.

Regular services at the Methodist church next Sunday morning and at night. You are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Walker were up from San Antonio last week visiting relatives on Laxson Creek and at Medina.

L. M. Rawls, accompanied by his son and daughter, was here from Honey Creek Saturday on his way to Skidmore, where he will visit two of his daughters.

R. L. Whitehead and J. Y. Miller were here from Medina Monday.

Early Settlers.

Among the early settlers to Bandera were the following families: Montel, Hay, Buchner, Carmichael, Ross, Montague, Heinen, Hay, Mipear, James, Schmidtke, Clark, Hugh, Huffmeyer, Bauerlein, Walker, Stanard, Moore, Elam, Harris, Rodgers, Laxson, Langford, Chipman, Risinger, Duffy, Ross Thalmann, Mansfield, Davenport, Pyka, Adamietz, Anderwald, Moraletz, Kalka, Kindla, Jurczaki, Hockeley, Hamilton, Stephens, Jones, Pue, Hicks, Weldon, Hudspeth, Cosgrove, Mitchell, Hamilton, Buck Freeman, Phillips, Click, Cox, Mayfield, Maas and a host of others, some of whom are here yet, as well as numerous descendents. It would be interesting to give a sketch of each family, but space forbids.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Milstead, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hooley, Miss Mildred Hooley, Arthur Winters and L. B. Dennerside, all of San Antonio, were here the past week visiting A. P. Carlton and camping on the river below town. They caught lots of fish and had a great time. During their stay Mr. Carlton placed his radio set in the camp and the crowd enjoyed a radio concert last Sunday night.

Born, to Captain and Mrs. T. P. Grant of Tarpley, July 28, a boy.

Bud Hill, W. S. Hinds, Rock Swinney and Jim Bocklebee were here from Rocky Creek Monday on business.

S. M. Wedgeworth, of Melvin, arrived Friday on a visit to his aunt, Mrs. Amasa Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Price visited relatives at Doss Valley last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Jones and two children, of Moorsville, are here on a visit to relatives and old friends.

Veteran Amasa Clark went to San Antonio Friday in company with his son-in-law, Jas. L. Hill, who is stationed at Fort Sam Houston. Veteran Clark met some of the high army officers while in the Alamo City. He returned home Sunday.

Brother W. D. Coleman, who has been somewhat crippled up for some time by an injury sustained to his back several months ago, was in town Friday and paid the New Era an appreciated visit. He says he is getting along fine now, and expects to attend the Old Setters' Reunion tomorrow.

The town is full of visitors this week who are here to attend the fair. People are here from all parts of the county and from neighboring towns and distant cities, and all are bent on having a good time.

Our County Fair.

We are going to tell all about the third annual Bandera County Fair, which closed Friday. It is impossible to give minute details, and we intend only to touch the high spots. The crowds were greater than at any previous fair held in this county. The exhibits were all good, particularly the sheep and goat show held in conjunction with the fair by the Uvalde Sheep and Goat Rasers' Association. The community displays were excellent, and managed in such a way as to bring forth favorable comment by all who attended the fair. Below we give the awards.

In the Junior Department—Best display cooking, 10 to 14 years, Clarence Burris. Best display canned goods, 7 to 14 years, Cecil Faris. Best display pickles, 7 to 11 years, Jewell Burris. Best jelly, 7 to 11 years, Reba Banta. Best button holes, 11 to 14 years, Frank Kalka. Best apron, 7 to 11 years, Maurine White; second prize Sybil Akin. Best doll dress, 7 to 11 years, Maurine White; second Allen Burris. Best hemstitching, 11 to 14 years, Cecil Faris. Best embroidery, 11 to 14 years, Hazel Hemen; second, Maurine White. Best novelty work, 11 to 14 years, Clarence Burris; second Thalmann Brothers, first and second.

Sheep—long fleece—Aged buck, J. L. Gulley & Sons, first and second; J. M. Moffet, third. Yearling buck, Ed Mansell, first; Thalmann Bros. second; J. L. Gulley & Sons third. Aged ewes J. L. Gulley & Sons, first; Thalmann Bros. second, F. E. Whisenhunt, third; Yearling ewes, J. L. Gulley & Sons first and second. Shearling ram, J. L. Gulley & Sons. Champion ewe, J. L. Gulley & Sons. Breeders' Flock, J. L. Gulley & Sons. Best display of 3 or more, J. L. Gully & Sons.

Sheep, short fleece—Aged Buck, F. E. Whisenhunt, first; J. L. Gulley & Sons, second. Yearling buck, E. Hicks, first prize. Buck lamb, J. L. Gulley & Sons, first and second. Ewe, one and two years old, J. L. Gulley & Sons, first and second; F. E. Whisenhunt, third. Yearling ewes, J. L. Gully & Sons, first and second. E. Hicks, third. Ewe lamb, J. L. Gully & Sons, first and second. F. E. Whisenhunt, third. There were 188 sheep on exhibition.

Inasmuch as the premium list in the goat department was carried away before we could get a correct list we can only give a partial list of the prize winners:

W. H. Rawlings & Sons of Leakey, George Hay of Medina, A. B. Boren of Rio Frio, J. L. Gully of Uvalde, E. A. Briggs of Medina took first premium. Best display canned goods, Mrs. Fred Whisenhunt, of Medina. E. Taylor of Carlsbad, N. M., and Bob Davis of Rio Frio carried off prizes for best animals. In the Angora class, Gully, George of Medina took firs premium. Best pen of eight, W. H. Rawlings & Son of Leakey got first prize. Champion buck, C. A. Wagner of San Antonio took first prize. For Champion doe, F. O. Landrum of Laguna took first prize.

Poultry—Barred Plymouth Rock, cock, cockerel, hen, pullet, trio, young pen, grand champion cockerel and pullet, Mrs. M. Thalmann awarded first prize for each. Brown Leghorns, cock, hen, old pen, Fern Burris awarded second prize. Bronze Turkeys, cock and hen, Mrs. Will Batto awarded first prize.

Stolen Sheep Recovered.

The five sheep stolen from the pen of Gember & Lilles at the fair last week, were found in a pasture near town Tuesday, minus their coats of wool. They had been sheared, but the wool was also found along with two pairs of shears. Two young men were arrested and placed in jail, and other arrests are expected to follow shortly.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Victor Mazurek, August 4, a girl.

LIMA LOCALS.

R. L. Morris and Andy Reed went to San Antonio Sunday.

Stanley and Orville Keese, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Johnson, and Bill Hinds, and son, Ed, went to Medina Saturday.

Miss Jewel Wilson was the guest of Miss Sylva Keese Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks and Will Slaughter, of San Antonio, are visiting Bill Hinds and family for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Keese and children have returned from a visit to Mason. Mrs. Keese's sister, Mrs. Levi Holt, returned with them.

Mrs. Cynthia Shipman and children and Mr. Mayberry, who recently arrived from Colorado will make their home here.

Moonlight Pic Nic

On July 26, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie McCurdy invited their many friends to a moonlight picnic at the Thalmann Crossing on the River, the occasion being the birthday of their daughter Mina. Conversation and games were enjoyed by all and about 12 gallons of ice cream was served. The large crowd present wished for another such good time in the near future. Those present were: Mrs. Thalmann and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jones and children of Moorsville, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Meadows, Mrs. E. Hammond and son, Mrs. Kate Whisenhunt and daughters, Miss Rachel and Mrs. Smith of Medina, Mr. and Mrs. Perse Pue, Miss Daisy Pue, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pue, and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louise Heder and daughter, Miss Ida Stevens and brothers, Mrs. W. A. E. Clayton left Monday for Selma, California in response to a telegram received from his son, stating that the car his son, Jeff and wife were in Sunday night was struck by a truck, throwing Mrs. Clayton out and killing her instantly. It was such a sad and heart rendering shock to the entire community to learn of this young, noble Christian lady being so suddenly snatched from life. She was one of the main leaders in the Presbyterian church work of the town in which she lived, and was devoted to her young husband and 19 months-old son, being highly accomplished in all the arts of housekeeping, especially music, sewing and cooking that helps to make a perfect and ideal home. How sad it is to give one up, even if they have passed the allotted mark along life's pathway, but when the ruthless hand of death falls upon one of life's loviest and sweetest flowers, the blow is almost unbearable to those to who such a life has held out so much promise. The deceased was 22 years of ages and was united in marriage three years ago to C. J. Clayton. She leaves her husband, a little baby son, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Allen and three brothers, Travis, Paul and Wiley, as well as a host of other relatives and a large circle of friends to mourn the irreparable loss. The entire community and surrounding vicinity extend their deepest and sincerest sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Fries most royally entertained a large number of friends on Tuesday night in honor of her brother, Roy Richards, who leaves soon for Electra, Texas, where he has work.

WHY NOT BE INDEPENDENT?

Abraham Lincoln is one of the most outstanding examples of what a man may make of himself if his desire to succeed s great enough. It is within the power of any person who earns to have financial independence— in time. One doesn't need to be so much schooled to save as he needs to teach himself how to spend. It is seems so easy to treat one's self to that temporary, tingling exhilaration of spending five dollars for something he thinks he wants, than to feel that permanent, solid feeling of independence that comes with its denial and saving that five spot. Future comfort and prosperity will live and grow in the savings account if you start now.

OUR CHOICE.

For President of the United States on any ticket:

HENRY FORD

It is impossible to give the names of all of the people from abroad who were here during the fair in this issue. If you had visitors please send in their names for the next issue.

We met so many of the old settlers last Friday it is impossible to remember the names of all of them. But we were glad to take them by the hand and assure them that we appreciate all they have done to make Bandera county one of the most peaceable and law-abiding counties in the state.

Fifty years in Bandera! In the register list of those old settlers who attended the fair and old settlers day last Friday appear the names of 108 men and women who have lived a half a century in Bandera county. And it is estimated that 150 will number failed to register. Now, all of you all pioneers, send in your names for membership in the Old Settlers, Association now forming and attend the next reunion.

In his speech at the Old Settlers' Reunion last Friday, Senator Real urged the building of a suitable monument to the Bandera county boys who lost their lives in the World War. He said Kerr county is starting a similar movement. Senator Real's speech was appreciated by all who heard it, and we were all glad he came over to be with the old settlers at the fair.

We gave a report in our last issue of the Medina Night program held here during the fair, but received comment until this week. Mrs. P. P. Layton and Mrs. Henry Lewis, who directed the program are to be commended upon their skill in arranging the unique entertainment. Every business in Medina was represented in some manner and the verses recited by the children on the stage were composed by Mrs. Layton, as were the songs that were sung. When a picture of Wm. Hatfield's store was displayed everybody in the audience who had been to Medina instantly recognized the likeness of the old landmark. The picture of this store was painted by Warren Hunter for this occasion. The dancing of an old fashioned dance by two little tots dressed as old folks of forty years ago, was the hit of the entertainment. It was a grand affair and has given the Bandera folks something to talk about for a long time.

The fund now being raised for the erection of a monument to our fallen Bandera county soldier boys is steadily growing, several liberal donations having been made to the fund the past week. A full list of all donations will be published in our next issue.

Old Settlers' Day.

Old Settlers' Day at the fair was the big day. That was last Friday. And the old settlers came in big crowds to take more part in reunion in Bandera. Old men and old women who have passed the three-quarter century mark were on hand as lively as some who had not passed out of the forties. They came from all over the county and from adjoining counties. Ribbon badges were given those who came to Bandera county more than fifty years ago, and all who came to Bandera before 1910 were allowed to register. We give a list of those who were given badges for fifty years residence here. At two o'clock p. m., the Cox Opera House was filled to its full capacity by the old settlers and a great reunion was held. On the stage were many of the first settlers of the county, among them being Amasa Clark, George Hay, Seco Smith, Mrs. John Adamista, John Pyka, Frank Pyka, Mrs. Frank Pyka, Gabe Anderwald, Joe Anderwald, Cuistion Dugos, Tom Lauson, Mrs. Adelia Richards, Mrs. Jack Stevens, Mrs. Amasa Clark, and many others whose names we cannot recall, and, just in front of the stage were seated other old time citizens to the extent of fully one hundred. Speeches were made by J. M. Hunter, Veteran Amasa Clark, Frank Buckelew, Judge George Hay, Seco Smith, Senator Real and Prof. C. T. Carlton. The burden of these speeches were "old times," "once upon a time," "in the long ago." And when the speech-making was over a popularity and beauty contest was started. It was announced that a prize would be given to the prettiest girl and to the ugliest boy present. Harriet Hamilton (Chipman) and Mattie Southwell (Jones) were nominated and John Ross and Tom Lauson were pitted against each other for ugliness. The votes were soon counted and John Ross waltzed off with the prize, a jumbo stick of red candy, for being the ugliest old boy there. But the vote for the prettiest and most popular girl was a tie, and a box of choice chocolate candy was given to each of the contestants, Aunt Harriet Chipman and Grandma Jones.

After the voting contest all of the fifty-year residents were lined up in front of the stage and an old fashioned handshake was given them. While the handshaking was going on Prof. C. T. Carlton started singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," Mrs. A. L. Mansfield presided at the piano, and the old song was taken up all over the house and was very appropriate to the occasion. The crowd was then dismissed.

At 8 o'clock the spacious opera house was packed to its utmost capacity for the old fiddlers contest. Within just a short time standing room was at a premium. The people were packed in a solid mass, hundreds of them being forced to stand up for the lack of seats, and the crowd outside was as great as the crowd inside, several hundred people having to go away without even getting a glimpse inside. It is estimated that fully two thousand people attended the old fiddler's contest. It was difficult to keep order and those at the rear of the hall could scarcely hear the announcer on the stage. But everybody was good natured and seemed to enjoy the seething, sweltering, swaying jam they were in. The fiddlers who entered the contest were B. F. Denton, J. Denton, (twin brothers,) Tom Gray Bob Mayfield, Brice Mayfield, W. B. Hollice, C. S. Ohlman, Jim T. Walker, and John Adams, and each fiddler played three tunes that were used orty or fifty years ago. The judges were Charles Eckhart, Arthur Pue and Gus Reinarz, and they awarded first place to J. J. Denton, second prize to W. B. Hallice, third prize to Bob Mayfield, fourth prize to John Adams, fifth prize to Tom Gray, sixth prize to B. F. Denton, seventh prize to Jim Walker, eighth prize to Brice Mayfield. Gratis accompaniment by Ed Coughran and Mr. Moss.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walker, with violin and mandolin, accompanied by Mrs. F. P. Layton at the piano gave several oteeming selections, and Mr. Walker also played in the young fiddlers' contest.-He was followed by Elmer Newcomer and Virgil McCarthy of Pipe Creek, who played "Rye Whiskey" to a fare-you-well. After the contest a space was cleared in the hall by forcing the crowd back, and the old folks got on the floor for a square dance. Such old fellows as John Ross, George Hay, Lee Risinger, Ernest Kindla, Phillip Meznerek, Gabe Anderwald, and others whose nimbleness was supposed to have deserted them some forty years ago, were right there claiming partners for the first square. John Ross, in bellowing voice, called the figures and the old folks went through the swings and turns as frisky as any of the younger set could have done three throughs with them. Besides Mr. Ross, prompting was done by Bill Haught, Fletcher Cravey, and others who used to split the prairies with their "calling" in the old days. Dancing was kept up until a late hour. After the great crowd began to disperse, literally swallowed out by the density of the jam, the old folks enjoyed themselves better, and some say they would not have swapped places with the world to see these old pioners enjoy themselves on this occasion was worth all of the trouble and expense involved in arranging Old Settlers' Day for them.

A partial list of those who came to Bandera county over fifty years ago, is given as follows. Many of the old timers failed to register and therefore we did not get their names. Those who had been residents of Bandera county fifty years or longer were given badges:

Old Settlers, Attention.

We are going to organize an Old Settlers' Association in Bandera county. Send in your name at once if you will join. The membership fee will be one dollar a year, which dollar can be paid on delivery of badge. All old settlers over eighty years old will be given a life long membership free. We are going to arrange for a two days' reunion some time next year, and will provide a meeting place somewhere on the Medina river at Bandera. A brush arbor will be built and a large platform will be erected for all purposes. If you want to come and help us, rooms will be provided for you. But join the association now, and let's get things moving. Send in your name to J. M. Hunter, at the New Era office.

Revival Meeting.

The revival meeting will begin at the Methodist church Sunday, August 12. Rev. J. C. Evans of Kerrville, will assist the pastor, Rev. E. L. Potts in conducting the meeting, and Rev. A. M. Foster of Hondo will lead the singing.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA and DANGER
Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed.
Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."
The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.
In billousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in the Malaria carrier of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a hig appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.
Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

"Bandera Night at the Fair.
Bandera Night at the fair was observed with a very interesting musical program at the Methodist church, directed by Prof. Austin Carlton, and was composed of selections rendered by his violin class. Miss Edna Barrett gave a vocal solo. The church was packed to its utmost capacity and many had to remain outside where they was standing room. The pupils all performed well and their training reflects much credit on Prof. Carlton's ability as a teacher. He is a violinist of ability, delighted the audience with several musical numbers. The following program was given:
1. Beautiful Ohio Waltz—Bandera String Quartette.
2. First violin, Myra Jennette Hunter; second violin, Pauline Ethridge, third violin, A. P. Carlton, 'cello, Marvin Hunter, Jr.
2. Violin Solo, "Juanita"—Joe Frank Goldbart.
3. Violin Solo "Bluebird Waltz"—Miss Edna Stevens.
4. Vocal Solo, Selected—Miss Edna Barrett of San Antono.
5. Violin Solo, "Berceuse," from Jocelyn (by request)—Miss Pauline Ethridge.
6. "One Fleeting Hour"—Bandera String Quartette.
7. 'Cello Solo, "Last Rose of Summer,"—Marvin Hunter, Jr.
8. Violin Solo, "Melody of Love,"—Miss Lora Langford.
9. Violin Solo, "The Love Ship,"—Miss Myra Jennette Hunter.
10. Violin Solo, Selected—A. P. Carlton.

Fifty Years Old.
Would you believe it? Deanie Dugos was fifty years old last Saturday, and in celebration of the event pulled off an old fashioned dance at his home Saturday night. A large crowd of friends were present, young and old, and a merry time was had dancing to the music of Deanie's accordion. Those who enjoyed the festivities were Gabe Anderwald and family, Ed Batte and family, John Mazurek and family, Henry Adamietz and family, I. E. Adamietz and family, Henry Kalka and family, F. J. Duff and family, Anton Pyka and wife, Pete Anderwald and family, Albert Jureczki and family, Tom Mazurek and family, Joe Kalka and family, Kasper Mazurek and family. Violin music was furnished by Albert and Anton Jureczki, Dominic Dugos and his mother-in-law outdanced the young folks, and it is said they would be dancing yet if the music had kept up. Frank Buck was the "caller."

Barbecue at Rocky Creek.
A big barbecue is to be given at the mouth of Rocky Creek on Wednesday, August 15, for the benefit of the Rocky Creek school. A portion of the funds raised will be used in the construction of a concrete bridge at the Bauerlein Crossing. Committees are now at work making arrangements for the big barbecue, and it is announced that a fine program will be give to include a rodeo, roping, baseball game, public speaking, etc. An admission charge of 25c will be made, which pays for the big dinner and all of the amusements. Get yourself ready for a big time.

Among the energetic worker's in decorating and arranging the displays at the fair were Mrs. Bob Surber, Mrs. Pete Anderwald, Miss Mabel Thalmann, Mrs. Joe Baby, Mrs. Pyrekburg, Miss Stela Coughran, Mrs. Matt Adamietz, all of Bandera, and Mrs. E. J. Banta, Mrs. George Tait, Mrs. M. E. Paris, Mrs. C. W. Harris, and other Medina ladies. They were untiring in their work and the neat appearance of all exhibits showed skill in the arrangement.

Thanks.
We want to thank the people of Bandera on behalf of the Medina community for their courtesy shown us during the County Fair, and especially do we thank Mr. Thalmann, Mr. Hunter, Mrs. Ethridges, Mrs. Surber and Miss Stella Coughran.

P. S. Wyatt came down from Electra last week to join his family, who have been spending several weeks at Medina.

Q. C. Hodges was up from Pipe Creek Monday attending a meeting of the county school board.

Roping Contests.
In the roping contests which took place at M. R. Thalmann's place each day of the fair the following ropers won: Henry Berger on first day, won first, and Malvin Berger won second.
On second day Gus Britsch won first and Malvin Berger won second.
On third day Gus Britsch won first and John Graham won second. Mr. Britsch's time was 51½ seconds.
We failed to get a score on goat roping.

In the baseball game last Thursday between Hondo and Bandera, the home team won by a score of 6 to 5. On Friday a game between Bandera and Kelly Field was played, resulting in a victory for Kelly Field by a score of 9 to 6. In the ninth inning the score was 3 to 3, and when the 10th was played off, Kelly Field scored three tallies in the last inning.

Charlie Moore and family were among the fair visitors last week. They live near Hunt, in Kerr county, but their real home is in Bandera county.

Tom Gray last week sold a Case tractor and disc plow to Oscar Heinen and a tractor to E. F. Heinen, progressive farmers of this county.

Drilling Soon To Begin

It has been generally known that leases had been taken and plans were being made to begin drilling operations in the vicinity of Vanderpool, but the matter took definite shape this week when a contract with the Humble Oil & Refining Company, one of the largest oil concerns operating in Texas, was filed for record in the county clerk's office. This company by the terms of the contract will drill in Block One at Vanderpool, the contract specifying that drilling shall begin within five months from July 22, 1923, and that one well is to be drilled to a depth of 3500 feet, and if oil is encountered other wells will be put down and that region thoroughly developed without cessation of drilling operations.

Over 21,000 acres have been blocked up for this development work, in the vicinity of Vanderpool, and last week the lease price of 25c per acre on the whole acreage was paid to land owners in cash. W. R. Fletcher and J. E. Chisum have been getting the streets to every parcel of land included in the blockage, the abstracts have all been passed upon and perfected and accepted. Within a few days it was announced that the Humble Oil and Refining Co. will send a corps to

WHY NOT BE INDEPENDENT?

Abraham Lincoln is one of the most outstanding examples of what a man may make of himself if his desire to succeed s great enough. It is within the power of any person who earns to have financial independence — in time. One doesn't need to be so much schooled to save as he needs to teach himself how to spend. It is seems so easy to treat one's self to that temporary, tingling exhilaration of spending five dollars for something he thinks he wants, than to feel that permanent, solid feeling of independance that comes with its denial and saving that five spot. Future comfort and prosperity will live and grow in the savings account if you start now.

Padgett Takes Premium.

The New Era last week in giving the list of prize winners at the fair in the goat department the name of R. N. Padgett & Sons was overlooked. Mr. Padgett received first and third on nannies two years old and over, second on one year old, second on pen of eight goats. The Padgett stock is among the best in Texas and always takes premiums when shown.

Meeting Saturday August 25.

A meeting of officers and managers of the County Fair will be held on Saturday, August 25, at 2 p. m., at the court house, for the purpose of winding up the financial affairs of the recent fair, and adjusting several matters.

Mr. Walter Britsch, Misses Alma, Ella and Edna Britsch, and Bertha Nefinger returned from a trip to Bandera where they had been spending the week. While there they took in Bandera County Fair.—Hondo Anvil-Herald.

Mrs. George Dankberg and little daughter, Anna Mae, have returned to San Antonio after a delightful stay at the Riverside Inn. Little Anna Mae was featured recently at the Bandera Theater in a costume dance. Her grace and skill brought much pleasure to the audience and many expressed the opinion that the future would find her a brilliant dancer.

Miss Gussie Ellison, of San Antonio, paid a short visit to Bandera last Sunday.

Miss Marjorie Herrington, of San Antonio, is spending a few weeks vacation at the A. V. Pue ranch on Laxson Creek.

Prof. and Mrs. Halbedl, Miss Christine Halbedl, Miss Thrall, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Scholl, and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Carrington, all of San Antonio, are summer guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Adamietz.

Miss Ellen Thalmann will leave in a few days for Fort Worth to resume her duties at the Basonic Home in that city.

District Consolidation.

The net proceeds of the Barbecue at Comfort July 25 were $500, which will go to the school. It has been decided that this money will not be used to build a primary room. The state superintendent of education has recently made an offer of $1,000, provided this district will consolidate with either the Laxson Creek or the Jones districts before the $1,000 offer from the state department expires. In other words, the new district would have $2,000 in money and an old building which can either be sold if either the Laxson Creek or the Jones district will consolidate with this district and build a new building.

C. F. FREEMAN.

The Barbecue at Comfort.

At the barbecue at Comfort last Sunday Bandera county men and boys walloped off with most of the prizes in the big rodeo and roping contest. Fred Rossi took first prize for bronco riding and Angus Whitley took second. Booker Davenport beat them all riding steers and took first prize while Master Warren Davenport got fifteen dollars for steer riding. H. Gulley won first prize in goat roping, his time being 15 seconds. W. E. Mansfield was winner in steer roping, making his catch in six seconds. The Bandera folks are loud in their praise of the hospitable treatment of those Comfort people.

Commissioners' court has been in session this week and transacted a great vast volume of business. Among the important matters that came before the court for serious consideration was financing of tick eradication operations. The fact that only fifty-one herds are in quarantine in the county makes it imperative that dipping be continued until the county is cleaned, but money was needed to carry on the work. This difficulty has been smoothed out and finances provided to meet the expense.

R. L. Morris, commissioner of the Medina precinct; John I. Edwards, commissioner of the Pipe Creek precinct, and Ben O'Bryant, commissioner of the Vanderpool precinct, were here attending the regular term of commissioners' court this week.

make contour survey in preparation of active drilling operations which are expected to start within the next sixty days.

It will be remembered that two years ago the Wood-Texas Company drilled a well at Vanderpool, to a depth of 4,000 feet. A core of the log was kept of this well, and the oil that was found therein, with the formation that was encountered, was encouraging enough to encourage further development of that territory, and the present project is a direct outcome of the discoveries that were made there. The operations of the Humble Oil and Refining Co. in this field will be watched with particular interest by oil men all over the United States, and once a producer is secured there will be a world of activity in Bandera county.

Messrs. W. R. Fetcher and J. E. Chisum have not been idle during the past two years, for they have the utmost confidence in the Vanderpool field, and we are all hoping their confidence will be amply rewarded.

Around the World in 18 Days.

Ralph White, of the Bandera Theater, informs us that he has booked that thrilling picture, "Around the World in 18 Days," starring William Desmond. This picture will come in installments, one installment being shown each Saturday night, in connection with the regular program. The series will start on Saturday night, August 25, and regular prices will be mantained for the series. Mr. White was fortunate in booking this wonderful picture, and you who have heard about Phineas Fogg and his escapades will appreciate Phileas Fogg in his mad rush around the world encountering hairbreadth escapes and thrilling leaps to make his schedule All school children will be admitted free first night, August 25.

The Eagle Is Wrong.

The Bandera New Era recently printed a picture and a short sketch of "Big Foot" Wallace, one of the early well known characters of this part of the State. He lived in Medina County many years and was a terror to the Indians. The story goes that some one had stolen a ham from one of the settlers in the community in which Wallace lived and the tracks to and from the smoke house showed that the thief had one club foot, similar to the enlarged foot that caused Wallace to be known as "Big Foot." Although his reputation was good, there were those who suspected him of the theft of the ham. In his Indian fighting he had seen an Indian that had a foot similar to his own, and knew that this Indian was the guilty party. The story goes that he spent many months in search of this Indian, finally killing him near the head springs of Big Paint, and in order to show who was guilty of the theft of the ham, cut off the Indian's foot and carried it back to the settlement. —Junction Eagle.

OUR CHOICE.

For President of the United States on any ticket:

HENRY FORD.

Teachers institute will be held in San Antonio the first week in September. It is compulsory that every teacher in this county attend the institute.

Many have asked us if Bandera would undertake to have a fair next year. We cannot answer that question at this time. It is altogether up to the people of this county whether we have another fair. They must co-operate and work together if another fair will result. Otherwise it can't be done. It is not right to shift the burden to the shoulders of one or two individuals. The fair held here a few days ago was said to have been the best held in this town, but one man shouldered the whole load, and that man was Marcus Thalmann. He worked early and late, neglected his own affairs to devote his time to making the fair a success, and he is due all credit for the whole matter. If the people want another fair in Bandera they will have to put their shoulders to the wheel and help push. It is too much to ask one man to do it all.

The news that a certain town or district has good roads spreads for many miles around. Motorists drive that way when out for pleasure, or will go that way when seeking a trading point. They will go many miles out of their way if they can strike a good road into some business center.

People are very quick to criticise the local paper for something it publishes, but very slow to thank the editor for certain things he does not publish. Frequently the biggest critic is the man who is under the most obligations to the paper for things it refrains from publishing. There are continually in every community current events happening that would make racy reading but frequently the newspaper man passes them by rather than place certain citizens in an unfavorable light and embarass their family and friends.

The Completed Village.

Stopping in a small town a traveling man said to a prospective customer:

"It has been twenty years since I was here last. Many buildings gone up since then?"

"No," replied the resident, "none, that I know of."

"Any new railroads or street cars?"

"No."

"Planning any improvements?"

"No."

"Well," said the traveling man "I've been all over this country, and this is the first town I have seen that is what you might call actually finished."—Youngstown Telegram.

The Bugscuffle Philosopher Says He Enjoyed the Old Settlers' Reunion.

Editor New Error:—Me and the old woman went to the fair at Bandera the other day and I must say we had the time uv our lives at the Old Settlers' doings. We did not figure much on going until just a day or two previous but when we got the little old home papur and it said John Ross was going to call for the old folks to come to Dame Cynthia Ann see we jest must go, and we went and early Friday morning we was right thar a hunting up old time friends. Found lots uv them, too. I think they was all thar, with but few exceptions. I did not get to see H. L. Carpenter thar, and I shore missed him, but I know he was not able to come, as he has been crippled for a good while. And I did not get to shake hands with Old Bill Haught, but I seen him up thar on the stage talking to Jim Walker and a tryin to git him to play "Sally Goodin," in the old fiddlers contest. We were right thar at the speaking Friday evening and it do beat all how them old timers, George Hay, Seco Smith, Jim Bowles, Clem and Frank Boston could speak and tell of the long ago. I know all about the times they spoke of, because I was a little tyke living in this part fur a good many years. And I want to say right here that me and my old woman enjoyed everything that was done at the reunion and we are coming again next year. The fair was good too, and better than any before, and I think the people of Bandera county ow Markus Tallman a big note of thanks for all he has done to make the fair a real success. I seen more people in Bandera on Friday than I ever saw in my life before in one place, and at the old fiddlers contest that night I thought the house was going to fall in when Jim Walker and Jack Anderwald and his wife up thar on the floor dancing like they was young folks, and George Boston and Mandy was up thar on the floor too, and when John Ross called them sets it made me want to git right in the middle of the floor myself. You bet me and my old woman air church fixers no hers now. But it took us all back to the old days when we was young and gay, and we all felt jest like Joe Posterd said he elt ten years younger. You know, Mistur Editor, that was some thing about the old time dances that jest seemed to cast a spell over the participants and the onlookers too. In the old days them was called forbidden by strict church rules to dance often enough to look upon the wrong doings of their "sinner friends," with envy and hunger in their eyes At first they might refuse to dance but often the tantalizing musick of the fiddle, and the twang of old Bill Haught's voice caused them to fergit their religion and join in. In them old days when a church member took part in a dance he "danced himself out of the church," and had to be saved at the next revival. With some people then it was a habit to "dance out of the church" in the winter and "git saved" at the campmeeting the next summer when thar was not so much dancing.

But I think the kind of dancing they used to have was harmless. If some people would dance that way now thar would not be so much sinful doings in this old world. I ain't never been to a modern dance, but I read about them sometimes, and see pictures of them, and I think they are awful. My old woman says she wouldn't be caught out in the dark in some of the costumes the women wear at the dances nowadays, because if she was she'd blush for shame. And she often rails at me because I don't write for the papers and condemn it. But she saw a sight in Bandera at the fair the other day. We beheld a britting of some sort going down the street, and I says to her "Cynthia Ann what is it? She fixed her specks on her nose and give a good look, and says, "I declare, Neeph, I thought it was a boy, but bless my soul it looks like a girl with britches on." And she's right. It was a gal, a poor little gal that maybe was an orphan and had no home and had no papa or momma to buy dresses for her, and she had to wear a boy's britches to hide her nakedness. And Cynthia Ann has been lamenting over that sad thing ever since we cum home.

I will rite again some time.

Your friend,

Some Comes High.

"Yes, said the old man to his visitor, "I am proud of my girls and would like for them comfortably married, and as I have made a little money they will not go penniless to their husbands. There is Mary, 25 years old, and a really good girl. I shall give her $1,000 when she marries. Then Sarah, she won't see 35 again. I shall give her $3,000. And the man who takes Eliza, who is 40, will have $5,000 with her."

The young man reflected a moment, and then asked:

The Telephone Girl.

The telephone girl sits in her chair and listens to voices from everywhere; she hears all the gossip, she hears all the news, she knows who is happy and who has the blues; she knows all our joys, she knows every girl who is chasing the boys; she knows of our trouble she knows of our strife; she knows every man who talks mean to his wife; she knows every time we are out with "the boys," she hears the excuses each fellow employs; she knows every woman who has a dark past, she knows every man who is inclined to be "fast;" in fact there's a secret beneath each word of the girl, the demure looking telephone girl. If the telephone girl told all she knows, it would turn half our friends to mortal foes; and it would be a small wind that would soon be a gale, enuff us in trouble and land us in jail; she could let go a story (which gaining in force) would cause half our wives to sue for a divorce; she could get all our chuckes mixed up in a fight and turn all our kin into sorrowing night; in fact she could keep the whole town in a stew if she'd tell a tenth of the things she knows. Oh, brother, now doesn't it make your head whirl, when you think what you owe to the telephone girl—Exchange.

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed.
Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "do-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have here-before limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities.
Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take.
One Calotab at bedtime with a mallow of water—that's all. No
aste, no griping, no nausea, no alts. A good night's sleep and he next morning you are feeling ine, with a clean liver, a purified ystem and a big appetite. Eat hat you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in ori-

The second volume of "The Trail Drivers of Texas" is off the press and ready for distribution. The second volume will sell at $3, as does the first volume. However, anyone wishing both volumes may have them for $5. Also, anyone having the first volume may obtain the second for $2.50. Send all checks to George W. Saunders, Union Stock Yards, Austin. Books will be mailed, postpaid immediately on receipt of order. The story of the old trail driving days as told in these books is authentic, reliable in the fullest degree. Each purchaser is helping swell the fund for the erection of a monument to the Old Trail Drivers.

Sure Sign.

"You are looking worried Jim!" remarked one workman to another the other day.

"Yes, I am afraid there'll be a death in our street shortly," replied Jim. "There was a rooster crowing in our yard before daylight and it's a sure sign of death."

"Nonsense, man," said his mate, "That's an old woman's tale."

Next day the two men met again.

"Has there been a death yet, Jim?" asked the skeptical one.

"Yes," was the unexpected reply, "I killed that darned rooster all right."—Savanah News.

OBITUARY.

Brother L. H. Buckelew, Sr., was born April 17, 1868, at Bandera, Texas, and grew to manhood in Bandera county. He obeyed the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and lived the consistent, humble Christian life until his death, which occurred June 18, 1925. He was married to Miss S. M. Jackson May 30, 1886, and to them were born several children. Mrs. Buckelew died March 28, 1911, and on November 25, 1919, Bro. Buckelew married Mrs. Rachel A. E. Pierson, who with his children still survives him. The names of the children are as follows: V. V. Buckelew, Mantia, Dovie, Mollie, Jim, Daisy, Roy, Susie, Viola and Aucil.

At his own request, made some time previous, I preached Bro. Buckelew's funeral. We all loved him, and we find consolation in the blessed promise that beyond the veil he will have a crown of life, which is the greatest reward a man can look to.

James Boyle is now delivering the San Antonio Daily and Sunday Light at 15c per week or $3.00 for three months. Latest news. In Bandera three hours after publication. tf.

A woman may do her very best to be a happy for her husband and children but if she is treated like a slave and only given her board and clothing in payment for her services as wife, cook, laundress, nurse girl, chambermaid and seamstress is it any wonder that little or no happiness exists in that home? If a mother spoils her son by pampering and waiting on him all the years of his childhood and boyhood, and taking him to think that a man should always be waited on by the women of his household, is it strange that he expects his wife to do the same and that in all likelihood she either wears out in a few years service or becomes disheartened? There are very many reasons why a home may not be found a happy one and the happiness found therein depends fully as much on the husband as it does on the wife. We are often told that in every true and ideal marriage both husband and wife must learn to bear and forbear. In every home where happiness exists there must be perfect trust, confidence and love between husband and wife. There are two kinds of sunshine in the world, and both are quite necessary—the one which is caused by the sun's shining outdoors, and the other by its shining in our hearts. Happy homes abound in the heart sunshine, and whether it shines without or not, there is naught but brightness within doors. It is but the loving deeds the cheery, helpful words, and the kindly thoughtfulness, that each member of the family shows toward the other that make up the ideal happy home—a perfect heaven on earth.—Colorado Citizen.

The New Era makes no pretense to be up to its usual standard this week. The presiding elder of this great family journal is going to take a vacation and leave the office in charge of the first lieutenant, while we hike away to camp on the beautiful Medina.

Chas. Eckhart brought the New Era a fine watermelon and a large cantelope Saturday for which he has our thanks.

Aunt Delia Richards, who came up from San Antonio for the fair, has decided to remain in Bandera and has secured rooms at the home of Tom Gray.

Mrs. M. H. Shelton, nee Miss Jessie Foster, left Friday for her home at Belmont, Arizona, after spending a month's visit with her mother, Mrs. J. F. Foster at Tarpley.

We failed to mention last week that Sylvester Mazurek of Utopia, had been the guest of his father, P. Mazurek, several days. Sylvester dropped in to renew his subscription to the little old home paper while here.

Grand Ball at the Opera House Saturday night, August 18. Five-piece jazz band. Everybody come.

Mrs. C. H. Blakeney, of San Antonio, spent several days with relatives here last week.

W. C. Jones and wife, of near London, came down last week and spent a few days with relatives here. They returned home last Thursday, accompanied by Mr. Jones' mother, Mrs. Mattie Jones, who will spend a couple of months with them.

In giving notice of cane threshing in last week's issue the notice read that August Stein would do the threshing, and it should have been Otto Stein. Mr. Stein will begin threshing cane seed August 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Pomp Freeman of Ozona, and daughter, Mrs. Alta Stanard and three children of Pampa, are here on a visit to relatives and old friends. They lived in Bandera county many years, and all of their friends are glad to greet them once more. At the present they are the guests of the New Era family. Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Hunter being sisters.

During the recent fair plenty of entertainment was provided for the vast crowd which came to Bandera. The program provided by Medina folks, the program given by Prof. Austin Carlton and his music class, the fiddler's contest and old folks ball, the rodeo managed by Ed Mansfield, the roping contests, the baseball games, all helped to keep the crowd amused. And best of it all, everything was free. We'd like to see any of our neighboring towns beat Bandera when it comes to entertaining visitors.

Entertainment at the church at Pipe Creek Friday night, August 17, for the benefit of the school. Admission 15c and 25c. Come.

Miss Pfeiffer and Miss Kropp, of San Antonio, are stopping at the Riverside Inn.

Our services can't be beat.—Geo. W. Saunders Livestock Commission Co., San Antonio and Fort Worth, Texas. (adv.)

Miss Blanch Billings, who has been visiting friends and relatives at Tarpley, left Friday for her home at Nixon.

Miss Minnie Mae Mansfield entertained a large number of her friends with a delightful social Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Eckhart went to San Antonio Sunday to visit their son, Howard, who is in the Military Training Camp there.

As we go to press early this week we cannot give a report of the Rocky Creek barbecue held yesterday. We understand a large crowd was in attendance, and the event was a big success in every way.

J. A. Head brought us some of the Chinese ju jubes one day last week. He has a number of ju jube trees growing in his yard and they bear well every year, and they are not affected by dry weather or frost. The fruit makes excellent preserves, and is a natural state tastes very much like the date.

On Friday night, August 24, at the Bandera Theater will be shown a thrilling western film entitled, "West of the Pecos." Portions of this picture were made at the Montague ranch near Bandera, and we know all of our people will want to see it.

The meeting at the Methodist church, which began last Sunday, is progressing nicely and considerable interest is being manifested. The preaching is being done by Rev. J. C. Evans of Kerrville, and Rev. A. M. Foster of Hondo has charge of the song service.

Will Ernest Newton, who has been working in the New Era office the past few months, left Saturday for his home at Hondo, and after spending a few days there he will go to New Orleans to enter the Morgenthaler Linotype School. Will Ernest is a bright lad, a good worker, and we predict that he will make an expert linotype operator within a short time.

Tom L. Morvaietz, Charles Mazurek, V. M. Mazurek and R. M. Mazurek returned Monday from a trip to the Plains country and over into New Mexico. They visited Carlsbad, Roswell, and other places, and also went to see the land in Lamb and Hockley counties where a Catholic colony is to be located.

Lawrence Edwards has purchased the Edwards Brothers Store at Pipe Creek. The firm has been doing a good business and Lawrence will continue to serve the public in a satisfactory manner.

Last week we had the name of J. A. Head in the list of fifty year residents. It should have been Mrs. J. A. Head. Mr. Head came to Bandera county thirty-three years ago.

S. M. Wedgeworth, who is visiting relatives in this county, made a trip to his home near Melvin last week, returning here Sunday.

Will Trench Cane Seed

We will thresh maize and cane seed at F. Masters' place on Seco Creek August 23rd, and at John Bruce's place August 24th.—Frank Mansfield and S. F. Edge.

Rev. Ira Garison is conducting a meeting at the Riverside Baptist church, on West Prong.

Fred Risinger came up from San Antonio after his wife and children who have been visiting Mrs. Risinger's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Tait. They returned home Sunday.

Miss Victoria Montague was here from San Antonio Sunday, the guest of her mother, Mrs. Chas. Montague.

Mrs. Henry Haby had as her guests during the fair, S. C. Loyd and wife of the Divide, Ripple Duke and family of Little Creek, Misses Maude and Blanche Haby of the Divide and Ed Sitler and children of Rio Medina.

Mrs. M. E. Faris of Medina and Mrs. Mellie Stokes of Port Arthur, were visitors at the New Era sanctum Tuesday.

Father Heffernan, of Falls City, is spending the week here, during the absence of Rev. Eckert. Father Boivin has been conducting the regular Sunday services at the Catholic church. Father Heffernan was stationed here for a number of years, and is well known to many of our people.

Rev. Father Boivin, pastor of the Catholic church, has been quite sick in a hospital in San Antonio. His condition is improving and he will soon be able to return to Bandera.

Boyd Stevens and Clinton Risinger leave today for points in California. They will join Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Davenport, who recently went to the Golden State, and are doing well there.

Robert Elam and wife of San Antonio were guests of Mrs. Elam's uncle, John H. Ross, last Sunday.

Mrs. John S. Clark and children, of Coleman county are visiting her brother-in-law, Wilson Clark. Mrs. Clark has been away from Bandera county thirty-eight years, but she finds quite a number of old friends and acquaintances here yet to welcome her.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

County of Bandera.

Whereas, on the 23rd day of July, 1923, R. D. McCrum, the payee named in the hereinafter described note and the beneficiary named in the hereinafter described deed of trust, did appoint the undersigned by an instrument in writing of that date substitute trustee in a certain deed of trust, said deed of trust being recorded in Vol. 7, on pages 633 and 634, Deed of Trust Records of said Bandera County, Texas, said deed of trust having been executed and delivered to E. H. Powell, trustee, on the 27th day of January, 1922, by Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen, for better securing the payment of a certain promissory note for the principal sum of $640.00, said note being fully described in said deed of trust, said note being payable to the order of R. D. McCrum at San Antonio, Texas, being of even date with said deed of trust, bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum, from date until maturity, providing that matured unpaid principal and interest should bear ten per cent per annum interest from date of maturity until paid, the interest on said note being payable semi-anually, the principal sum of said note being payable eighteen months after its date, said note further providing that in event of its failure to pay any installment of principal or interest thereon, when due, the payee or holder might at option declare the entire principal sum evidenced thereby at once due and payable, and further providing for the payment of ten per cent additional on said principal and interest then due as attorney's fees, if placed in the hands of attorneys for collection; and,

Whereas, the said R. D. McCrum is the holder and owner of said note, and the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen have failed to pay any interest whatsoever on said note although three semi-anual installments of interest have become due and payable thereon since its execution and delivery to said R. D. McCrum, and said R. D. McCrum has heretofore elected to exercise the option in said note and deed of trust and declared the entire indebtedness evidenced thereby at once due and payable on account of failure of the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen to pay the interest in said note provided as and when due, and did heretofore and on or about March 1st, 1922, place said note in the hands of Davis & Wright, his attorneys, for collection, and did at such time promise and agree to pay to them the attorney's fees specified in said note above shown, same being the usual and customary fees, and reasonable in amount, and said attorneys did immediately thereafter make demand upon said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen for payment of said note, and the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen have heretofore been notified in writing of all of the foregoing, and there is now due on said note the principal sum of $640.00, interest in the sum of $87.48, and attorney's fees in the sum of $72.74, making in the aggregate amount due $800.22, and,

Whereas, the undersigned has been requested by said R. D. McCrum to enforce said deed of trust, offer for sale between the legal hours thereof, towit, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m., the property described, to highest bidder, for cash, on the first Tuesday in September, 1923, same being the 4th day of September, 1923, at the courthouse door in the town of Bandera, in Bandera county, Texas, the following described property, towit: The West one-half of Sec. 330, Vol. 2, Abs. 1687, Public Free School Land originally granted to W. G. Cooke and subsequently sold to J. L. Penland, assignee, said W. ¼ of said Sec. 330.1 containing 320 acres of land, is about 25 miles west of the town of Bandera, and is known as the "Allen Ranch." Said one-fourth of said section contains 320 acres of land, as per field notes in Vol. B No. 1, Page 342, Bandera County Surveyor's Records. To be sold with all rights, members and appurtenances thereto in anywise belonging.

Witness my hand this 7th day of August, 1923.

The Rocky Creek Barbecue.

The grand barbecue at the ranch of Rocky Creek on Wednesday of last week was one of the big events of the season, and equally the case when those Rocky Creek and Lima people undertake to entertain a big crowd, it was a great success, the barbecue being given for the purpose of raising money for the Rocky Creek school and also to help build a concrete bridge at the Boehm Crossing. A great crowd of people gathered for the barbecue, there were amusements galore, a dance platform was provided for those who wished to dance, there was good music, and the big dinner was all that could be desired. Old friends met together once more and a fine time was had by all. The rodeo and other sports were fully enjoyed.

Alvin P. Langford Killed.

The community was shocked when word came last Monday morning that Alvin P. Langford had accidentally killed himself at his home in Pleasanton. Details of the tragedy were lacking at the time but later the information was learned that he had been cleaning a rifle and it was accidently discharged, the ball penetrating his abdomen, passing through his body and severing the spinal chord. His death was instantaneous. His wife was near and hastened to him but he was dead when she reached his side. Relatives here were immediately notified and arrangements were made to bring the body to Bandera for burial, it reaching here some time Monday night. The funeral was conducted from the old family home and burial at Bandera cemetery Tuesday afternoon. The Woodmen, of which deceased was a member, had charge of the funeral. Rev. Darby of Pleasanton, Rev. E. A. Potts of Bandera and Rev. Evans of Kerrville, assisting. After the services at the grave, six robed and hooded members of the Ku Klux Klan laid a wreath on the new-made mound and placed a firey cross at the head in token of the departure of a faithful brother.

WHY NOT BE INDEPENDENT?
Abraham Lincoln is one of the most outstanding examples of what a man may make of himself if his desire to succeed s great enough. It is within the power of any person who earns to have financial independence in time. One doesn't need to be so much schooled to save as he needs to teach himself how to spend. It is seems so easy to treat one's self to that temporary, tingling exhilaration of spending five dollars for something he thinks he wants, than to feel that permanent, solid feeling of independence that comes with its denial and saving that five spot. Future comfort and prosperity will live and grow in the savings account if you start now.

are in death. Only a few days ago Alvin Langford was with us, in the fullness of a vigorous manhood. He came up from Pleasanton with his family and spent two weeks in Bandera with his aged mother and friends and relatives. For seven years he had been connected with the Texas Company, the great oil corporation, as a faithful, trusted employe. After returning to Pleasanton he severed his connection with the oil corern to accept the management of the Sambell Hotel at Pleasanton, and had just assumed charge of that business when the hand of Death was laid upon him.

Deceased was a warm-hearted, generous man, kind to his family, considerate of his fellowman, and was well liked by all who knew him. From his early boyhood here he had the confidence and esteem of all of the people, old and young. He was a good business man and he had been successful as a salesman as well as in all his undertakings.

Alvin Langford was born in Bandera October 25, 1882, and was raised here. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Langford, Sr. On October 23, 1914, he was happily married to Miss Etta Lippold of near Hondo, and to this union was born two boys, A. P. Langford, Jr., now seven years old, and John Monroe Langford, now four years old. Besides his wife and two sons he is survived by his mother, Mrs. B. F. Langford, Sr. and sisters and brothers as follows: Mrs. Ella Fox of Bandera, Mrs. Leah Matthews, of Beaumont, Edwin P. Langford of Bandera, George H. Langford of Beaumont, M. H. Langford of Bandera, Mrs. Ruby Barnett of Del Rio, and John F. Langford of Bandera.

A meeting is in progress at the Baptist church, being conducted by Revs. Brazeale and Byus.

Mrs. Isabell Viatrek, of Castroville, is the guest of Mrs. Will Batto and other friends here.

Miss Margarete Schoenert, who has been attending a business college in San Antonio, is at home for a short stay.

Mr. and Mrs. George Otters and baby of San Antonio spent several days last week with Mrs. M. L. Surber and family.

Mrs. Joe Shelly and Miss Thelma Rawls, of San Antonio, were guests at the F. A. Hicks ranch near Utopia last week.

Mrs. B. F. Langford, Sr., returned from a visit to her children at Beaumont. She was accompanied home by her grandson, George Morris Langford.

Mrs. Ivy Rugh Bass, who has been the guest of her brother, C. R. Rugh and family for several weeks, left Sunday for her home in San Antonio. She was accompanied by Duane Rugh, who will spend a week there.

WHY NOT BE INDEPENDENT?

Abraham Lincoln is one of the most outstanding examples of what a man may make of himself if his desire to succeed is great enough. It is within the power of any person who earns to have financial independence—in time. One doesn't need to be so much schooled to save as he needs to teach himself how to spend. It is seems so easy to treat one's self to that temporary, tingling exhilaration of spending five dollars for something he thinks he wants, than to feel that persistent, solid feeling of independence that comes with its denial and saving that five spot. Future comfort and prosperity will live and grow in the savings account if you start now.

TARPLEY TOPICS.

Miss Billings and Mrs. Hutchison of Nopal, Texas, spent several weeks with kinsfolks here, leaving for their home last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Yeas leave the first of September for Arizona to make their home.

Mr. Andrews of Castroville was here last week buying cattle for R. M. Wiffle, coming to Hondo Saturday after some kinfolks. We did not learn their names.

Bryan Sparks went to Castroville last week with cattle.

Anton Sautlieff, of San Antonio visited his parents here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bryan returned from the Dallas fair last week. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan report a fine time.

Charlie Ross was seen on our streets Sunday.

Jim Wright has purchased the Clark mill and will do grinding.

Mrs. Jim Glass and children, of Medina, spent last week here. Mrs. Glass, who was seriously ill, is much better at last report.

Come to Sunday School Morning at the Baptist church and afternoon at the Methodist church.

TUFF TOPICS.

Mrs. J. R. Smart and children of California have been visiting relatives here the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Medlin visited Mrs. J. L. Frame Friday.

A new school house is being built here.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Sutherland visited Mrs. Sam Frame Sunday.

The Baptist meeting closed Sunday night. Everybody enjoyed the sermons by Rev. Ira Garrison and we hope to have him hold another meeting next summer.

Mrs. R. H. Light made a business trip to Medina Saturday.

Mrs. C. W. Livingston went to San Antonio Thursday.

Mrs. Ben Hamilton of Port Arthur, is visiting homefolks for a few days.

Mrs. May Mitchell, of San Antonio is spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Manning.

For President of the United States on any ticket:

HENRY FORD

The conveniences and comfort of a good road is a magnet that draws trade and business, that spreads prosperity into the surrounding country. It makes a town seem like a live one. The streets of its business center are well filled with visitors, while a town with poor outlying roads finds visitors going elsewhere. It costs something to solve the good roads problem, but it costs more not to.

The Christadelphian meeting begins today. A cordial invitation is extended to everybody to attend the meeting, and expresses the hope that all will come and see the unity and brotherly love that will predominate in the meeting.

The county commissioners in session last week passed an order requiring that tick inspection be only quarantined herds. There are now about fifty-one herds under quarantine in the county, and the action of the commissioners in this matter will help considerably to reduce the quarantine.

"The Covered Wagon."

The New Era editor acknowledges receipt of an invitation from the manager of the Majestic Theater at San Antonio to attend the matinee next Monday at that popular playhouse and witness the presentation of Emerson Hough's story, "The Covered Wagon." The picture will be presented daily throughout the next week, beginning Sunday, and every old pioneer should see it, for it is one of the most true-to-life stories ever written. Emerson Hough really belonged to the boundless west. He was a man of the range and he handled range subjects in a masterly way. Only a short time before his death last spring he wrote a great story "North of 36," which was published in the Saturday Evening Post and which was read by many of our people. The story was based on facts gleaned from the book "The Trail Drivers of Texas," written by the New Era editor, and published under the direction of George W. Saunders. The story of "The Covered Wagon," which is to be shown at the Majestic Theater portrays emigrant life in the early days, and the picture was produced at tremendous cost. It is well worth all the time you may lose to go to San Antonio to see it.

"There is a Reason"

Superintendent Marrs Planned BIG FOOT WALLACE KILLS A BIG INDIAN

A meeting of some [illegible] trustees and teachers was held [illegible] at Medina, with Superintendent Marrs reiterated his intention at the Federal court decision disavowing the $40,000 "text book contracts" and looks forward to this huge sum being saved to the direct use of the schools through the present year. Although he said this may not come until next year. Disposing of the financing of the public schools is the biggest problem that confronts a county superintendent of a greater activity on the part of county assessors in listing personal property, and of prosecuting delinquents in the collection of personal property taxes and the universal payment of poll taxes, 81 of which goes directly to the school fund.

Mrs. Marrs, prominent in the organized woman's work and who also spoke at the meeting, insisted that parent-teacher organizations were giving invaluable aid in obtaining school equipment which is outside the province of trustees.

Bandera needs more organization along this line. Parent-Teacher Association and Mothers Clubs should be organized and begin working in every school district in the county. It is highly necessary that harmonious action be taken if our schools are to make advancement this year.

It was a town girl—and the same sad story that alas, has often been told and whispered in many a young life which had its beginning in sunshine, surrounded by luxury and the wealth of the world. Her eyes were wild and starting and her face was flushed and her hands were nervously working. She was deeply troubled and injured woman, and she bore her saying: "Oh, cruel one! you have injured the very foundation of my being! They by day you have tortured me, and yet I could not cease to give you up. When we first met, how your ease and polish attracted me! When you called on my own home my friends were envied me! But your under-standing is too small for my large soul. You are opposed to my advancing myself. You have injured my standing in society. If we had never met, I might have walked in peace. So now begone! We part forever!" There was a moment's convulsive breathing, a gritting of teeth and a sharp sigh. It was all over. By a supreme effort she had pulled off her new shoes.—Ex.

BIG FOOT WALLACE KILLS A BIG INDIAN

The following sketch was published many years ago in a book let entitled "Adventures of Big Foot Wallace," and was here reprinted for the benefit of our readers who knew of this remarkable frontier character:

In the fall of 1842 Indians were seen on the frontiers than they had been before for since that time. Your humble stake was [illegible] night with anxious expectation of finding him the next morning and as fellow's scalp wasn't safe on my head outside of the stockade I soon made up my mind that I would not go to the frontier. At last came to the conclusion that something had to be done or else they would be compelled to fall back on the settlements which would have been reversing the natural order of things, so we collected by agreement at my ranch, organized a company of forty men and the next time the Indians came down from the mountains we took the track determined to follow it as long as there were two Indians in the war trail led me up toward the headwaters of the Llano, and on the third day out I discovered a fresh Indian trail signal smoke rising up a long distance off in the direction we were traveling. That night we camped near a water hole and I stood guard for an hour or two before daylight and then set about whether there were any Indians or not.

Then I was willing enough to lay down and tell the guard to give me a call whenever I wanted to leave. I whetted up Old Butch and then examined two bullets down the throat of Sweet Lips and left camp two hours before daylight, and started off in the direction of the smoke I had seen the evening before.

The general was as thick as one of the hair on a dog's back, but I confided through it and after the third day I got through it a mile and a half. I came to a deep canyon that seemed to head up in the direction I was traveling. I scrambled into it and waited until day began to break, then slowly and carefully continued my course along the bed of the canyon, which was crooked, and in some places very narrow that there was scarcely enough room in it for two men to ride abreast.

I caught it came to a place where it made a sudden turn to the left and that as I passed the mouth of the canyon against the sky I saw a big Indian afoot coming down the canyon. I supposed that he was coming out of the canyon to the direction of my camp and I encountered him at the same time, and we encountered each other like two cats. We both stood for a moment unarmed to do, and stood looking at each other like two cats when they are about to dispute the carcass of a dead deer. The Indian had a gun as well as I, but we were too close to each other to shoot, and it seemed we both came to the conclusion at the same time, for we both dropped our rifles and grappled each other, saying not a word. You see, boys, I am a pretty strong man yet, but when those days, without meaning to brag, I do not believe there was a stronger man on the Colorado river that could stand up against me in a regular catamount, bear hug, hand-to-hand fight, but the minute I belied that Indian, I knew I had undertaken a job that would bring the sweat from me, and perhaps blood too. He was nearly as tall as I am, say six feet one or two inches, and would weigh, I suppose, about 175 pounds net, for he had no clothes on worth mentioning. I had the advantage of him in weight, but he was as wirey and active as a cat, and as sleek as an eel; and no wonder, either, for he was greased from head to foot with bear's oil. At it we went in right down earnest, without a word being spoken by either of us—first up one side of the canyon, down in the bottom, then up the other side, and the dust flew in such a way that had one been passing along on the bank above they would have supposed that a small whirlwind was raging below. It was, however, a little stronger of the two, and when we rose to our feet I could throw him easily enough, but the moment he touched the ground the varmint would give himself a sort of squirm, like a snake, and pop right on top of me, and I could not hold him still a minute, he was so sleek with bear's grease.

Each of us was busy trying to draw his butcher knife from the sheath all the time, but neither could get a chance to do it. At last I found my breath was failing me, and I came to the conclusion that if I did not do something soon I should have my note to pay, certainly. I knew the Indian was like a lobo wolf and was getting better the longer he fought. So next time we rose I gave him a back handed trip that brought his head with great force against a sharp pointed rock that was lying on the ground. He was completely stunned by the shock for an instant, and before he fairly came to I snatched my knife from the sheath and drove it to the hilt in his body. The moment he felt the cold steel he threw me from him as if I had been a ten-penny nail, sprang upon me before I could rise, drew his own butcher knife and raised it above his head with the intention of plunging it into my breast.

I tell you what, boys, I often see that Indian now in my dreams, particularly after eating a hearty supper of bear meat and then stepping out of doors. He had his left hand and his right-hand his two fierce eyes flashing like a panther's in the dark. It is astonishing how fast a man can think under such circumstances. He thinks faster in such cases than along one of these new-fangled telegraph lines. I looked toward the blue sky above me and bid it a long farewell, for in the twinkling of the sparkling water and bright sun. Then I thought of my mother as I remembered her when I left her old home in the old home, the apple orchard, the old church where I used to go to meeting and the commons where I used to play when a boy. Then I thought I could catch, and then I thought of Alice Ann, a pinecone, pet, before built upon woman I had a notion to woo, and then I thought of the Zone, and many more thoughts besides flashed through my mind in the little time that knife was gleaming in the air. All at once the Indian gave a keen, piercing yell and sent the knife to the hilt in the hard earth at my side.

Then I had thrown the Indian to the ground, his eyes from the sun so that he could not see me. I drew my knife from his forehead by the sharp pointed rock, and the blood running into his eyes from the wound blinded him so that he had no aim. I fully expected he would repeat the blow, but he did not, and made no effort to draw his knife from the ground. I looked at his eyes and they were closed hard and fast, but there was a devilish sort of grin still about his mouth as if he had died in the belief that he had sent me before him to the happy hunting grounds. I threw him off of me to the bottom of the canyon stone dead. My knife had gone to his heart. I looked at him some time, lying there so still and stiffening fast in the cool morning air and said to myself: "Well old fellow, you made a good fight of it anyhow, and if luck had been against you you would have taken my sign in' to a certainty and Alice Ann would have lost the best string she's got to her bow. Now I'm going to do for you what I've never done for an Indian before; I am going to give you a decent burial." So I broke his gun into a dozen pieces and laid them beside him, according to the Indian custom, so it might be handy for him when he got to the happy hunting grounds (though if they haven't first rate smiths there I don't think it will be of much use) and then I pulled up some pieces of grass from the canyon and completely covered him so he would be safe from the attacks of coyotes and other animals, and there I have no doubt, his bones are to this day. This is a true account of my fight with the big Indian.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA and DANGER

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved—Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus, enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in the great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its nauseating qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

KEEP OUT.

Our pastures on Wiman's Creek are posted and hunting with gun or dogs, or otherwise trespassing therein is strictly forbidden.—E. B. Fries, W. L. Fries. Aug2-6mp

Kerrville's Grand Old Man.

Farm and Ranch, Aug. 4th: Out Kerrville way big hearts and big visions go with wealth. From an undeveloped frontier a great people, striving together toward worthy ideals, have wrested prosperity for themselves, and converted a rugged Texas frontier into a haven for healthseekers and a place of happy homes.

Capt. Charles Schreiner, who constitutes a living monument to the Kerrville spirit of co-operative enterprise, is outstanding as a figure who has toiled hard to build a mighty fortune, and who has forgotten neither the people who toiled with him nor the country that yielded up its riches at his behest.

All Kerrville recently joined in celebrating the eighty fifth birthday of this strong handsome veteran of many a community struggle. To the silver spray of Captain Schreiner's hair run the threads of a colorful life drama painted with scenes of Indian fighting, adventures as a Texas Ranger, and soldiering in the Confederate Army, and building up a sound commerce.

In 1869 Captain Schreiner, his character and industry as security, induced the late August Faltin to invest $5,000 in a wool and mohair commission business, the house of Faultin & Schriener being established. The enterprise started with headquarters in a cypress shack with loose fit-ting boards and eighteen feet long; set beside the little frail that regressented the main avenue of trade. Ten years later Captain Schreiner bought out his partner and continued the business alone.

This firm, started fifty-four years ago, on such a modest scale marked the beginning of one of the largest commission businesses of its kind in Texas, and made Kerrville the largest individual wool and mohair market in the United States. Then came, as logical developments, the Schreiner Land & Cattle Company, a big bank, and numerous other needed concerns. For two years Captain Schreiner served his people as District Clerk and for thirty years as County Treasurer. He has never denied his community the full advantage of his experience, his ability, his wisdom and his prestige. Through his efforts many trade lines have been diverted in the direction of the country he loves so well.

Captain Scheiner, not content with the prosperity reflecting on his section from the success of his numerous activities, has for many years made a practice of giving liberally to education, infirmaries, to civic improvements, and to a wide array of miscellaneous causes. Among his principal benefactions are the following:

To the Schreiner Institute, a Presbyterian school for boys, $250,000 and a 40-acre farm.

To the American Legion Hospital for Tubercular men, $40,000 for the purchase of a site.

To permanent maintenance of roads, $175,000.

To hospital in Kerrville, the income to be applied to operations and treatment of indigent citizens of Kerrville, $40,000.

To the county road between Kerrville and Rocksprings, on Schreiner Highway, $35,000.

To building six miles hard surfaced roads Kerrville Precinct, $35,000.

As the Kerrville Mountain Sun says in comments, "The life of Captain Charles Schreiner would be an object lesson to all Americans who are fighting battle against adversity. Beginning with nothing and having to fight to keep it, at that, his rise was a determined battle against every sort of woe, in a financial independence which has made his neighboring Texans many times large beneficiaries. Kerr County never had a more useful citizen than he."

Captain Schreiner's is a life well spent, filled with many good deeds.

OUR CHOICE.

For President of the United States on any ticket:

HENRY FORD

The conveniences and comfort of a good road is a magnet that draws trade and business, that spreads prosperity into the surrounding country. It makes a town seem like a live one. The streets of its business center are well filled with visitors, while a town with poor outlying roads finds visitors going elsewhere. It costs something to solve the good roads problem, but it costs more not to.

The Christadelphian meeting began today at Gray Hall in Bandera and Medina, at the Kutzer's place. It is expected that brethren will be on hand from different parts of the country, and a great meeting is anticipated. Capt. G. W. Bantz requests the New Era to extend a cordial invitation to everybody to attend the meetings, and expresses the hope that all will come and see the unity and brotherly love that will predominate in the meeting.

The county commissioners in session last week passed an order requiring that tick inspectors dip only quarantined herds. There are now about fifty-one herds under quarantine in the county, and the action of the commissioners in this matter will help considerably to reduce the quarantine.

"The Covered Wagon."

The New Era editor acknowledges receipt of an invitation from the manager of the Majestic Theater at San Antonio to attend the matinee next Monday at that popular playhouse and witness the presentation of Emerson Hough's story, "The Covered Wagon." The picture will be presented daily throughout the next week, beginning Sunday, and every old pioneer should see it, for it is one of the most true-to-life stories ever written. Emerson Hough really belonged to the boundless west. He was a man of the range and he handled range subjects in a masterly way. Only a short time before his death last spring he wrote a great story "North of 36," which was published in the Saturday Evening Post and which was read by many of our people. The story was based on facts gleaned from the book "The Trail Drivers of Texas," written by the New Era editor, and published under the direction of George W. Saunders. The story of "The Covered Wagon," which is to be shown at the Majestic Theater portrays emigrant life in the early days, and the picture was produced at tremendous cost. It is well worth all the time you may lose to go to San Antonio to see it.

J. A. Head accompanied L. H. Hayes to San Antonio Monday.

Superintendent Marry Pleased

At the meeting of some twenty trustees and teachers held Saturday at Supt. Marry reiterated his attitude as the Federal court decision concerning the $40,000 text book contracts and looks forward to this huge sum being saved to the school tax payers through the elimination of the graft. He said this may not come until next year. Discussing the finances of the county he said that the county is in a healthy condition as a whole, in spite of a greater activity on the part of county assessors in listing personal property, and of prospective increases in assessed valuations in some precincts. The universal payment of poll taxes, of which goes directly to the school fund.

Mrs. Marry, prominent in the organized woman's work and who also spoke at the meeting, insisted that parent-teacher organizations were proving invaluable in obtaining school equipment which is outside the province of trustees.

Bandera needs more organization along this line. Parent-Teacher Association and Mothers Clubs should be organized and begin working in every school district in the county. It is very necessary, that harmonious action be taken if our schools are to make advancement this year.

It was a town girl—and the same sad story that ahs has of many a young life which had its beginning in sunshine, surrounded by luxury and the wealth of the world. Her eyes were now wild and restless, her face flushed and her hands were nervously working. She was plainly troubled and injured. "Oh, cruel one! you have injured the very foundation of my happiness. Day by day you have tortured me, and I could not bear to give you up. When we first met, how you ease and polish attracted me! When you became my friend, how my friends envied me! But your under standing is too small for my large soul. You are opposed to my advancing myself. You have injured my standing in society. If we had never met, I might have walked in peace. So now begone! We part forever." There was a moment's convulsive breathing, a gritting of teeth and a sharp sigh. It was all over. By a supreme effort she had pulled off her new shoes.—Ex.

BIG FOOT WALLACE KILLS A BIG INDIAN

The following sketch was published many years ago in a book, let entitled "Adventures of Big Foot Wallace," and we here reproduce it for the benefit of our readers who knew of this remarkable frontier character:

In the fall of 1842 Indians were more than usually troublesome along the frontiers than they have been before or since that time. They would, under the cover of night, make a descent into some settlement, murder and plunder all they met and then retreat with such celerity as to render all attempts of finding him the next morning, and, as fellow's scalp hung in his belt, his dead bundle of plunder on his shoulder, people in the frontier at last came to the conclusion that something had to be done or else they would be compelled to fall back to the settlements, which would have been reversing the natural order of things, so we collected by agreement at my ranch, organized a company of forty men and the next time the Indians came down from the mountains we took the trail determined to follow it as long as a hoof could be found on the trail and as no toward the headwaters of the Llano, and on the third day out I discovered a column of dust and signal smoke rising up a long distance off in the direction we were traveling. That night we camped near a water hole, and I would get up on the top of a hill before daylight and find out whether there were any Indians in sight.

If I was willing enough to lie so go, and tell the guard to pass me out whenever I wanted to. I whetted up Old Butch and a little, rammed two bullets down the throat of Sweet Lips, and left camp two hours before daylight, and started off in the direction of the smoke I had seen the evening before.

The general was as thick in some places as the hair on a dog's back, but I sniffed through it, and in the dark and after I had gone through it a mile and a half I came to a deep canyon that seemed to head up in the direction I was going. I scrambled down into it and waited until day began to break, then slowly and cautiously continued my course along the bottom of the canyon, which was crooked, and in some places very narrow that there was scarcely enough room in it for two men to ride abreast.

At length I came to a place where it made a sudden turn to the left and just as I turned the corner I encountered a big Indian, who was coming up the canyon on foot. I suppose with drawn bowie knife in hand, and we both came to a halt at the same time, and on seeing each other like two enemies as we were, we did not stand there and look at each other for a moment undecided what to do, and stood glaring at each other like two enraged tigers when they are about to dispute the carcass of a dead deer. The Indian had a gun as well as I, but we were too close to fire at each other to shoot, and it seemed as both came to the conclusion as soon as to what was best to be done about the same time, for we both dropped our rifles and grappled each other, saying not a word. You see, boys, I am a pretty strong man, but when it comes to fighting with meaning to brag, I do not believe there was a better man of the Colorado river that could stand up against me in a regular catamount, bear hug, hand-to-hand fight, but the minute I met that Indian, I knew I had undertaken a job that would bring the sweat from me, and perhaps blood too. He was nearly as tall as I am, say about feet one or two inches, and would weigh, I suppose, about 175 pounds net, for he had no clothes on worth mentioning. I had the advantage of him in weight, but he was as wirey and active as a cat, and as sleek as an eel; and no wonder, either, for he was greased from head to foot with bear's oil. At it we went in right down earnest, without a word being spoken by either of us—first up one side of the canyon, down in the bottom, then up the other side, and the dust flew in such a way that had one been passing along on the bank above they would have supposed that a small whirlwind was raging below. I was, however, a little stronger of the two, and when we rose to our feet I could throw him easily enough, but the moment he touched the ground the varmint would give himself a sort of squirm, like a snake, and pop right on top of me, and I could not hold him still a minute, he was so sleek with bear's grease.

Each of us was busy trying to draw his butcher knife from the sheath all the time, but neither could get a chance to do it. At length I found my breath was failing me, and I came to the conclusion that if I did not do something soon I should have my nose taken for a certainty, for the Indian was like a lobo wolf and was getting better the longer he fought. So next time we rose I gave out all my strength and gave him a back handed trip that brought his head with great force against a sharp pointed rock that lay just on the ground. He was completely stunned by the shock for an instant, and before he fairly came to I snatched my knife from the sheath and drove it to the hilt in his body. The moment he felt the cold steel he threw me from him as if I had been a tenderfoot, sprang upon me before I could get my knife from his throat with his left hand and his glittering butcher knife raised in the right—his two fierce eyes gleaming like a panther's in the dark. It is astonishing how fast a man can think under such circumstances. He thinks faster than words can be put out of these new fangled telegraph lines. I looked toward the blue sky above me and bid it a long farewell, and my heart turned to the sparkling water and bright sun. Then I thought of my mother as I remembered her when I was a little boy at her knee, and the apple orchard, where I used to fish for minnows, and the commons where I used to play marbles, and my pony which I could catch and ride. I thought of Alice Ann, a blue-eyed, golden haired young woman I had a notion to make love to, and down in the Zavalo settlement, and those and many more thoughts besides flashed through my mind in the time that knife was drawn and descending. All at once the Indian gave a keen yell, and struck the knife to the hilt in the hard earth at my side.

Quick as a flash I threw the Indian a deep gash had been cut in his forehead by the sharp pointed rock, and the blood running into his eyes from the wound, blinded him so that he missed his aim. I fully expected he would repeat the blow, but he sprang back and made no effort to draw his knife from the ground. I looked at his eyes and they were closed hard and fast, but there was a devilish sort of grin still about his mouth as if he had died in the belief that he had sent me before him to the happy hunting grounds. I threw him off of me to the bottom of the canyon stone dead. My knife had gone to his heart. I looked at him some time, lying there so still and stiffening fast in the cool morning air and said to myself: "Well old fellow, you made a good fight of it anyhow, and if luck had not been against you you would have taken my sign in' to a certainty and Alice Ann would have lost the best string she's got to her bow. Now I'm gong to do for you what I've never done for an Indian before; I am going to give you a decent burial." So I took his gun into a dozen pieces and laid them beside him, according to the Indian custom, so it might be handy for him when he got to the happy hunting grounds (though if they haven't first rate smiths there I don't think it will fit to his case soon) and then I piled up some pieces of rock from the canyon and completely covered him so he would be safe from the attacks of coyotes and other animals, and—there, I have no doubt, his bones are to this day. This is a true account of my fight with the big Indian.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA AND DANGER

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of the sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

Kerrville's Grand Old Man

Farm and Ranch, Aug. 4th: Out Kerrville way big hearts and big ideas go with wealth. From an undeveloped frontier a great people, striving together toward worthy ideals, have wrested prosperity for themselves, and converted a rugged Texas frontier into a haven for healthseekers and a place of happy homes.

Capt. Charles Schreiner, who constitutes a living monument to the Kerrville spirit of co-operative enterprise, is outstanding as a figure who has lived hard to build a mighty fortune, and who has forgotten neither the people who toiled with him nor the country that yielded up its riches at his behest.

All Kerrville recently joined in celebrating the eighty fifth birthday of this strong handsome veteran of many a community struggle. In the silver gray of Captain Schreiner's hair run the threads of a colorful life drama painted with scenes of Indian fighting, adventuring as a Texas Ranger, and soldiering in the Confederate Army, and building up a sound commerce.

To 1860 Captain Schreiner, his character and industry as security, induced the late August Faltin to invest $6,000 in a wool and mohair commission business, the house of Faultin & Schriener being established. The enterprise started with headquarters in a cypress shack sixteen feet wide and eighteen feet long, set beside the little frail that represented the main avenue of traffic. Ten years later Captain Schreiner bought out his partner and continued the business alone.

This firm, started fifty-four years ago in such a modest scale, marked the beginning of one of the largest commission businesses of its kind in Texas, and made Kerrville, the largest interior wool and mohair market in the United States. Then came, as logical developments, the Schreiner Livestock Company, a big bank, and numerous other needed concerns. For two years Captain Schreiner served his people as District Clerk and for thirty years as County Treasurer. He has never denied his community the full advantage of his experience, his ability, his wisdom and his prestige. Through his efforts many trade lines have been diverted in the direction of the country he loves so well.

Captain Scheiner, not content with the prosperity reflecting on his section from the success of his numerous activities, has for many years made a practice of giving liberally to education, infirmaries, to civic improvements, and to large array of miscellaneous causes. Among his personal benefactions are the following:

To the Schreiner Institute, a Presbyterian school for boys, $250,000 and a 40-acre farm.

To the American Legion Hospital for Tubercular soldiers, $40,000 for the purchase of a site.

To permanent maintenance roads, $175,000.

To hospital in Kerrville, the income to be applied to operations and treatment of indigent citizens of Kerrville, $40,000.

To Real county road between Kerrville and Rocksprings, on Schreiner Highway, $35,000.

To building six miles of surfaced roads Kerrville Precinct, $35,000.

As the Kerrville Mountain Sun says in its comments, "The life of Captain Charles Schreiner would be an object lesson to all Americans who are fighting battle against adversity. Beginning with nothing and having to fight to keep it, at that, his rise was a determined battle against every sort of woe, to a financial independence which has made his neighboring Texans many times large beneficiaries. Kerr County never had a more useful citizen than he."

Captain Schreiner's is a life well spent, filled with many good deeds.

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus, entefs upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

Kerrville's Grand Old Man

Farm and Ranch, Aug. 4th: Out Kerrville way big hearts and big visions go with wealth. From an undeveloped frontier a great people, striving together toward worthy ideals, have wrested prosperity for themselves, and converted a rugged Texas frontier into a haven for healthseekers and a place of happy homes.

Capt. Charles Schreiner, who constitutes a living monument to the Kerrville spirit of co-operative enterprise, is outstanding as a figure who has toiled hard to build a mighty fortune, and who has forgotten neither the people who toiled with him nor the country that yielded up its riches at his behest.

All Kerrville recently joined in celebrating the eighty fifth birthday of this strong handsome veteran of many a community struggle. In the silver gray of Captain Schreiner's hair run the threads of a colorful life drama painted with scenes of Indian fighting, adventuring as a State Ranger, and soldiering in the Confederate Army, and building up a sound commerce.

In 1869 Captain Schreiner, his character and industry as security, induced the late August Faltin to invest $5,000 in a wool and mohair commission business, the house of Faultin & Schriener being established. THE WORLD'S END

Millions Now Living Will Never Die

The Most Momentous Event of The Earth's History is the near establishment of God's kingdom among men, but strange to say, this dominating theme of the Bible has been almost overlooked by those who profess the Christian religion. Every one of the inspired writers testified concerning a time of everlasting happiness for the human race—"times of restitution" of lost blessings and possessions. Jesus and His Apostles preached that this gospel of blessing is for the vast majority; not a message of woe for all except a few.

The Kingdom of God which they heralded is the same as foretold by the prophets in such thrilling and positive language. Not a mysterious, intangible arrangement having no meaning for the toiler and sufferer, but one which will bring such practical and understandable things as complete health, beautiful homes, luxuriant vegetation, sublime climate righteous laws and— greatest of all—unending life upon the earth.

The Scriptures Are Clear in their proclamation that many people will be so favored as to live through the present transition period when mankind passes from the thraldom of Satan's misrule to the glorious liberty of the kingdom of God, and these will actually never die. It is your duty and privilege to inform yourself concerning the cause of the present universal unrest and the wonderful blessings to follow by attending the lecture by

J. A. BOHNET, Sunday, Sept. 2nd 2:30 P. M. at the Court House

Auspices International Bible Students Association, Organized by the Late Pastor Russell, Judge Rutherford, New York City Bar, President

Mrs. Whitson Justice has been employed to teach the Rocky Creek school.

Mr. and Mrs. William Icke, of San Antonio, are spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Alex Adamietz.

Mrs. Joseph Flynn was a visitor in the city Saturday and renewed her subscription to the New Era.

T. F. Berry, the Red Bluff ranchmen, was a visitor in the city Tuesday, and enrolled as a New Era subscriber.

The Medina Missionary Society of Methodist church are ice cream supper next Friday night, Aug. 24. Everybody invited. Proceeds to go toward payment on piano.

Mrs. C. Long and baby, who have been the guests of Mrs. Long's mother, Mrs. Joseph Flynn, the past three months, have returned to their home in Dallas.

Col. C. W. Bush and his good wife leave next week for California. They will go overland in their auto and expect to be absent several months, spending the winter in the Golden State.

Work on the bridge across Bandera Greek on the San Antonio road was completed this week. Commissioner Jim Holt and his crew have put in a structure that will probably stay there in spite of high-water. The foundation is solid.

James Cox has purchased a piano and installed it in the opera house.

Mrs. Amanda Riley and children, Carrie, Ida Mae and Henry are here from Fort Arthur on a visit to relatives and old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Miller, of Bandera Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Ike Cooke, of Center Point.

Mrs. Ruby Barrett of Del Rio, Mrs. Leah Matthews of Bonmont, M. H. Langford of Kenedy and George Langford of Beeville, came to attend the funeral of their brother, Alvin J. Langford, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Pomp Freeman, accompanied by Warren Hunter and Warren Stanard, went to San Antonio Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Alta Stanard and children will in a few days return to their homes at Ozona and Pampa, respectively.

R. E. Willis and daughter, Miss Stella Mae, of Tarpley, went to Coryell county this week to take Rev. J. T. Canafax and wife, who go to accept a school in that county. Rev. Canafax has been pastor of the Medina Methodist church the past two years and also taught the Rocky Creek school last term.

Mr. C. W. Billings and daughter, Miss Ruth, came from San Antonio Saturday. Miss Ruth has been at the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Nichols, the past month. Owing to Mrs. Nichols' feeble critically ill and is still in a serious condition but, some improvement is noticeable, and it is hoped she will soon recover. Miss Ellen holds a good position in San Antonio and came home for a week's rest.

Lee Mansfield announces that on Sept. 1, his store will be converted into a cash and carry establishment. It will be operated on a strictly cash basis, the delivery system now in effect will be discontinued. The cash and carry plan has been successfully carried out in many towns and Mr. Mansfield will be the first to inaugurate it here. The reduction of expenses by this plan will mean great savings to his customers on their groceries.

Rev. I. V. Garison dropped in to see us Monday and advanced his subscription figures. He has just closed a good meeting at the Riverside Baptist church on West Presno and reports four professions with two additions to the church. Rev. Garison is attending school at Seminary Hill, Fort Worth, and says he will be there the next two years. He is a Bandera county boy, and is making good in the field to which he has been called.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Custer of London, accompanied by their son, Henry Custer and his little son of Katemey, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Bush and family of Laxson Creek recently. Mrs. Custer is the eldest sister of Mrs. Bush. They lived in Bandera and Kerr counties many years before moving to London. All of their relatives and friends were glad to see them once more. While here they also visited Mrs. Custer's brother, J. C. Witt and family at San Antonio, and on their way back to Bandera visited their old home place and friends on Pipe Creek. They started home last Saturday, going by way of Center Point, where they visited relatives and friends.

Fresh Vegetables at my garden Mrs. C. W. Sievert.

John Heimen is drilling a well for Tom Gray at the Langford House.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Ikes of Utopia, spent a few days at Pecan last week.

Mrs. S. Mazurek and children and Mrs. Antonia Hicks, of Hondo, are spending the week in San Antonio.

George L. Dixon, the obliging Tarpley postmaster, accompanied a friend scout in the New Era sanctum Monday. He came over to attend to some business in the county capital, returning home the same day.

Prof. C. T. Carlton and son, Austin Carlton, returned Saturday from a visit to old friends at Bonhame. They were accompanied home by two of Prof. Carlton's grandsons, Sydney and Ray Smith of Bonham, who will spend awhile here.

James Cox announces an Old Fashioned to take place at his Opera House Friday night, Aug. 31. Old time fiddling and dancing will be in order. Fiddlers are requested to bring their fiddles. See add in lower right hand corner of this page.

The New Era editor, accompanied by Miss Myra Jeanette Hunt, drove to Pipe Creek Sunday. Marvin Hunter, of Waelder, and the Hemphill ranch showed them the sights and a good meal at the Hemphill ranch house. We had a delightful outing, hunting and swimming. That is a beautiful region with many delightful camping places.

J. P. Schlather, of the Schlather Mercantile Co., Pleasanton, was a visitor in the city Monday. Mr. Schlather was formerly in the mercantile business at Bandera and has many friends here who were glad to see him. Mr. Schlather is a booster for Pleasanton and says that town is enjoying a good business. Crops are fine in that section and Mr. Schlather says he will be a subscriber to the New Era.

Mrs. Ben Hall and children, Ben, Jr., and Miss Ruth, of Austin, arrived Monday for a visit to the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen. Mrs. Hall has wholly failed to pay any interest whatsoever on said note although three separate and distinct payments of interest have become due and payable thereon since the execution and delivery to said R. D. McCrum, and the said D. McCrum has heretofore elected to exercise the option in said note provided and has heretofore declared the entire indebtedness evidenced thereby at once due, and payable, and has refused to pay any of the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen to them the attorney's fees specified in said note, as above shown, s/she being the usual and customary fees, and reasonable in amount, and said attorneys did immediately thereafter make demand upon said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen for payment of said note, and the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen have heretofore been notified in writing of all of the foregoing, and there is now due on said note the principal sum of $640.00, interest in the sum of $87.48, and attorney's fees in the sum of $72.74, making the aggregate amount due $800.22, and,

Whereas, the undersigned has been requested by said R. D. McCrum to enforce said trust, I will offer for sale between the legal hours thereof, towit, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m., at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, on the first Tuesday in September, 1923, same being the 4th day of September, 1923, at the courthouse door in the town of Bandera, in Bandera county, Texas, the following described property, towit: The West one-fourth of Sec. 330.1, Cert. No. 1687, Public Free School Land originally granted to W. G. Cooke, and subsequently sold to J. L. Penland, assignee, said W. ½ of said Sec. 330.1 containing 320 acres of land, is about 25 miles west of the town of Bandera, and is known as the "Allen Ranch." Said one-fourth of said section contains 320 acres of land, as per field notes in Vol. B No. 1, Page 342, Bandera County Surveyor's Records. To be sold with all rights, members and appurtenances thereto in anywise belonging.

Witness my hand this 7th day of August, 1923.

ARTHUR V. WRIGHT
Trustee

Mr. and Mrs. Weekman and daughter, Miss Hazel, of Fort Sam Houston, were guests in the Surber home Sunday. They were accompanied by Master Cecil Surber, who spent the week-end there.

THE WORLD'S END

Millions Now Living Will Never Die

The Most Momentous Event of The Earth's History is the near establishment of God's kingdom among men; big strange to say, this dominating theme of the Bible has been almost overlooked by those who profess the Christian religion. Every one of the inspired writers testified concerning a time of everlasting happiness for the human race, a time of restoration of lost blessings and possessions. Jesus and His Apostles preached that this gospel of blessing is for the vast majority; not a message of woe for all except a few.

The kingdom of God which they heralded is the same one foretold by the prophets in such brilling and positive language. "Not a mysterious, intangible arrangement having no meaning for the toiler and sufferer, but one, which will bring such practical and understandable things as complete health, beautiful homes, luxuriant vegetation, sublime climate righteous laws and— greatest of all—unending life upon the earth.

The Scriptures Are Clear in Their proclamation that many people will be so favored as to live through the present transition period when mankind passes from the thraldom of Satan's misrule to the glorious liberty of the kingdom of God, and these will actually never die. It is your duty and privilege to inform yourself concerning the cause of the present universal unrest and the wonderful blessings to follow by attending the lecture by

Mrs. Whitson Justice has been employed to teach the Rocky Creek school.

Mr. and Mrs. William Icke, of San Antonio, are spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Abe Alsup's residence.

Mr. Joseph Flynn was a visitor in the city Saturday and returned her subscription to the New Era.

T. E. Berry, the Red Bluff ranchmen, was a visitor in the city Tuesday, and enrolled as a New Era subscriber.

The Medina Missionary Society of Medina will give an ice cream supper next Friday night, Aug. 24. Everybody invited. Proceeds to go toward payment on piano.

Mrs. C. Young and baby, who have been the guests of Mrs. Long's mother, Mrs. Joseph Flynn, the past three months, have returned to their home at Dallas.

Col. C. W. Bush and his good wife leave next week for California. They will go overland in their auto and expect to be absent several months, spending the winter in the Golden State.

Work on the bridge across Bandera Creek on the San Antonio road was completed this week. Commissioner Jim Holt and his crew have put in a structure that will probably stay there in spite of high water. The foundation is solid.

James Cox has purchased a fine piano and installed it in the open house.

Mrs. Amanda Riley and children, Carrie, Ida Mae and Henry are here from Port Arthur on a visit to relatives and old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Mitchell, infant daughter, Mrs. Richard Richter and sister, Miss Irene Richter, of San Antonio, were Bandera Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Ida Alsup at Cedar Crest.

Mrs. Ruby Barrett of Del Rio, Mrs. Leah Matthews of Beaumont, M. H. Longford of Kenedy, and George Langford of Dallas, all came in to attend the funeral of their brother, Albin P. Langford, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Freeman, accompanied by Warren Hunter and Warren Stallard, went to San Antonio Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Freeman and their daughter, Mrs. Alta Stanard and children will in a few days return to their homes at Ozona and Pampa, respectively.

R. E. Wills and daughter, Miss Stella Mae, of Tarpley, went to Coryell county this week to take charge of the farm of Mrs. Billson and go to accept a school in that county. Rev. Canafax has been pastor of the Medina Methodist church the past two years and also taught the Rocky Creek school last term.

The New Era editor accompanied by Mrs. Lee Thollman and Marvin Hunter, Jr., went out to the Hoppe ranch above Medina one Thursday and viewed the country. We had a fine time fishing, hunting and swimming. That is a beautiful region with many delightful camping places.

J. A. Hoffman, who is the owner of the Medina Record, 12 miles south of Medina, will locate in the Sunday Sentinel-Light building, Sunday, September 2, at 9:00 a. m. The second publication of this ad on Friday, September 7, at 9:00 a. m. but the second publication will be for the second publication. See announcement in this issue.

The New Era will be out Wednesday of next week, instead of Thursday, on account of the Labor Day holiday coming on Monday. Correspondents will please govern themselves accordingly. Items being sent in for publication in the New Era will be shown some and will be duly advertised. The picture to be shown tomorrow night is "Hurricane Gal," featuring Dorothy Phillips.

Mrs. C. V. Billings and daughter Miss Ellen, came on from San Antonio Tuesday to see Mrs. Billson who has been at the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Nichols, the past month. Grandma Nichols has been critically ill and is still in a serious condition but some improvement is noticeable and it is hoped she will soon recover. Miss Ellen holds a good position in San Antonio and came home for a week's rest.

Lee Mansfield announces that on Sept. 1, his store will be converted into a cash and carry establishment. It will be operated on a strictly cash basis, the delivery system now in effect will be discontinued. The cash and carry system has been successfully carried out in many towns and Mr. Mansfield will be the first to inaugurate it here. The reduction of expenses by this plan will mean great savings to his customers on their groceries.

Rev. I. V. Garison dropped in to see us Monday and advanced his subscription figures. He has just closed a good meeting at the Riverside Baptist church on West Prong and reports four professions with two additions to the church. Rev. Garison is attending school at Seminary Hill, Fort Worth, and says he will be there the next two years. He is a Bandera county boy, and is making good in the field to which he has been called.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Custer of London, accompanied by their son, Henry Custer and his little son of Kateney, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Bush and family of Laxson Creek recently. Mrs. Custer is the eldest sister of Mrs. Bush. They lived in Bandera and Kerr counties many years before moving to London. All of their relatives and friends were glad to see them once more. While here they also visited Mrs. Custer's brother, J. C. Witt and family at San Antonio, and on their way back to Bandera they visited old home place and friends on Pipe Creek. They started home last Saturday, going by way of Center Point, where they visited relatives and friends.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA and DANGER

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines, has always been under a cloud of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

Whereas, on the 3rd day of July, 1923, R. D. McCrum, the payee named in the hereinafter described note and the beneficiary named in the hereinafter described deed of trust, did appoint the undersigned by an instrument in writing of that date substitute trustee in a certain deed of trust, said deed of trust being recorded in Vol. 7 on pages 633 and 634, Deed of Trust Records of said Bandera County, Texas, said deed of trust having been executed and delivered to E. B. Powell, trustee, on the 27th day of January, 1922, by Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen, for better securing the payment of certain promissory notes in the principal sum of $640.00, said note being fully described in said deed of trust, said note being payable to the order of R. D. McCrum at San Antonio, Texas, being of even date with said deed of trust, bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum from date, said maturity providing that the accrued unpaid principal and interest should bear ten per cent per annum interest from date of maturity until paid, the interest on said note being payable semi-annually, the principal sum of said note being payable eighteen months after date, and said note further providing that in event of the failure to pay any installment of principal or interest thereon when the same became due or failure to pay taxes or insurance premiums as provided in said deed of trust, or in event of failure to pay any installment of principal or interest on the date of any of the payments of taxes or insurance premiums, the whole of said principal sum and interest then due to be at once due and payable without notice, and placed in the hands of an attorney for collection; and,

Whereas, the said R. D. McCrum is the holder and owner of said note and deed of trust, and Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen have wholly failed to pay any interest whatsoever on said note, and have failed to pay any of the installments of interest here before due and payable thereon according to tenor and delivery to said R. D. McCrum, and said R. D. McCrum has heretofore elected to exercise the option in said note provided and has heretofore declared the entire principal sum thereof due and payable on account of failure of the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen to pay the interest in said note provided as and when due, and did heretofore and on or about March 1st, 1923, place said note in the hands of Davis & Wright, his attorneys, for collection, and did at such time promise and agree to pay to them the attorney's fees specified in said note, as above shown, same being the usual and customary fees, and reasonable in amount, and said attorneys did immediately thereafter make demand upon said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen for payment of said note, and the said Mrs. Ida E. Knowlton and C. W. Allen have heretofore been notified in writing of all of the foregoing, and there is now due on said note the principal sum of $640.00, interest in the sum of $67.18, and attorney's fees in the sum of $72.74, making the aggregate amount due $800.22, and,

Whereas, the undersigned has been requested by said R. D. To Begin Drilling Soon

It is expected that the Humble Oil Refining Co. will soon begin drilling for oil in the Vanderpool region, on the acreage which was recently blocked up for that purpose. The location will probably be made in a few days, if it has not already been made. The fact that this company is a branch of the Standard Oil Company leads us to believe that no half way operations will be undertaken but that thorough development will be made. In fact the contract on file in the county clerk's office makes such development of the field obligatory if any oil is found in the first well drilled.

BANDERA IS BOASTFUL

Pertinent Predictions that Prosperity Will Prevail in this Province

Old Bandera county has no cause for complaining about hard times. Of course there is a tightness in money matters that prevails everywhere just at this time but, everything considered, this county is in pretty good shape. Our farmers made enough feed stuff to do them through the winter, good rains have fallen to insure a pasturage for their stock, the sale of wool and mohair has been retarded but there is good prospect that the wool and mohair which has been consigned to Boston will bring a fair price; the hog and hominy crop is indeed promising while spareribs, backbone and ham gravy is sprouting. Taken all around, Bandera county has much to be thankful for. The grass hoppers let us alone this year. Somebody said the hoppers could not navigate the rough roads to get here. But we are all rejoicing that conditions are as prosperous and are hopeful that they will be still better next year, and thus it will be. Just wait and see—and talk on for Bandera!

RELATIONS RESUMED

Mexico's Recognition Means Much Prosperity to U. S. Mercantile Interests.

Diplomatic relations between the United States and Mexico were resumed Friday and the breach existing for more than 3 years between the two governments is healed.

The action of the American government is expected by officials here to be followed soon by recognition of the Obregon government by Great Britain, France, Belgium and Cuba, thus restoring Mexico to its former position in the family of nations.

The State Department, through a prearrangement with Mexico City officials, announced the accord of the two governments for President Coolidge.

The Old Folks Ball

Last Friday night James Cox gave the old folks a grand ball at his opera house, and report come to us that it was a most enjoyable affair. John Rose was caller for the sets and somebody said Tom Gray sprained both ankles dancing. There was old time fiddling and old time dancing and the old folks there had a fine old time.

WHY NOT BE INDEPENDENT?

Abraham Lincoln is one of the most outstanding examples of what a man may make of himself if his desire to succeed is great enough. It is within the power of any person who earns to have financial independence—in time. One doesn't need to be so much schooled—to save as he needs to teach himself how to spend. It is seems so easy to treat one's self to that temporary, tingling exhilaration of spending five dollars for something he thinks he wants, than to feel that permanent, solid feeling of independence that comes with its denial and saving that five spot. Future comfort and prosperity will live and grow in the savings account if you start now.

COMMISSIONERS' COURT

Concludes to Cancel County-Cattle Dipping, to Curtail Expense

The county commissioners' in special session last Saturday voted to suspend dipping operations in this county. This action was taken by reason of the public in general, after considerable complaint all over the county. Just what effect it is going to have remains to be seen. The suspension will come as a result of the following order, which cuts off pay for inspectors and allows no payment for dip after September 12:

Motion made and seconded that Bandera county will not pay for any more dip, or pay any more inspectors' bills after September 12, 1923. Carried.

Come to Bandera!

There's a road that winds over hill and glade where the meadow and woodland are, it is checkered with fleeting sun and shade and it's calling me from afar. It is calling me out from the wear of men, from the grime of the city's streets; calling me back to Nature's arms again, where her great heart throbs and beats!" Come along with the endless caravan on the road as it winds and twists; come into the realm of the vacation clan who are wet with the morning mists. They are burnt by the heat of the midday sun, they are kissed by the breeze at night, as they go on a journey full of fun, with the gleam of the road in their eyes. Oh, I long to go from the stifling town on the road that is calling me, through the yellow fields and hillsides brown, so I crank my car with glee. Then I buy more gas and I oil the wheels that can make the flivver run, for I know the lure of a wanderer feels and I yearn for the wind and the sun. I am athirst for the shade of the forest dim, for the harvest's golden gleam, for a glimpse of the far horizon's rim, for the song of the mountain stream. I would turn to the simple life again, to the ways of the early man, I would thrill to the message of wood and stream, with the rambling caravan! Oh, the lure of the road is sweet and strong, and I crank my car with joy, for I'm on my way to Bandera land, to pleasure without alloy.

OUR CHOICE.

For President of the United States on any ticket:

HENRY FORD

Talk on for Bandera. Aren't you proud that you have lived here all these years? If this town has not progressed or has been at a standstill all of the years you have lived here, who is to blame for it? Were you depending on the other fellow to build for your benefit? He is not going to do it, but he will help you build if you are a builder.

Next week schools in various parts of the county will open for the fall term. Naturally we are all interested in the success of our county's schools, and every citizen should resolve at the outset to do his best to help make this term the best ever. Many of us are too yoked content to leave school affairs to the teachers and to the local boards, when, in truth, the teachers and trustees could accomplish so much more if they knew they had the co-operation and good-will of the citizens of the community.

The dove season opened September 1. In another two months the deer and turkey season will open. And along will come the fellows from the city with their long range guns, and Bandera county stockmen and farmers will begin to complain of range shot. The word has gone out that these old hills are full of game, (which is not true) and the sportsmen will flock in here from all points. Pass 'em on.

Some people will kick at anything. The other day a fellow was heard objecting to the concrete culvert that is being put in at the corner of Main Street and Cedar Avenue because the work was obstructing traffic at that point. Commissioner Jim Holt and his crew is doing an excellent piece of work there by putting in a storm sewer that will carry off the flood waters which have heretofore already damaged the street by washing gullies and making chug holes on Main Street where it goes down hill.

The Boerne fair closed Monday after a three days' run. It is said to have been the best fair ever held there in the eighteen years that that town has maintained a fair. If Kendall county can hold a fair every year for eighteen years, Bandera county can do likewise. But will we?

Frontier Times is to make its appearance in a few weeks. It will be a monthly magazine of 32 pages, devoted to frontier history, border tragedy and pioneer achievement. The subscription price will be $1.50 per year, or 15c per copy. It will be full of thrills and will interest you. Printed at the New Era office.

In 1869 we started in business in a small way. Our business has increased with leaps and bounds and we are now probably the largest retail store in Texas. Nearly 50 years without a failure.

"There is a Reason"

The action of the county commissioners in suspending dipping operations in this county comes as a result of widespread dissatisfaction of citizens over the cattle fever with results that are being obtained by the regulations. It remains to be seen what effect the suspension will have on the removal of stock from this county. Now that Mexico and the United States have resumed relations the counties of southwest Texas may be able to ship cattle to that republic free of tick-infested regions. The information granted the Cotulla last week concerning the State Livestock Sanitary Board from enforcing dipping regulations, will, if made permanent, put an end to the strict and unreasonable enforcement of the dipping law, and when a shipper can show clean stuff the sanitary board will have to permit shipping. The outcome will be watched with interest.

Donations to the monument fund continue to slowly come in. Bandera county citizens are going to erect a monument to the Bandera county boys who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War. Are you going to help erect this monument?

A town and community is just what the citizens there make it. If one class is arrayed against another class and there are petty jealousies and rivalry in that community very little can be accomplished by either faction. It takes collective effort to build and make a progressive town—not pulling against each other. The example of the two donkeys affords a good illustration. Two donkeys got together were coming down the road one day and they reached a place where good grass grew in patches on each side of the road. The donkey on the right saw the grass on his side and started to go over and get it, but about that time the donkey on the left saw a fine patch of grass on his side of the road and started over there, and after a tug of war started, each donkey doing his best to block the other fellow's effort to reach grass. They pulled and they tugged against each other until they were exhausted, and they had to stop to rest. While resting the donkey on the left saw the patch of grass on the right and started over there, and the other donkey went along with him. They ate the grass on that side of the road, and then went over and cropped the grass on the left side of the road, and both were filled. They had been pulling against each other all day and neither donkey knew what for. People are sometimes like donkeys. They lose the whole lot by pulling against each other, when, on the other hand, if they pulled together it would be for mutual profit.

The New Era editor spent a very pleasant couple of hours with Jeff McAteer of the Comfort News last Friday. Col. McAteer has just returned from a vacation trip to New York where he spent a couple of months with old friends and associates.

The Hondo fair opens today and will continue over Saturday. Three big days in our neighboring city. A big crowd is in attendance and quite a delegation will go from Bandera.

It is with a feeling of pride that we observe that Bandera county sheep and goats take first and second prizes at fairs in our neighboring counties. Bandera county sheep and goat men raise good stuff that will compare with any animals anywhere.

The first issue of Frontier Times, for October, which is to appear about the 15th of the month, will contain a number of complete stories bearing on pioneer history. Outline is made up so far shows the following articles that will appear: A Story of Jack Hays, "the Famous Texas Ranger; The Trail of Blood Along the Texas Indians; The Hunt for the Bowie Mine in Mexico; Life Story of Quanah Parker; The Cry of the Death Bird; Belief in the Madstone. These stories are all written in pleasing style and are complete in the first issue of Frontier Times.

This thirty-two page magazine will be full of just such matter. It is being printed at the New Era office.

There's a few men around this town who have so much money to loan out that they will truly fully loan it to anybody—even to a strange chap that comes in and asks to be loaned school. The reason of this seeming generosity is that they have absolutely no use for money and think that is the best way to get rid of it. The editor of this great journal pleads guilty with the rest of them.

Wheel we can't boost Bandera and her resources we are going to go down to Poteet for our health. Maybe if all of us who live here from day to day and don't observe the wonderful climate we have, could go down there and get our system full of Bandera and chills for a season, we would be able to appreciate Bandera the more.

There is going to be a meeting at the Cox Opera House next Monday night that will be of interest to every man, woman and child in Bandera county. You may think that you are interested, but you know you are. for questions that effect the very life of our community will come up for discussion, and if you are not there to voice your sentiments then you will have no one to blame if the community goes to the bow-wows. You'd betted be there.

Old Bandera county is all right. It is a fact that a man with energy can make a living here on 160 acres, while out in Texas he would starve to death on four sections.

We find a number of expired subscriptions on our list. We don't want to lose any of them, but if you fail to give us your paper next week, better investigate the information pertaining to state affairs at that time. We note in the list of county officers you are, officers were mentioned as follows: Chief Justice, O. B. Miles; District Clerk, A. Klappenbach; County Clerk, P. D. Rayner; County Tax Assessor and Collector, E. Oborski; Sheriff, D. Rugh; Surveyor, Thos. Montague. At that time the Civil War was in progress, and Bandera was out on the frontier and had a full line of officers and captains of frontier companies are given, in which appears the name of Chas. de Montel of Medina county as Captain of Company D.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA and DANGER

Medical Virtues Retained and Improved —Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and freed from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

SOME VIEWS BY NEPHARIOUS CUSTOM.

The Burgesville Philosopher Writes the New Era Another Letter.

Mistur Editor New Error:

I been thinkin for some time I would write you a letter, seeing as how you published my last one. But there'sin much news happening in this region that would be likely to interest your readers, so I will konfine my remarks to my personal reflections. Thar be so many sujecks that come up to claim my attenshun that I don't know which one to tackle first. We is living in a fast moving age, and the devil only knows whar we are going. Automobeels and arrowplanes, bobbed hair and britches, bootleg booze and bathing beauties, cussing females and poodle dogs, childless homes and rescue homes, divorce courts and emergency hospitals, all of these things combine to keep us guessing whar we're going. Looks to me like the end of the world is almost here, and I think everybody ought to pay their subskription to the New Error and be sartain of a golden harp and a pair of gilded wings when the end comes. Cynthia Ann says she's plum disgusted since she saw that little girl at the fair with britches on, but since our neighbor old Granny Gossip come over and told her that when she was down to Bandera last summer she saw the boys and girls in swimmin' together with bathing suits that weren't calculated to hide anything but their modesty, Cynthia Ann says she wished the river would dry up and blow away. I tell her I didn't believe what old Granny Gossip said about them bathing suits, and that I was going to go over to Bandera and see for myself if it was so. But Cynthia Ann said I had no business looking at such doings, and would not let me go. And old Granny Gossip said also that she heard that the women in the towns nowadays can cuss just like the men used to. Now that's sumthing to cum off, ain't it? A cussin' woman! I have always been taught that a woman is the noblest work of God. Women are the mothers of men, the light of the home and a companion of the angels, and when our women so far sink as to go to cussin' I see danger, danger of going to the bow wows. Man is naturally a depraved critter, but woman is the hope and salvation of the race, and when she sinks to low levels there is no hope for man. But I've got just enough gumption to believe that there are lots of good women in this old world yet and they don't cuss, and they will hold the old Ship of Morality in the channel and ride safely to port. Cynthia Ann says its the fads and fancies of society that is doing all the devil's work and the people are only letting such go on, thinking it is all right. Automobeels are helping the thing along. The boys and girls go out for a joy ride after the mantle of darkness has wrapped itself about the day's beautiful form, and maybe they won't get back until the glad rays of the sun light the eastern hills. Out all night having fun! Why don't they go out in the daytime to have their fun? A long time ago the young folks used to buggy ride. The boy that took a girl out for a buggy ride and kept her out all night was likely to face a shot gun when he brought her home. I think we need some more of those old muzzle-loading shot gun plays. But I see I have tackled too big a subjeck to handle in this letter so I will rite again.

Human Hearts

See this wonderful picture at the Bandera Theater tomorrow night. The one big story the whole world loves. The story of stories—playing upon the heart-strings with its throbbing poignant drama, replacin gwith tender smiles the tears it will bring as its gentle homely humor sinks deeper and deeper into your heart. It is a story of home—of a wonderful, beautiful love—of nation and humor—of a wife who was an outcast—of a son who suffered because of his love for the one woman. A story for you, for your children, for your father and mother, for the whole world. Don't miss it.

A Correction.

FILM SHOWS BIG GAME IN JUNGLE HOME

Universal Picture Coming Gives New Light on King of Beasts.

The showing of Universal's picture, "Hunting Big Game in Africa," at the Bandera Theater, affords an opportunity to see one of the most remarkable set of jungle pictures ever made. This general picture was made by H. A. Snow. The animals that he presents in this Nature movie corrects a whole lot of popular misconceptions embodied in conventional stock phrases. Already the king of beasts, the wise elephant, the silly simian, the patient camel, and the gentle antelope are in the mental discard of those who have looked at "Hunting Big Game."

The lion derives his swelling title from Aesop's Fables and the classic tradition that crowned him king in north Africa. Mr. Snow enthrisened Leo the "king of sneaks" because the great cat is a noctural slinker and pouncer, runs unless cornered; is a killer, yes, but never meets foes in stand-up fight.
